REACTIONARY INVESTMENTS.

A communication in the last Outlook, concerning the collapse of the Co-operative Supply company, opens the way for a sermon on patronizing home industries. The only trouble is that no one can be found to listen to such a sermon seriously, so there is very little use in delivering it. But it is evident that the basic idea in taking stock in such get-rich-quick concerns is founded on the desire to get something for as little as possible, even though the reaction costs more than the investment.

For years it has been preached that the people of a community should patronize home industries first. Sometimes it costs a little extra to do this, yet that little is money well spent unless there is extortion. There will be returns in some kind if we spend our money at home, for much of it will come back in other forms. We are simply helping each other, and as we create more wealth we will all share it in proportion to our earning capacity and power to conserve it.

Those who have had to pay so dearly for their experience in the Co-operative company were first killing their own business men off and then committing suicide—figuratively speaking—for by diverting trade they would injure every business interest involved in their own communities and then suffer themselves in the languishing conditions they would help bring about. They were not far sighted enough to see the conditions they were to bring about any more than they were to see the danger of playing at another man's game.

The world is getting twenty-four hours older every day but some people never grow wiser. A few who are shrewd are always able to find victims and it is said that a sucker is born every minute. So, while there is no hope that the world will grow wiser, or the bunko men any fewer or the sucker crop any smaller, let us unite in patronizing home industries first before we bite at the alluring bait of big profits by patronizing the schemes of promoters in some other place who have no interest in us or our affairs except the amount of money they can get away from us.

CO-OPERATIVE ADVERTISING.

Corvallis is now doing what Gresham did last winter—having bargain sales days. The merchants of East Portland are doing the same thing in a slightly different way with a combination of advertisers. McMinnville is thinking of doing the same thing and Oregon City is making an effort to do likewise. The idea at Corvallis and in East Portland takes the shape of a uniform space for each business house, all grouped on one page and is called "Spring Opening." No two of them advertise the same article on the same date but all are bargains. The McMinnville Register, in speaking of the idea, says: "The business men need to make such an appeal to every buyer in the county at this time. It will pay you to forget your competitor for a week or month and reach out for trade that is going elsewhere."

It is a plan of publicity which is bound to get results for every merchant represented because it will bring new customers to their store. It is a cheap and effective way to draw business.

Next Friday's issue of the Oregon City Courier will be wholly the work of women of the town who are to do everything except the presswork. The editor says that it is going to show brains and that he is just a bit nervous as to how the following few editions will look like in comparison.

W. J. Bryan, secretary of State, is in California, conferring with Governor Johnson and the legislature concerning the proposed Japanese exclusion law. The matter is one that is becoming international and there are many partisans on both sides of the question.

Portland's "Big Sisterhood" invites the co-operation of all people for the protection of girls coming to the city. A note to the "Big Sisterhood" will insure assistance and care of an institution that has been organized to extend help to girls and women who may need it.

Where is Gresham's baseball team? The game is going to wake up after awhile but all the other towns will get the Sunday crowds. And while we think of it: what has become of that crossroads league spoken of a few weeks ago?

The Beavers are still in the cellar and the steps have been taken away.

Fairview

FAIRVIEW, April 29, 1913—Supervisor Christensen has a force of men and teams putting on crushed rock on the Sandy road commencing at the No. 3 schoolhouse at the point where Supervisor McKay finished up last year. The graveling will be continued west to the city limits so it is stated.

Mrs. F. D. Axtell, who was visiting over in Washington county, had to cut her visit short as she became poisoned with poison oak and came home for treatment and is now getting along nicely.

Lloyd Axtell and Mr. Horton of Rockwood left last Thursday for Ocean Park where they will work this summer on an apartment house being erected by F. D. Axtell for William Ellison.

Willard Cook, Clint and Peter Robbins of Rockwood will leave in the near future for Curry county where they have secured work for the summer and no doubt will locate on a homestead as it is reported that there is some nice land there subject to entry. They will drive down and enjoy an outing on the road.

Two very successful trips by J. P. Province's auto was made over the rural route from this office Friday and Saturday. The carrier is now negotiating for an auto for the summer that his team can enjoy a well earned rest.

Walker Quesinberry of Rockwood is never following but is always leading. He has installed in his shop now a six-horse power Stover engine with plow shear grinder and a saw for wood work.

Carol Heslin, who received a very severe sprain of the ankle several weeks ago by his horse falling on him is now able to be out with the aid of a crutch, but is far from being well.

Miss Walhstedt of San Diego, Cal., is the guest for a day or two of Mrs. John Palmblad. She may spend some time in Powell Valley.
