Columbia Heights

Mr. Swank, the Portland potato merchant, was here at the Heights and vicinity last week and purchased as much as twenty carloads of potatoes, the price offered was 25 cents per hundred. The fruits of our labors from 1912, and is indeed a very small compensation, but we have learned, that small crumbs are also bread, and are thankful to the Lord that no worse calamity has reached us. We are still pegging away with better hopes in view for the future. While it will take careful management to steer clear, this season, for many of the ranches. I am glad to say that we have the experience that money does not make happiness. We have something here that is better than grand opera, moving pictures, theaters, etc. Nothing in the world can compare with the great panoramic view, of the famous Columbia which is before us every day without charges and further more, what can be more delightful than to fill your lungs with this pure fresh mountain air, and also at this time the fragrance from the blooming trees in the orchard? I shall conclude in saying, "we are happy we are here."

Next Thursday the fishing season opens up, and all of the fishermen along the river are very busy getting their nets and boats in shape so as to be on hand the opening night. We are wishing them all good luck, and lo! for a genuine chinook salmon.
