HELPING THE UNIVERSITY.

An educational movement has been promoted for the purpose of protecting the educational bills passed at the last session of the legislature. It is fully organized with a list of competent officers and an executive council of fifteen members from different parts of the state. Eugene Brookings, of Portland, is president and is endeavoring to perfect a local branch of the Oregon Citizens Educational League in each city and community.

In speaking of the matter Mr. Brookings said:

"The first important question that confronts us is the proposed referendum upon the educational bills passed at the last session of the legislature. I have noticed a number of articles in various newspapers severely criticizing Mr. Parkerson for starting a referendum upon these measures.

"While we do not agree with him and while we are opposed to his movement, let us not make a personal matter out of it. It has been suggested that we leave him out of this question entirely and we most earnestly urge that the papers of the state in every way refrain from personal attack. Let us dispose of this question wholly upon its merits.

"We feel that we can do this and be successful in the coming contest."

Those interested in this matter should confer with Mr. Brookings, in the Spalding building. The time is short and delays may be fatal. If material assistance cannot be given the idea of disposing of the question upon its merits it is one that everyone can commend.

The Oregon State Immigration office, in Portland, is arranging for a conference with representative Scandinavians of the state with a view to bringing a desirable class of Agricultural settlers here. C. C. Chapman writes that the meeting will be held in the Commercial club building on May 27, at 10 a. m. Invitations have been extended to every Swedish organization in the state as far as known, but if any have been missed they are asked to notify Mr. Chapman at once.

The purpose of this meeting is for the commission to receive the benefit of advice and suggestions to aid it in adopting a foreign immigration policy of a character that will command the confidence and the respect of Swedish Americans now residing in Oregon, and enlist their enthusiastic co-operation.

By applying on or before June 2, 1913, depositors of the Postal Savings System may exchange the whole or a part of their deposits for the United States registered or coupon bonds in denominations of $20, $100, and $500, bearing interest from July 1, 1913, at the rate of 2 1/2 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after one year from the date of issue, both principal and interest payable 20 years from that date in United States gold coin.

Postal savings bonds are exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under State, municipal, or local authority.

A feature of the proposed new charter of Troutdale, which will be voted on next month, is worthy of consideration by all growing towns. It refers to the laying off of new streets and requires all new streets to be in conformity with existing streets.

Practically every city in the Northwest is a zig-zag of straggling streets that begin somewhere and end nowhere. Troutdale is fortunate in that it has had no platted additions to take in since the town was incorporated, and a wise effort is being made to keep all the streets uniform.

Fruit districts of the state might take a tip from Hood River bee keepers, who have asked that orchardists do not spray their trees during the time the blossoms are fully open. This results in killing large numbers of bees, which are the most valuable helpers the orchardists have. Their aid is invaluable in spreading pollen from tree to tree.

The harness race program for the State Fair Sept. 29-Oct. 6, has been completed by the state printer and will be distributed at once. The big features of the fall racing will be the $5,000 Oregon Futurity, October 1, and the $5,000 Lewis and Clark purse the following day.

Molalla has formed a Commercial club and is determined to get on the development map. The way to accomplish big things is to get ready for them.

pure gain. It is less valuable that our pupils have a well rounded knowledge of algebra as a science than that they have the ability to apply what algebra they do know to the life they are living.

So with chemistry, while a knowledge of its principles is important and necessary to its application, yet is it not good chemistry for the farmer's boy to know how to determine whether the paris green he uses in his sprays contains uncombined arsenic enough to kill the foliage of his plants? Or for the girl to know whether the catsup she puts on the table is colored with poisonous coal-tar dyes? Chemistry could be made practical without ceasing to be valuable as chemistry.

Take the subject of Latin as another example. The pupil puts in two or four years of the hardest kind of work, and what is the result? A very superficial knowledge of the Latin language, a few thousand words, found perhaps in modern English, but with no appreciation of the Latin literature worth mentioning. What bearing has it on the life of today? To be sure it has a cultural value—it probably adds a certain fineness to the texture of the mind, but would not some other use of the vast amount of time and energy result in as much culture and greater ability to cope with the environment?

Thus we might indict almost every subject in the curriculum. In our botany we devote a great amount of time to the analysis, classification and preservation of specimens of plants about which our only concern in life after we get out of school is to destroy them and make room for potatoes and kale. Surely the study of how clover and other leguminous plants nitrify the soil would afford more profitable knowledge and be equally good botany.

Perhaps enough has been said to make our viewpoint clear. We need new text-books written in a new spirit, more than we need a change in subjects taught. We should not be content to go on decade after decade teaching what time has proved futile just because we always have done so.

The carrying out of these suggestions would require an entirely new set of text-books in the fields of mathematics and science, and not only so, these new era text-books have not been written yet, and what is more to the point, never will be written until public sentiment demands them. But it is our conviction that public sentiment will demand them as soon as it is made to realize that the trouble with our school system is that that it is wholly unrelated to the actual activities of life, that our texts are written and taught from the point of view of the subject, not that of the pupil. We must find out and teach what the pupil needs, not what the subject offers. This is a revolution we must effect if our schools are to become efficient in training pupils for life's duties.

He was 78 years of age. He was stricken with paralysis at Long Beach where he had made his home for several years, but was brought to Portland for treatment. He was formerly owner of "Walnut Farm," better known to people in this vicinity as "Camp's mountain," on the Powell Valley road about three miles west of Gresham. He is survived by his widow and the following children: George J., and H. L. Camp, of this city; Edward J. Camp, of Oregon City; J. Otis Camp, of New York, and Mrs. Anna Hannan, of Freewater, Ore.
