Banking System Convicted.

There is war and the threat of war in Europe. Mexico is in the throes of a chaos-making revolution. Europe is hoarding gold. Gold is being withdrawn from this country because Europe is willing to pay the price for it. A revision of the tariff is impending and a readjustment of business will be necessary as a consequence. The laws in regard to trusts and big corporations are scheduled for change. Security values are at a low point—lower than in many years. There is much business uncertainty and yet business keeps up. Exports are still breaking records. Domestic commerce shows no sign of halting. With tariff changes at hand, with the uncertainty created by probable laws regulating trusts, with war abroad, with a crop season approaching, what are the prospects for a strain on the banking and credit system next fall? The country's banking system has been convicted of inadequacy. It is a triumph when it approximately meets the fair-weather demands of business. What is to be expected of it when put under the strain that seems impending? It cannot be revised too quickly.
