 In spite of the inclement weather a large gathering turned out Saturday evening, when the Pleasant Home baseball club gave their first monthly social. Beyers' orchestra, an added feature, rendered music which is seldom equaled in the valley, music such as larger organizations are constantly bidding for. Refreshments of ice cream, cake, coffee and punch were served, Mesdames G. W. Ingram, F. R. Frost, Matt. Rauw and Ekstrom, officiating in the banquet hall, while Paul Stone and William Ingram served from the booth on the floor. Perfect order was maintained throughout the evening and about fifty couples enjoyed the dancing until a late hour. The boys wish to take this opportunity to thank those who so kindly helped to make this social a success, and state that the same standard of order will prevail at all future dances they are planning to give; that if the present hall becomes too small for use, they will build a hall sufficiently large to handle all those who wish to support the popular pastime.

NEW BOOKS ARE LISTED
 Wide Variety of Subjects In Embraced in Collection Just Received.
 New books just received at the Gresham library are excellent in their wide variety of subjects. Following is the list as reported by the librarian, Miss C. H. Halle:
 "Commercial Raw Materials" by Chas. R. Toothaker, curator of the Philadelphia museums. The book was originally prepared as a work of reference for the schools in Philadelphia in connection with collections of commercial products, charts, maps and photographs illustrating the commercial geography and natural science. It is briefly descriptive of the origin, processes of preparation and uses of the most important commercial materials. The vegetable products, woods, farming materials, animal, insect and mineral products are taken up.
 Frances Jenkins Olcott's "Children's Reading"—The aim of the book is to meet in a simple, practical way the demands of the parents as to the value of books in the child's education; the effect of bad reading; how to interest the children in home reading; what to give the growing boy and girl and where and how to procure the books. Each chapter is followed by a descriptive list of books helpful to parents, to a child's study club or suitable for the children's own reading. Special suggestions are made for parents living in the country.
 William A. Radford's "Detail of Building Construction," is offered with the hope that it will be of great practical use to carpenters, builders, mill workers and architects. The aim has been to make it a complete manual of modern building as applied to carpentry construction, it being made clear and understandable by means of working drawings. Details are given showing the framing and construction of residences of every type. Many valuable details are also included of special interests to the country carpenter and builder; barn framing of all kinds, ice houses, cold storage construction, silo building, etc.
 Lillian Whiting's "The Browning's, their Life and Art," gives us an excellent insight into their characters and writings. The childhood and early life of each is portrayed as well as their married life. Extracts from their letters are interwoven throughout.
 John Barrett's Panama Canal simply endeavors to answer in compact form the majority of questions which are asked by those who wish to visit the canal and by those who simply wish to know more about it and what it means. It has been compiled under the supervision of the director—general of the Pan American union. The maps and numerous illustrations are of great assistance to the reader.
 Joseph's Pennell's pictures of the Panama Canal, giving an explanation of each picture, making it more interesting. These pictures have been printed in both the Century magazine and the illustrated News.
 It would surprise you to know of the great good that is being done by Chamberlain's Tablets, Darius Downey, of Newberg Junction, N.B., writes, "My wife has been using Chamberlain's Tablets and finds them very effective and doing her lots of good."
