

IT PAYS TO GET GOOD PAINT!

Protection and Beauty are the two great objects in painting. Paints that will peel or crack and let in moisture gives poor protection—and is a bad investment. Paint that has cheap colors which fade cannot give beauty—and is a bad investment.

It costs no more to apply "High Standard" than poor paints, and it gives perfect protection and beauty. Lowe Brothers "High Standard" Liquid Paint sets in a close tight coat that gives perfect protection and long wear. Only fadeless colors are used, and you get lasting beauty.

That's why we sell and recommend "High Standard." We know it will give you best results.

Floor Paint

This is a strong, hard-drying paint for floors, boat decks and all places having hard wear, and is very durable. It comes in a variety of colors.

Floor Varnish

There is a difference in varnishes for floor use. Lowe Brothers Durable Floor Varnish is very tough and elastic, does not easily scratch or mar, and resists hard wear and dampness.

Mellotone

Mellotone is the most perfect wall finish. Its soft tints are very beautiful, and absolutely fadeless. It is also washable, does not easily scratch or mar, and lasts much longer than wallpaper or other finishes. More beautiful, more durable more economical in the end. Ask for color cards.

GENERAL GRANT HAD MARVELOUS MEMORY.

General Grant's retentive memory was simply marvelous, more especially to those most closely associated with him from day to day. In the midst of absorbing thought and with apparently unobservant manner his quick ear and eye seemed to hear and notice everything, and two weeks or months later the slightest details had not escaped his attention or memory. This power was unmistakably demonstrated in a game of whist with his guest, Major General Doyle of the British army, between Baltimore and Fortress Monroe. Two staff officers completed the players. With General Doyle at his right it was simply amazing to notice Grant's ability to discover strategic points. He never failed to remember every card that had fallen, whence it came and who was to deliver to him all remaining, which he scooped in as a matter of course, although he never seemed in the least absorbed in the game. He was indeed an enigmatic composition in this as well as in other respects. -National Magazine.

THE REGIMENTAL COLORS.

How a Tot Saved In Battle Led the Regiment Back to Town.

At the bombardment of Fredericksburg, Va., during the civil war a Confederate soldier was taking sight for a shot at an enemy across the street. Just as his fingers trembled on the trigger a little three-year-old, fair haired baby girl toddled out of an alley, accompanied by a big Newfoundland dog, and gave chase to a shell that was rolling lazily down the pavement.

The soldier's hand dropped from the trigger. There was the baby, amid the torrent of shot and shell, and on came the enemy. A moment and he had grounded his gun, dashed out into the storm, swept his right arm around the child, gained cover again and, with the baby clasped to his breast and the musket trailed in his left hand, was trotting after the boys up to Marye's heights.

Behind that historic stone wall all those hours and days of terror that baby was tenderly cared for. Our boys secured the countryside for milk and conjured up their best skill to prepare dainty viands for her little ladyship.

When the struggle was over and the enemy had withdrawn the Twenty-first Mississippi, having held the post of danger in the rear, was assigned to the post of honor in the van and led the column. There was a long halt, the brigade and regimental staff hurrying to and fro. The regimental colors could not be found.

Buck Dersman stood about the middle of the regiment, baby in arms. Suddenly he sprang to the front, swung her aloft above his head, her little garments fluttering like the folds of a banner, and shouted, "Forward, Twenty-first - here are your colors!" and without further order off started the brigade toward the town. Buck himself describes the last scene in the drama:

"I was holding the baby high, adjacent, with both arms, when above all the racket I heard a woman's scream. The next thing I knew I was covered with calico, and the woman flung on my breast. I caught her before she fell and, laying her down gently, put the baby in her arms."

BRAVEST ACT IN BATTLE.

General Wilder Tells of the Conduct of an Indiana Soldier While Dying.

"The bravest acts in war often go unnoticed. In battle all men who do their duty are brave. But down at Hoovers gap, beyond Chattanooga, I witnessed an act which I regard as the bravest which ever came within my observation."

General John T. Wilder of Knoxville was speaking to a number of Indiana veterans who were looking upon the stalwart form of the vallant brigade commander with admiration. "It was at Hoovers gap," reiterated the general, "and my old regiment, the Seventeenth Indiana, was fighting with the then modern weapons—Spencer rifles. One could fire about eight shots with these where the old rifle, which most of the soldiers were armed with, would fire hardly more than one shot. That made it possible for my brigade to beat Longstreet back when he loomed up through the woods and struck us at Chickamauga on the second day and to do it with comparatively small loss. Those rifles had a screw used in the mechanism, without which the rifle was valueless."

"This soldier of the Seventeenth Indiana regiment had been mortally wounded. Although in death agonies, he deliberately took the screw from his rifle and threw it away where no Confederate could find it. Then he drew his revolver and discharged it at the enemy, falling back lifeless as soon as the shots were speeding toward the enemy."

On the famous field at Chickamauga one of the most impressive of the numerous monuments is to General Wilder's brigade of Indiana and Illinois regiments.
