

Portion of Floral Display at 1912 Fair. This Department should be made a great attraction this year.

Superintendent R. W. Gill, of the Floral department, is working earnestly for a better display this year than ever before. From present indications there is going to be considerable competition as the generous awards for all classes have stimulated exhibitors to prepare for entries that have heretofore been lacking.

The diploma feature takes well in this department, as many of the growers would prefer some such token rather than have a dollar or two in cash.

Mr. Gill wishes it understood that while it is desirable to have a good number of varieties in all entries, the number shall not count against the quality of the blooms, length of stems, taste in arrangement and general perfection of the flowers.

There are prizes for best exhibits in fuchsias, geraniums, ferns, begonias, oleanders, pansies, cactus, heliotrope, palms, flowering asparagus and cannas. These are potted plants. In cut flowers the exhibits will consist of roses, gladiolus, carnations, asters, sweet peas, cosmos, chrysanthemums, salvias, sweet Williams, zinnias, snap-dragons, phlox, verbenas, gold banded lily, delphiniums, poker plant, golden glow and anemone. In addition there are two prizes for best general display of cut flowers.

The dahlia prizes are offered for best displays in seven varieties five to be entered, as follows: cactus, peony, show, decorative, single, pompon and collerette. For best general display of 100 stems of dahlias, any class there will be a first prize of five dollars; second, a commercial order on Gill Bros. Seed Co., for two dollars.

The above picture represents a portion of the floral exhibit of last year in the big pavilion.

EASTMAN KODAK CONTEST WINNERS

A broad smile is seen on two faces of late as the result of the winning of a kodak at W. R. Burke's. In April Mr. Burke started two contests, offering the winner of one a $20.00 Eastman kodak and the other a $6.00 vest pocket kodak.

The first contest was the best picture of any domestic animal, and on the 31st of May Miss Iva Blackburn was awarded the $6.00 kodak. A large number of pictures were entered in the subjects, all being very good, but the judges decided that Miss Blackburn's picture of a cow was superior in detail.

In the other contest, with each purchase of photo supplies there was a letter in the word "Eastman," and when any person had enough of these letters to spell Eastman he would receive a $20.00 Eastman kodak. Wednesday this contest was closed when Claude Smith turned in the full number of letters and received the kodak.

Mr. Burke should be given credit for his interest in the uplift of amateur photography. He has a contest on now.

"THE REXALL STORE"

"Little Alabama" a Great Success.

Gresham was favored by a production of an old southern drama entitled "Little Alabama," last Tuesday night that was as near equal to city stock as the accommodations of a small stage could afford. The stage settings were extra ordinarily magnificent, picturing an old southern plantation. The long lane, shaded by large beachnut trees, with the cotton fields in the distance and the old planter's house veranda in the foregrounds would make a native of Alabama think by mistake he had wandered into a supernatural form of existence and was in reality back in the sunny south.

The plot while it is in a sense sensational, is pretty and fascinating, with just enough southern pluck to give it life, and from the first curtain to the close, it is brim full of humor of the play.

The management has expressed an intention of reproducing this bill on a future date, owing to the small number of people who saw it Tuesday night. If such should be the case, the price would be reduced. "Dr. Jekyle and Mr. Hyde" will perhaps be the next play—one that needs but little comment as everyone has at least heard of it if they have not seen the play or read the book.
