"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

Official paper of the Town of Gresham, Oregon.
Official paper of the Town of Fairview, Oregon.

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the postoffice at Gresham, Oregon, under the act of March 3, 1879.

CASE OF SUFFERING OVERSTATED

The Outlook does not wish to do injustice to anyone. It tries to confirm all reports before they are given publicity but evidently failed to do its whole duty in this respect before expressing an opinion in regard to the care of an elderly lady in a nearby locality who was reported to have a broken leg and to have lain for several months in a helpless condition in the home of her daughter, entirely without medical care.

The Outlook was given to understand that these were the conditions and that the lady referred to was really inviting assistance and relief.

Our motive in calling attention to the circumstances was entirely charitable and for the purpose of painting a lesson which today is too often forgotten,—that of filial love and care. We believe we cannot be too kind, too patient, too thoughtful toward the aged and helpless, especially those of our own household.

In so far as an erroneous impression was conveyed by our editorial it is only right that we should seek to correct the same and relieve those concerned of undue blame.

We are told that a Gresham physician had been called to administer to the lady previous to the visit of the ladies who reported her to be in need of help, and that the broken ankle was then in a plaster cast. The daughter denies intentionally or thoughtlessly in any way neglecting her mother, taking her meals to her regularly, and seldom leaving the house. The mother herself when asked stated that her daughter had given her every reasonable consideration.

RED COATS AND HORNS.

Game Warden Finley proposes to have all hunters wear a red coat so as not to be mistaken for a deer. Mr. Finley seems to have forgotten that the game law as now in force is the best protection that a hunter can have. The new law provides that any buck deer with horns may be killed and that a single hunter may kill only three during the season.

Probably Mr. Finley didn't think about it but it is almost a certainty that a man doesn't wear horns. If he gets shot the shooter was not complying with the law and it would be evident that he was shooting at what he thought was a doe. If the man were killed it would be prima facie evidence that the hunter was violating the game law and he could be punished for both crimes.

Then, too, when a man had bagged three bucks he would be done shooting, so that the chances are now somewhat less that he would shoot a man. Of course there might be some old grudge to settle in that way and the hunter would forego the pleasure of killing a deer or two just to get a pot shot at an enemy but how would he be able to explain the absence of horns on his victim?

A delegation of residents of the East Side met Mayor Albee and City Commissioner Daly and Bigelow yesterday and outlined plans for the establishment of a co-operative market in the city. It was proposed by those at the meeting to open a plant which would sell produce direct to the consumer at cost, eliminating the profit of the middleman. Whatever profits resulted under the plan would revert back to the patrons of the store. The city officials heard the suggestions of the delegation and took the proposals under consideration.

Secretary of Agriculture, David F. Houston, will be in Portland about the time of the Gresham Fair. An effort should be made to get him here provided the dates will correspond.

The school census for this year gives Multnomah county 47,937, which is a gain of 3514 over last year. The gain for the entire state is 7685. All but eight counties show an increase, but the great gain in this county of nearly one half of the total suggests that Multnomah's population is growing nearly as fast as all the rest of the state, combined.

Hay harvest will end with this week but the grain harvest will come close on its heels. Both crops are above the average in this section and will be a source of considerable revenue. Hay balers are at work now putting up the surplus for shipment that could not be stored away for lack of barn room.

The Outlook is in receipt of a booklet "The Outline of Labor Laws in Oregon." A copy will be mailed free to anyone upon request by State Labor Commissioner, O. P. Huff, Salem.

RULES MADE FOR FOREST FIRE PATROL

The Western Forestry and Conservation association representing the patrol organizations of the Pacific Coast, has just been notified by the Secretary of Agriculture that a plan for forecasting hot dry winds conducive to forest fires, formulated jointly by the association, the Forest Service and the Portland office of the Weather Bureau, has been approved and that weather officials are being instructed to co-operate in perfecting a system for reports and forecasts to be issued from Portland and San Francisco.

Most of the disastrous fires on this coast occur when a high-pressure area in Northern British Columbia and Alberta co-incides with a low-pressure area in the California region, producing a violent southerly air current which may however be sharply deflected in different directions by local conditions, exceedingly drying because containing no moisture, and well-known as the summer "east wind," "west wind" or "norther," according to locality. In winter it is the famous "Chinook." It is the chief dread of firefighters, for fires not thoroughly in hand are likely to be fanned beyond control with tremendous rapidity.

It is proposed to have the Weather Bureau co-operate with that of Canada in watching the development of such atmospheric conditions in both countries, so government, state, and private protective agencies may be notified and take precaution to safeguard logging operations, redouble patrol activity, and prevent the firing of slashings. While it is not likely that the service will be perfected this year, arrangements are being made with the Canadian authorities and a full study of the report system necessary has begun.

Reports upon the fire situation at the close of July are that there have been no serious fires in the Pacific Northwest so far, but that the many small ones show the season to have commenced and all protection agencies are recruiting forces to the maximum in the belief that safety due to the wet spring is over. Undergrowth fostered by two wet growing seasons offers the greater hazard when it comes dry and in many regions it has been impossible to remove slashings and like fire-traps by purposeful burning. On the other hand unusual progress has been made in trail and telephone building. Idaho associations have cleaned all slashings and developed their trail, telephone and emergency help systems far in advance of previous years. Montana reports a good many small fires, with lightning and locomotives the chief cause, and that although the Great Northern has done such work voluntarily, the state feels the lack of laws compelling the clearing of rights of way. Oregon has fourteen patrol associations, representing 1500 timber owners, now patrolling over 5,000,000 acres. The state warden in twenty-five counties, besides about 60 men furnished by the government under the Weeks law. The Washington Forest Fire association has its full force of nearly 100 men out, working in close co-operation with the Weeks law and state warden. The British Columbia forest service reports 216 men out, with 60 more to be appointed, and that most fires so far have come from careless land and right of way clearing. The U. S. Forest Service has its full force on in the national forests and is devoting special attention to trail and telephone work.

All agencies emphasize that the danger season is here and urge the utmost precaution with fire from now on by campers, land clearers and loggers. Burning slashings with out permit will be vigorously prosecuted. Some arrests have already been made, one in Oregon being for carelessly firing a hornet's nest.

Eyes tested and glasses fitted.
