CITY CONTROLS THE STREETS

One of the fierce conditions that confronts the people of Gresham is Main street mud. Main street is not a theory, but there is a theory that its condition should be improved. Since there is no one to look after the county roads, which Main street is supposed to be, the mud has become ankle deep and whenever it rains it grows deeper.

There is a ray of hope, however, for the city in self defense will have to get busy unless the county comes to the rescue. This is not likely as the county seems to be disposed to let Gresham take care of her own streets.

It seems likely, too, that the county will shift the burden entirely upon the city hereafter for the reason that not only will Gresham but all other cities will be called upon to do the same thing. Attorney General Crawford has recently rendered an opinion that a county road running through a town automatically becomes a street when the town is incorporated, and the maintenance of the street thereafter devolves on the town.

If the attorney general's opinion is the correct one the city of Gresham has been in big luck for several years, but its luck has changed and the town will have to take up the burden from now on. Main street and Powell street and several others have heretofore been considered county roads and their improvements left to the county court. If they are now to be kept up by the town the improvements should be of a more permanent character. Something in the way of hard surface should be provided, as it will be cheaper in the long run than gravel or macadam.

HALLOWE'EN.

When Hallowe'en gets on your nerves next Friday night and you wonder what's going to happen before morning, just turn over in bed and go to sleep. It won't avail you anything to worry about the front gate—you'll find it a few weeks later over in the woods behind the orchard—and don't worry about the boys because they will all be in their beds before morning and get up just the same as they do every other morning, and look just as innocent as you ever saw them look. They haven't done a thing and will be as much surprised as you are if an old farm wagon is found on top of the schoolhouse, or if a few power poles are looking dizzy from an accumulation of wheelbarrows which are making short circuits of the electric light system.

Pumpkin faces have no terrors now-a-days and the customs of Hallowe'en are changing. The girls have caught the spirit that their grandmothers invoked with apple parings and mirror reflections. They have chained the restless sprites down to duty, and with the countless insignia of the occasion are having their fun in a different way. It is only the same old drama played in different costumes and on a different stage.

A glance in the shop windows reveals the change that has been made in Hallowe'en pastimes. Instead of the superstitious incantations that the day once brought there are now the decorations and the other incidentals that go to make up an evening party filled with fun, frivolity and enjoyment. It is all inspired by the occasion and it is a healthy sign to note that the witches have been banished and that a reasonable idea of the day has changed an evening of miracle seeking into one of sound pleasure.

The boys and girls are getting more together, too, in the celebration of Hallowe'en. Time was when the girls had their seances alone and toyed with the magic art of black witchcraft; but now it is to their credit that they have emerged into a different atmosphere, and the parties are more of a mixture—something akin to a ride on a hay-rack or a dance in a barn loft. Sometimes the gatherings are more dignified in the parlors at home, but the Hallowe'en spirit pervades them all. Only they are more sensible and enjoyable than in the days of yore when the hobgoblins were abroad and everyone was sure that a ghost was ready to spring out from every shadow.

All the same it is a good idea to look out for your front gates and other valuables on Hallowe'en.

The Outlook, along with many citizens, has been anxiously waiting and watching for something to begin to happen on a five-acre tract on the eastern border of the city. In other words, when will that materialize? It might be pertinent to ask, is anyone of those who pledged stock here standing in its way? Have you done your part? If not, it's time to get busy.

Clackamas county will vote on an increase of salary for its county school superintendent next Tuesday. At present he gets $1000 a year. The new law provides for $1600 a year but the cost of one supervisor will be saved, who now gets $1300, which will make a saving of $700 if the law passes.

Take your gates in next Friday and don't forget any wagons or moveable buildings. The bugger man 'll get 'em if you don't watch out. Friday is an unlucky day.

The county survey board recommends the consolidation of the city and county government. Strange. It seems that we have heard that before, somewhere.

Additional Gresham Locals

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Sieret, of Portland, were visitors with Gresham relatives today.

W. E. Radcliff left a few days ago for Shephird's Hot Springs in Washington for treatment for rheumatism. A note to his family here states that he is already much improved.

LOST, on Main street Gresham, a gold watch fob. Finder return to the Outlook. 69

EX-SENATOR BOURNE HAS A NEW IDEA

Jonathan Bourne, Jr., ex-United States senator, in a letter addressed to the people of Oregon, has proposed a law which will require that the circulation of all such petitions must be voluntary on the part of the circulators.

The idea is to remedy the evils resulting from paying petition circulators to obtain names to initiate referendum, recall and nominating petitions.

The proposed law provides a penalty of $100 to $1000, or of one month to one year in jail, for violation of any of its provisions. Ex-Senator Bourne plans to have it placed upon the ballot under the initiative at the next general election, which will be in November, 1914.

In order, however, to put to the test his theory that when a real need for a law exists there will always be volunteer workers in plenty, he says that no persons will be paid for circulating petitions in behalf of the measure, but that all work for it shall be entirely voluntary. He makes the request that persons willing to help communicate with him.

PLANS FOR PARADE IN PORTLAND SATURDAY

Portland is on its final week of the interstate bridge campaign. The committees are completing plans for the celebration Saturday afternoon and evening, which is expected to bring all Multnomah county to the support of the bond issue that is to be voted up Tuesday, Nov. 4.

At a meeting yesterday of members of the bridge campaign committee with Mayor Albee and City Commissioners Daly and Dieck, the city's end of the parade was considered in detail. Municipal Purchasing Agent Wood, Chief of Police Clark and Fire Chief Dowell were appointed a committee on arrangements.

It is proposed to have the city's section representative of all branches of the city's work. Both the police band and the fire band will furnish music and a long line of city automobiles, trucks and fire apparatus will be artistically decorated. Being Saturday all branches of the city's work will be at a standstill, which will enable all the vehicles to take part in the demonstration.

The committee was surprised yesterday to learn that Clackamas county is showing considerable interest in the bridge campaign and that Oregon City will be represented by a float in the parade.

Besides Vancouver, which will send 100 automobiles, southwestern Washington will send representation from Richmond, South Bend, Chehalis, Centralia, Richfield, Castle Rock, Kalama and Lyle.

Portland organizations will be represented by hundreds of floats and automobiles. The Automobile club alone is expected to have more than 500 machines in line. Department stores and other firms will turn out practically all the automobiles they use. The clubs and other organizations which have participated in the campaign will have floats and delegations in automobiles.

It will take fully an hour and a half for the parade to pass any given point. It will cross the Broadway bridge about 2 o'clock and proceed through the principal streets of the city.

Chronic Dyspepsia.

The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia: "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all medicine I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else," says W.
