THE SALE OF GAME.

State Game Warden William L. Finley says, "I have found the sentiment of the sportsmen the state over to be almost unanimous against the sale of game."

Note the word "sportsmen." Mr. Finley is right. He tells us who opposes the sale of game and it is in favor of the sportsmen, against those who do not or cannot do their own hunting.

During the brief season for upland birds just closed, and now during the period allowed for shooting water fowl, it has been impossible for anyone to buy a bit of game and will continue to be so. The "sportsmen" slaughtered the birds last month that had been accumulating during three years of protection, so that there are very few more of them now than there were before. The farmers rushed to the slaughter to prevent the town people from getting them all, and the three years' protection went for naught. Those who had guns and the time to hunt held orgies and feasts while the great majority went without. But it was in compliance with the law.

Now that ducks and geese may be killed for awhile it is worse. Water fowls there are in plenty for the man who owns a lake or for the crowd that has one leased, but the other thousands must do without. No one dares to sell a duck because to do so is "a menace to the game of this state." But it is the law again and it is "for the best interests of sport."

This is a matter that should be taken up by the farmers in the state grange. Better that the game birds should become extinct than that they should be raised, fed and protected by the farmers until they are of age and size to eat, for the sole benefit of a favored few who have been instrumental in securing laws that allow scarcely one tenth of the people to have one.

The matter will come up in the form of a resolution, at the coming session of Pomona grange, asking for a modification of the law so that others than "sportsmen" may have a taste of the game that is being slaughtered for the benefit of a few.

The teachers of Yamhill county spent the last three days of last week at the Oregon Agricultural College, observing methods of instruction, examining the laboratories and museums, and investigating methods of relating the work of the school to the home and business interests of the state.

STUDENTS ISSUE MAGAZINE.

The October number of the Oregon Countryman, a student publication designed to bring the Oregon Agricultural College and the Oregon farmers closer together, has been issued. The departments of agriculture and domestic science and art, which make up the main body of the publication, are written by students who are specialists in their various lines. The Oregon Countryman is of magazine size and style of binding, and the front cover contains an unusually attractive design—"Autumn Greetings," a basket of Oregon apples, red, green and yellow. The subscription price is 50c a year. Sample copy 10c. Address requests for the magazine to The Oregon Countryman, O. A. C., Corvallis, Oregon.

Any kiddie wishing to mail a letter to Santa Claus may do so, according to an order recently issued by the postmaster general. Hereafter during the month of December, Santa Claus will be recognized as a real entity by the postoffice department and letters for him will be received and delivered. Postmaster-general Burleson has issued an order making permanent the custom hitherto employed of turning over to charitable persons or organizations all letters received through the mails from children anxious to confide their desires to the paunchy, bewhiskered little dispenser of toys. Each postmaster has been authorized to dispose of such mail, local to his office in accordance with the order.

Shooting matches have been announced for Troutdale, November 25; Gresham, November 26; Sandy on both of those days, and Pleasant Home yet to hear from. The sport will be of the old-fashioned kind, open to all comers, with turkeys, ducks, geese and chickens for the best shots.

On December 8-13 the Pacific International Livestock Exposition will be held at the Portland Union Stockyards and although the opening date is still distant, breeders from all parts of the United States and Canada are already sending in their fancy stock. Fifteen thousand dollars in cash premiums will be paid out at the close of the show, the largest sum ever offered at an exclusively livestock show on the Pacific coast. Recent winners of Pacific Coast cattle at the National Dairy Show at Chicago have induced breeders of the Middle West to make important entries in competition with Oregon breeders. James J. Hill, who was sponsor for the original show, has been invited to be a guest of the exposition for at least one day.

In connection with the Livestock Exposition, William Tollman, of Baker, Oregon, president of the Oregon Cattle and Horse Breeders' association, announces a meeting of that organization in the assembly room of the Portland Public Library on Thursday evening, December 11, at 8 o'clock.

The Farmers' Week course at the Oregon Agricultural College begins on Monday, December 8, 1913, and the Short Course will extend from January 5 to 30, 1914. As indicated in the advertisement elsewhere, the College has endeavored to make these events of first importance directly to the farmer and indirectly to every other citizen of Oregon. The cost to the state will be considerable, but will be insignificant in proportion to the results if a large attendance is secured.

THE GREAT EXPERIENCE.

A retrospective view of the files of the Outlook reveals that it is the little things that count in the make-up of a paper. The several hundred minor happenings that are chronicled in every issue may not mean much taken separately, but combined they make an array of the events of life in a community which reflects the people and their environments, even as a mirror reflects the objects before it.

It is little things that go to make up the great experience. Are you tired of the little things of life, of existence? Do you long for the greater happenings to the exclusion of the smaller affairs? Isn't it just as interesting to know that every paragraph in our country correspondence is a fact? As you scan the columns of your favorite home paper you see before you the item that Mrs. Jones took the train on Tuesday for Toledo. If you know Mrs. Jones you are just as much interested as you would be to hear that she had been robbed—and much better pleased. It is better news anyway and it is only a part of newspaper work.

Looking down another column you will see that Mrs. Smith was heading for another visit to her mother in Milpitas and you wonder what filial affection prompts the visit.

Perhaps you read that Mr. Brown's big brindle cow is hanging on to the brink of the hereafter. Seems trivial no doubt, but it goes to make the great experience. It shows that what our correspondents don't know about their neighbors are things that really never happened. And what they write about is the literal truth and there is no cleaner nor purer journalism on earth that the humble efforts of the county correspondent in the home paper.

It is in the towns and cities where the newspapers grow that the big things mainly happen. It is there, at least, where they are mostly written about. The editor and the reporter have seen the towns grow, have seen the streets improved, have seen the new city hall built, the railroads pass through and all the other things that go to make up a life of bustle, noise, confusion and progress. They see the trains as they come and go. They have seen many things that it seemed only God should see. They have written up the weddings and mentioned the new arrivals; they write of the burning questions that stir the blood of virile men and women and they fill the news columns with history. It is the great experience.

Sometimes when things are dull and news is scarce it seems that there is nothing to write but the little things; but there is selfishness and greed to consider and when only the little things are left to say it is best to say them to the exclusion of something that will rankle for days to come. What the reporter doesn't write about is often the most interesting news, but if conscientious he will write the little things with the cheerful thought that they are not heart burners. It is another link in the great experience.

We dream of the future as we dream of the past and we have a near future in mind. In a few weeks more we will again publish our holiday anniversary number. We will aim to make it what our other one was last December—only better. To do so we must have the earnest cooperation of our many talented writers who have helped us before.

We need assistance in this great experience from every home where the Outlook is read. The three score or more who send us regular correspondence are requested to garner their ideas in whatever form they choose for us to print and for the others to read, but we would again remind them that it is the little things that go to make up the great experience.

Rural Organizations Theme for Farmers' Week.

A preliminary announcement of Farmers' Week and the Winter Short Course at the Oregon Agricultural College has just been issued from the office of the Registrar. It announces the dates of Farmers' Week December 8-13, 1913, and the Winter Short Course, January 5-31, 1914, and indicates that the key note of Farmers' Week will be rural organizations. In this connection, as special features of Farmers' Week, it promises exhaustive discussions of European conditions viewed by the Professor or Political Economy on his tour of last summer, when he went abroad as one of the Oregon representatives on the national commission. It promises also reports on American co-operative organizations, presented by specially qualified observers.

There are eighteen or twenty main subjects of discussion outlined in the bulletin as leading topics of Farmers' Week, when six full days, from 8 to 5, in addition to the evening, will be given up to this work. Each of the eighteen leading subjects is divided into lecture topics numbering from four to eight or more. Thus,

SUMMONS.

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for the County of Multnomah.

Ida A. Stewart, Plaintiff, vs. Aaron A. Stewart, Defendant.

To Aaron A. Stewart, the above named defendant.

In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled suit and court on or before December 12th, 1913, that being the date fixed by the court for you to appear and answer herein and being six weeks from the date of the first publication of the summons, and if you fail to answer within such time, for want thereof, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief prayed for in her complaint; for a decree of this court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the plaintiff and the defendant; leave to resume her former name of Ida A. Hunter, on the grounds of gross habitual drunkenness, cruel and inhuman treatment and desertion, and for such other and further relief as to the court may seem just and equitable in the premises.

This summons is published pursuant to an order of the Honorable T. J. Cleeton, judge of the above entitled court, made on October 29th, 1913, directing that the same be published once a week for six successive weeks in the Gresham Outlook, a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published at Gresham, Multnomah county, Oregon.

Date of first publication Oct 31, 1913. Date of last publication Dec. 12, 1913.

M. C. KING,
Attorney for Plaintiff.

Declare War on Colds.
A crusade of education which aims "that common colds may become uncommon within the next generation" has been begun by prominent New York physicians. Here is a list of the "don'ts" which the doctors say will prevent the annual visitation of the cold:
"Don't sit in a draughty car."
"Don't sleep in hot rooms."
"Don't avoid fresh air."
"Don't stuff yourself at meal time. Overeating reduces your resistance."
To which we would add—when you take a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible. To accomplish that you will find Chamberlain's Cough Remedy most excellent. Sold by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.

An ad. in the local newspaper is a good investment that all merchants can afford to make.
