FREE!

Band concert and basketball game will be given with a basket social at the Orient grange hall, Saturday night, April 4, 1914, under the auspices of the Pleasant Home brass band.

A basketball game between the fat and lean men of the community will be played, after the baskets are sold, which promises to be one of the most amusing events of the season and a good laugh is anticipated.

The evening's program will be opened and intermingled with excellent band music. All ladies attending are kindly requested to bring baskets. Everybody come and boost the fats and cheer the leans.

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cured.

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. Is it not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle? "About one year ago," says P. H. Beck, of Wakelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used any number of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit." For sale by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.

AT THE PICTURE SHOW

Wednesday and Thursday

"THE FEUDISTS."

Special Feature Comedy, Two Parts

PART ONE.

The Smiths and the Craigs, next door neighbors, are the best of friends. Their oldest children, Jessie and Tom, are in love with each other, while the younger ones always play together. Nellie Smith and Sydney Craig, the youngest in the two families, are great chums although it is through their childish play that the rift is brought about.

Smith buys some chickens and builds a small chicken house in the garden, which is separated from the Craig garden only by a low hedge, through which there is a passage connecting the two. He goes to fetch Craig to show him the chickens and finds him busy planting some seedlings. They have a little argument as to the respective merits of their hobbies, but all ends pleasantly enough, each convinced in his own favor.

War commences, however, when Sydney, who has been invited by Nellie to see the new chickens, manages to let down the wire fence surrounding them. The chickens get out, entering Craig's garden and work havoc among the seedlings. Each blames the other's child and the families cease to recognize one another. A spite fence is erected between the two gardens, entirely separating them, while the parents each forbid their respective children to hold intercourse with their neighbor's "brats."

PART TWO.

Jessie and Tom return from school and college about the same time and are much surprised at seeing the fence. It does not bother them much however, for they get ladders and kiss one another over the garden wall. Their parents catch them at it and warfare is actively renewed, torrents of abuse passing from one side of the fence to the other.

One day, Smith, who is on a ladder looking over the wall and abusing Craig, misses his footing and falls into Craig's garden. Mrs. Smith follows her husband to assist him and a fight at once follows between the two women and the two men, in which their families nobly assist.

Tom sees his opportunity and upsets Craig's beehives, with the result that both the Smiths and Craigs are driven to seek refuge in the barn. Tom locks the door on them and refuses to let them out unless they will consent to his marriage with Jessie.

A slight incident in the barn serves to bring about a reconciliation between the two families and they joyfully agree to Tom's proposal. They emerge beaming and at once set about pulling down the spite fence between them.

"THE HIGH TIDE OF MISFORTUNE."

Being the tenth story of "What Happened to Mary", produced in collaboration with "The Ladies' World."

Mary's uncle and his son, the embezzlers whom she had forced into jail, are released on bail and they immediately get into communication with the villainous Billy Peart from whom Mary has escaped by sliding down a rope. Peart traces her to her hiding place in the Salvation Army mission and she is enticed aboard a schooner where she is held a prisoner by her uncle. They sail away from New York and drop anchor at Martha Vineyard where Mary, driven to desperation, binds and gags the old woman who brings her food and, slipping over the side, makes her escape in a dory.

The Mother's Favorite.

A cough medicine for children should be harmless. It should be pleasant to take. It should be effective. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is all of this and is the mothers' favorite everywhere. For sale by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.
