Few Hens Lay Many Eggs.

Just 1526 eggs in one year is the unofficial record of a pen of seven hens owned by the landscape gardener at the Oregon Agricultural College. The pen is from the best egg strain of the College-bred Barred Rocks. The hens had the run of a small orchard and were kept and fed under ordinary farm conditions. Heavy egg yields were made by them in the fall and early winter months, when eggs were selling at 50 to 60 cents a dozen. Had the year's crop been sold at market prices it was gathered, it would probably have brought about 33 1-3 cents a dozen. The entire crop, more than 127 dozen would have brought about $42.35, which is $6.05 a hen. The average cost of keeping is about $1.45 per hen. This leaves a profit of $4.50 on each hen annually.

Eggs to Be Proud Of.

"Look at these eight eggs balancing those twelve," said a keeper of back lot poultry in Portland to a representative of the Oregon Agricultural College. As he spoke he pointed to an evenly-hung balance with eight large Black Minorca eggs on one side and twelve highly varied specimens on the other. Of course the speaker was a Minorca enthusiast and it is just possible that he did some culling in assembling both lots of eggs; but the Minorca product was remarkably large, white, round and uniform, even for Minorca eggs, though the owner would not agree to that. "There's no finer egg sight in the world," he concluded, "than eggs of these birds, looking like a row of snow-balls, and the sight is prettiest when the eggs are 60 cents a dozen."

Straight At It.

There is no use of our "beating around the bush." We might as well out with it first as last. We want you to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the next time you have a cough or cold. There is no reason so far as we can see why you should not do so. This preparation by its remarkable cures has gained a world wide reputation, and people everywhere speak of it in the highest terms of praise. It is for sale by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.

Broccoli Growing May Become Large Industry.

Broccoli, the extremely hardy variety of cauliflower that grows during most of the winter in certain parts of Oregon, succeeds remarkably well in the Willamette valley. The common varieties of cauliflower are most susceptible to frost than cabbage, but broccoli has kept fresh and good in the open gardens all the past winter. In view of these facts the vegetable gardening section of the Horticultural department at the Agricultural college recommends more careful attention to the culture and marketing of this excellent winter vegetable.

"Good seed is the first requirement," says Professor Bouquet. "Reliability of heading, uniformity, compact curds and adaptability to winter conditions can be secured only by planting good seed. Such seed costs more than the inferior sorts but is really much cheaper. It costs about $1 an ounce.

The varieties recommended for Oregon are Autumn Giant, Large White French, St. Valentine and Mammoth White.

The fields for broccoli must be well drained and uniformly fertilized. The best locations are gentle northern or eastern slopes. Seed may be planted in the field or in a small bed and transplanted. About three times as much seed is required for field planting, but less labor is required so that the expense is about the same either way.

Great care is required in blanching and handling, since discolorations injure and cheapen the product. It is packed in paper lined boxes for distant shipping, quality and uniformity being the prime considerations. With climatic conditions favorable and a market nearer than the southern states have, it is thought that the industry should be greatly enlarged by co-operative marketing.

Cello Canal Searing Completion.

Of great interest and importance to the entire Columbia Basin is the prediction made recently by Major J. J. Morrow, engineer in charge of this district, that river steamers would be passed through the Cello Canal before the first of next January. The past month of March was notable in that more actual progress was made on the canal than in any other single month. From end to end the great ditch is the scene of ceaseless and effective activity. Locks are being constructed, gates installed, the bottom of the canal is being floored with steel bars over which is poured thousands of tons of concrete, the sloping sides are being ripped in one place with reinforced concrete, in another with rubble masonry and in still another with great blocks of lava rock, according to the character of the backing material.

At the head of Five Mile Rapids a little band of men is at work boring holes into the rocky walls of the gorge, carefully examining the material brought up by the drills and carefully recording their observations. These men are the pioneers sent out by the states of Washington and Oregon to determine the feasibility of constructing a great dam across the river at this point for the purpose of installing the most powerful hydro-electric plant west of Niagara Falls. The river is only about 200 feet wide at the head of the rapids, but the depth nearly equals the width.

Funeral of Kenneth Burns.

The funeral of little Kenneth Burns, whose accidental death occurred last Friday morning, was held at Iifff Memorial church last Sunday. A large concourse of sympathizing friends was present. Rev. Thomas Robinson of Fairview preached the sermon and Captain C. O. Branson assisted in the service. "Happy Land" was sung by Miss Gladys Holgate and "Some Happy Day" by Mrs. Ethel Stafford. The interment was in Mt. Scott Park cemetery. The pall bearers were Willie Fritz, Cecil Duke, Carl Ailder and Harry Cooley.

Kenneth was the eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. James Burns. He was five years, ten months and five days old. He had lived all his life in the Melrose community. Besides his parents, there are left to mourn his untimely death, two younger children, John and Margaret and many near relatives.

PUBLIC MARKET ALMOST READY

Farmers all over Eastern Multnomah have been waiting a long time for a public market and their desires are to be gratified, in part at least, by the establishment of one in Albina. It will be somewhat remote for this part of the county but it will be easy of access to the Columbia slough section, and it should be given a thorough test by the farmers over there.

The Albina Business Men's association have taken the initiative in the matter and will open the first public market—temporarily a street market—on April 29, on Knott street between Williams and Rodney avenues. The secretary of the association, M. H. Calif, in speaking of the proposed market, said:

"We have met with hearty support from many farmers and are assured that they will support the market. This market will be a real market, that is, producers only will be allowed to sell, and to the consumers which will be largely the women of the neighborhoods.

"We are organizing the women now into clubs and will thoroughly acquaint them with the facts, that the farmers will come with their produce, and that they will meet the producers at a given day and hour. We have set Wednesday and Saturdays as market days and the hours from 8 a. m. to 11 a. m.

"We will have to depend on the farmers to make the market a success, and we ask them to organize themselves systematically, at least to begin with, so that there would be no doubt about the market being well provisioned at the beginning.

"We expect that your people will work through your grange organization. We want them to appoint committees who will have specific charge of this matter in each grange and will ask them to send us the names of the committee so that we can work together for a public market in Portland."

On the success of this experiment will depend the establishment of others further up town. It has been said that two more should have been provided for, all to open at the same time so as to give the idea a thorough test, but the success of the first one will soon bring more and the farmers should give it all the encouragement possible.
