B. C. Altman will probably lose a fine bay mare, 8 years old, resulting from a broken leg received by being kicked by another horse about a week ago. The best of veterinary skill seems to be unable to save her. She was a fine mare and her loss will be badly felt by Mr. Altman.

A fine life sized portrait of Judge Geo. W. Stapleton has just been finished by our local photographer, Max Schneider. The frame is a beautiful piece of Circasian walnut and the work is first class in every respect and is another example of Mr. Schneider's artistic skill. Of course it is needless to say the subject gave him an inspiration.

Aaron Knighton has been forced to kill the fine horse which he recently bought on account of an accident which disabled it. Mr. Knighton was grading with a scraper, when after dumping, it was accidentally reversed and cut the animal badly. The cutting of the ligaments and the loss of blood made a recovery impossible, hence the horse was dispatched.

 Other men, in a few words and flourishes pretend to say how the finances of the nation should be settled, but their own grocery bills go unpaid.
 All of this sort of stuff is generally far from the point.

FAIR AND SHOW BOTH WANT FUNDS

Committees representing the Land Products Show and the Multnomah County Fair association were appointed yesterday by the presidents of the two organizations to confer with Deputy District Attorney Collier relative to a division of the funds provided by the last legislature for livestock and agricultural displays and fairs.

President Beall, of the Land Products show, appointed C. C. Chapman, R. W. Raymond and A. B. Batam to represent his organization and President Lewis, of the Fair association, named J. J. Johnson, A. F. Miller and H. A. Lewis. The committee will meet for conference at once and report to the commissioners.

Representatives of both organizations appeared before the commissioners yesterday and asked for a portion of the $5000 fund provided by the last legislature. J. J. Johnson, speaking on behalf of the Fair association, contended that the act does not provide that the Land Products show should have any of the fund, but invited the show to consolidate with the fair in making this display.

Mr. Raymond recommended that the $8000 be divided equally between the two organizations, and promised if this was done the merchants of the city would double or treble it to meet the expenses of the exhibition.

A Proposal from the Duke At the Gresham Picture Show WEDNESDAY - THURSDAY

Being the first story of "Who Will Marry Mary?", a sequel to "What Happened to Mary?" Produced in collaboration with "The Ladies' World."

Mary Cuyler (her real name) at her grandfather's death, was left in possession of a fortune of one hundred and twenty-two thousand dollars a year, representing his interest in the Silver State Mine in California.

Upon visiting the office of the Trust Company, Mary is surprised and gratified to receive a visit from Mrs. Reed, wife of the president of the Occidental Trust company and an old friend of her mother. She invites Mary to make her a visit at her country place in Maroneck and Mary accepts.

At the country house Mary meets a brilliant gathering of debutantes and young men. Among the latter are two New York society men, a Scotch nobleman, an Italian duke and Captain Justin Bradford.

The Italian Duke, Leonardo di Ferrara, is in a distinctly impetuous state. Suffering from the insistent demands of indignant money lenders, he looks upon the recently arrived young heiress as a direct answer to his prayers.

Captain Bradford falls in love with Mary at his first sight of her, but as he has nothing to recommend him beyond good looks and a sterling character, he has at first little chance against the Duke's glittering personality and Machiavellian methods.

The Duke succeeds in becoming a hero in Mary's eyes by rescuing her from a fire in the stables, which has been started by a stableman bribed by the unscrupulous nobleman.

A little later, however, Mary is given a true insight into the character of her fond admirer. While she is sailing on the lake with the Duke the motor boat is set on fire by the engine. The Duke seizes the only available life-preserver and jumps overboard leaving Mary to her fate. Bradford, who has been following the course of the motor boat with longing eyes, swims to Mary's rescue.

Afterwards when Mary attempts to find and thank her gallant rescuer, she discovers that he has been ordered to headquarters.—Adv.

HER OCCUPATION.

"Professor," said Miss Skylight, "I want you to suggest a course in life for me. I have thought of journalism."
 "What are your own inclinations?"
 "Oh, my soul yearns and throbs and pulsates with an ambition to give the world a lifework that shall be marvelous in its scope and weirdly entrancing in the vastness of its structural beauty."
 "Woman, you're born to be a milliner."
