Grandma Kesterson has returned from a month's visit with her daughter, Mrs. W. N. Chilcote, of Molalla. Miss Leona Kesterson, of Montavilla, visited over Sunday with her young friends at this place.

The primary election will soon be here and many candidates for office are around getting acquainted with the voters.

Pleasant Valley grange met last Saturday; a very small attendance is reported.

Dr. C. H. Hale is home from an extended business trip to his former home in Idaho.

A meeting will be held at the grange hall Saturday, May 2d, at which speakers from Portland will explain the advantages of a public market which will be opened in Portland, May 16. This is a question that interests both producers and consumers as it enables the producer to get a better price for what he raises and the consumer gets his stuff cheaper, by reason of eliminating the middleman. Everybody is invited to attend the meeting.

Our Live Wires attended the cannery meeting held at Gresham last Monday evening. A large and enthusiastic crowd is reported. A committee was appointed to investigate a proposition that has been put up to the people of Gresham and vicinity. This committee will report at a meeting to be held in Gresham next Monday evening. Everybody is talking cannery. Everybody wants a cannery, and we are going to have one. Come out and hear the report of this committee and if the report is not favorable, we will line up on some other proposition.

Next Sunday, May 3d is Flag day at the church, Rev. Mr. Hoey will deliver a special sermon on good citizenship and patriotism. We trust that there are enough patriotic people in Pleasant Valley who will turn out and fill the little church to its capacity.

Professor Newbill, of Arleta, who has charge of the children's garden feature of the Portland schools, will deliver a lecture on this subject before the Parent-Teachers' association at the schoolhouse Friday evening May 1st.

Miss Laura Moore has been quite ill for several days past and is with friends in Portland. Her many friends hope for her speedy recovery.

Prizes for Flylessness Suggested in Campaign.

Prizes not for the greatest number of flies, but for the greatest degree of flylessness, should be given in Oregon campaigns, according to Dr. Clifton F. Hodge, professor of social biology in the state university. Dr. Hodge is spending time this week in Albany and Astoria advising in fly campaigns.

"It is too early to see what results the numerous campaigns will get, but the work is going ahead with vigor," said Dr. Hodge. "One flytrap in each barnyard, should be the motto of towns where stables are permitted inside the city limits. There is no necessity of having more than that for flies will go as readily into one trap as into a dozen. Each backyard should also have a trap. Extermination of flies should not be made a burdensome matter.

"We learned a lesson from the example of Eugene last year. Eugene was flyless to a great extent until early August. Then the fight was suspended largely and by county fair time the pests were thick again. Eugene this year will keep up the fight right through."

Dr. Schafer, head of the state university Extension division, said: "This is a year of learning how. Absolute flylessness is not likely to be attained during 1914 but many towns will see a great lessening of flies. By August of 1915 there will be communities in Oregon where the insect will be almost a novelty."

State Survey will be Big Help in Marketing.

A survey of industrial and commercial conditions in Oregon is about to be undertaken by the state university. This vast and important work has been assigned to the university by the board of higher curricula, and will be done under the School of Commerce, which will be opened in connection with the state university next September. Harry B. Miller, of Portland, former consul-general to China, will be chairman of a board of nine advisers, composed of prominent Oregon business men, who will make suggestions for this survey.

The purpose of the fruit survey will be similar. Consuls, for example, over all the world will be called upon for data of fruit consumption in their districts; of the sources of that fruit supply; of the methods and cost of handling shipments abroad; of the market possibilities as to both demand and price. A thorough canvass of this kind, covering all the sources of production as well as possible markets, is intended to give the Oregon fruit-raiser his first comprehensive look at the world's fruit situation. The next logical step will be to help him develop these markets where profitable markets are found to exist.

LAFFERTY'S BILL FOR RURAL CREDITS

From speech in congress December 11, 1913.

Now, as a trailer to the Glass-Owen bill there is to be a Rural Credit Bill, a bill to help the farmers. I introduced such a bill, H. R. 8835, on October 11, 1913. Mark my words, this bill is identical with the Glass-Owen bill, except that the Glass-Owen bill provides for loaning treasury notes to the banks at one-half of one per cent interest, upon commercial paper, personal promissory notes, accepted drafts, and so forth, as security, while my bill provides for loaning the same kind of Treasury notes to the farmers upon first mortgages, and at interest four times as high, to wit, 2 per cent.

The farmers are now paying interest amounting to $500,000,000 a year, which is $5 per capita of our population, and this of course is added to the cost of food products and paid by the consumer. My bill would reduce this interest charge from an average of five per cent to two per cent, thereby saving in this one item alone $3.00 per year to each man, woman and child in this country.

No man who is afraid of the money power, would have dared introduce and advocate the bill I am now advocating for Rural Credits.—Paid Adv.

THE MIDDAY MEAL AND HOW TO EAT IT

Gresham, Ore., May 1, 1914.—Editor Outlook:—Allow me to draw attention to three elements that go to make up the midday meal:

Is the meal healthful? Is it nourishing? Is it reasonably economical?

Many of the luncheons served do not possess any of these qualities. However, we are confronted with the problem that what is necessary to the needs of one is not applicable to those of another.

Take for example the professional and laboring men: The former is usually the brain worker—the desk or office man; the latter the one who toils, who taxes the physical and pent up energy.

The difference is obvious. The man who labors needs more food than the man who doesn't.

Take a look with me now in the lunch room at noon. Note the food that the majority are eating. A cup of coffee with a sandwich made from ham and fresh bread, with cake, pie and doughnuts.

Is it any wonder that people suffer from headaches, depression and disordered stomachs? Eating is more abused than anything else and the least attention is given to the trouble it occasions. We suffer from indiscretions of diet constantly, but we fail to attribute our trouble to anything we eat.

Here is a diet for the busy man who can't find time to spend at noon: Two raw eggs with the juice of two oranges. I defy you to beat it. These will furnish you with all that is necessary for a light noon meal.

For those who are engaged in indoor occupations, with little muscular activity, there are several menus that would prove wholesome and healthful.

A bowl of soup, with buttered toast or rolls and some fruit. A cup of custard will find favor and meet most of the requirements of the body. Good, fresh milk and sandwiches made from wholesome, fresh material will be found nutritious and excellent.

The laborer of necessity needs a more substantial diet. However, he should carefully avoid overeating indulgence in too much variety.

A bowl of soup with crackers; a glass of milk followed by meat and vegetables, stale bread and butter terminated, if desired, by desert, will usually satisfy sufficiently. By stale bread I mean bread at least a day old, for anything to my mind that is unhealthful and indigestible is hot, fresh bread.
