THE ROSE FESTIVAL.

Portland was ordained at the beginning to be the rose city and the rose festival was predestined to be the crowning event of June-time. The trade winds and the Japan current were commanded forever to distill the dew and the mists that rose-time might be its heritage and the rose festival its greatest feature of enjoyment.

Although the inception of the carnival came with the first bloom of the rose under the warm air of the southern seas it was not a tangible reality a dozen years ago. Its formative period was centuries; its birth was yesterday, today—perhaps it is a reincarnation. It will grow to something different from anything the world has known before, but it will be beautiful and the perfect growth of an idea that will awaken the soul to a realization of the great genius of the Creator who "works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

Details of the great festival would be superfluous. Its varied features are impressed on everyone because everyone has seen or heard about it all. Its story is not to be told in printed forms, but in rhapsody of the voice as people tell each other the tale of their own experiences or participation. It can never be told entire. It is growing too fast to be measured by words.

President Wilson has gained the victory in the matter of free tolls through the Panama canal. American coastwise vessels will have to pay tolls. The senate vote yesterday was 50 to 35, eleven democrats opposing the president while thirteen republicans voted with him. The bill will now go to the lower house where it will probably become a law.

Manufacturers met at Eugene Thursday night and discussed the vicious features of the workmen's compensation act which they seek to have amended before manufacturing can boom in Oregon.

Farmers and fruit growers generally are failing to get canneries contracts on account of the minimum wage and eight hour law applying to the fruit industry, which is not the case in California.

It is variously estimated that the new boards and commissions proposed at the Eugene Commonwealth conference would cost the taxpayers at least $100,000 a year.

St. Johns public docks that have cost the city $5000 a year to maintain and have been rented to a paper company for $2400 a year, will be sold.

The rose festival will close tonight with the electric parade. It has been a glorious week and the festival has been a success in every particular.

The Oregon and California land grant suit involving 2,300,000 acres has been taken on appeal to the supreme court of the United States.

The steel for the new court house and county jail at The Dalles is being shipped in from St. Louis, when steel plants in Oregon are idle.

Senator Chamberlain was instrumental in securing $4,000,000 in appropriations for the Columbia in the Rivers and Harbors' bill.

Speakers at the Woman's Commonwealth conference advocated raising the age of employment from 16 to 17 years.

At the Union county stock show last week $200,000 worth of fine stock was shown in daily parade.

The Hill railroad will build its industrial tracks up Sullivan's gulch in Portland before July 1st.

The Newberg cannery run on strawberries, employing 100 women.

Seaside has a quarter of a million dollars improvements started.

The fun is all over. Now for business once more.

TUMBLING DOWN.

When the Outlook predicted more than a year ago that the parcel post law would eventually topple over by its own weight there were some scoffers. It was contended that the boast of its advocates, that the government had all the necessary machinery ready at hand, was a vain glorious piece of braggadocho and that it had nothing of the kind except a lot of blue prints of about 42,000 rural routes.

Results are proving the Outlook's contention that rural mail carriers would resign all over the country unless paid adequately for their work. Star route carriers are quitting as fast as their contracts expire, and are increasing their bids to more than three times their former price.

A case in point is over on Curry county, where the bid went up for a 43-mile star route, three trips a week, from $1250 to $4000. The department thinks the latter sum too high and is sending the mail around another route a distance of 425 miles. Those fellows in Washington think they know all about the mail business but they are woefully ignorant on some things that a little home newspaper knows all about. People on newspapers sometimes make a study of certain subjects, but the autocrat of the department never does from the efficiency standpoint.

Extension Work Gets to 150 Towns in a Year.

The rapid change in educational methods in the United States is nowhere illustrated better than in Oregon, where the institutions of higher education are no longer content to dispense knowledge only upon their campuses, but are reaching the state at large through lectures, extension classes and special literature. It is the purpose not only to continue this form of teaching but to broaden and improve it, so that advanced study facilities may be at the disposal of any community in the state.

A summary that shows how far the plan of outside teaching has proceeded in Oregon will soon be issued by the University of Oregon. In the last nine months University teachers have visited 159 Oregon towns, of which number 63 towns have been visited more than once. Eighteen departments have been represented in extension lecturing. The total attendance at lectures has been about 40,000. The number of lectures under auspices of schools has been 144 since January 1, this year; under auspices of granges, 17; under libraries, 14; under parent-teacher associations, 29; under women's clubs, 11; under church social organizations, 6.

Medford has illustrated how state university extension service may be used. Medford during the college year has organized under Prof. F. G. Young, an extension class in sociology; has held one community conference with Dr. Clifton Fremont Hodge and Dr. Bertha Stuart as directors, covering one week; has had a city survey by Don C. Sowers, professor of municipalities and higher accounting; and has asked and been given 11 lectures. This service has been entirely free and is open to any Oregon community.

Getting Closer to the People.

Frank L. Burkholder, general superintendent of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon, is a young man who was promoted from district engineer to his present prominent position. In his recent tour over the lines in Oregon he emphasized the fact that he and his associates in charge of the Southern Pacific properties were anxious to get close to the people and do the things the people most wanted done. He says "had railroad officials felt this way 25 years ago when Vanderbilt uttered his much quoted words, 'the people be damned', much of the unfriendly legislation of which the railroads now complain would never have been enacted. The railroads and other big corporations have themselves to blame for the position the public has taken and for much of the antagonism that exists. While government control is perfectly proper, it has during its experimental stages gone to such an extent that money to be used in construction work is hard to get. Unfriendly legislation and too much regulation has cut down earnings to such a point that it is hard to secure money to make necessary repairs. I believe the tide is slowly turning and that the people, from whom the railroads must get the money to pay the interest on its loans, will in a few years be willing that the railroads make a fair profit to be turned into reasonable dividends and into construction work. It is now time for co-operation. Only in this way can the railroads prosper and bring prosperity to those dependent upon them."

The Cottage Grove cannery has an order for a carload of gooseberries.

The Open Shop Principle.

Samuel Hill, president of the Home Telephone company, in a letter to a Portland newspaper makes some clear statements on the right to labor whether belonging to unions or not. He commends "the editor who dares to stand for the principle he believes to be right." He says "every man is entitled to his own opinion, but the present day and generation have gone so far afield that cowardice is counted wisdom." Speaking for the Home company he says, "It has never asked any man to join or leave any union, to vote any ticket, or to identify himself with any religious organization or withdraw from any such." He says he has studied this question from all sides, and by "this question" he means "the right of any body of men to organize for what they believe to be for their best interest, but I deny the right of any organization to dictate by force or fear to their fellow workers what stand these fellow workers shall take. The boycott is un-American and will never succeed." He says as long as he is president of the company honesty and efficiency will be the only tests applied in the selection of laborers and employees.

Oregon Dairy Records Proportionally High.

The supremacy of Oregon as a dairy state has frequently been asserted by the Dairy department of the Agricultural College and is rapidly being verified by tests and records made in certain parts of the state. The number of cows of any breed in Oregon is relatively small in comparison with the number of cows in the Jersey breed that have made note-worthy records is a very large percentage of the number in the whole country.

Of sixteen Jersey cows in the United States that have produced above 900 pounds of butter in one year, 4 of them, or 25 per cent are in Oregon. Of 30 that have produced to exceed 800 pounds, 6 cows, 20 per cent, are Oregon cows. Of 105 that produced to exceed 7000 pounds of butter within a year, 14, almost 14 per cent, are Oregon cows. While the five cows that have produced 1000 pounds or more of butter during a year's test are outside of Oregon, this state has one cow that fell but 7.1 ounces short of that number.

Although there are more than 60 breeders of pure bred Jerseys in the state not many of them have ever carried on testing. There are but 14 now doing advanced registry work, two having dropped out temporarily. This is a very poor showing, and yet it has proved that Oregon dairy conditions are unequal elsewhere.

Minimum Wage Wrong in Theory.

Editor Harris of the Labor Press went on record at the Eugene Commonwealth conference by saying that the minimum wage is wrong in principle and theory. A California college professor had delivered a paper on the unemployment problem, advocating insurance against nonemployment, when Mr. Harris spoke and is quoted by the Eugene Daily Guard as saying, "The minimum wage is wrong in theory. The minimum wage presumes it possible to fix a living wage of subsistence for one class by another, when no class has any right to declare what the level of existence for another should be." Editor Harris came to Oregon from Washington to take charge of the Labor Press in 1913 and is a member of the Portland Central Labor Council.

The United States is acquiring an unenviable reputation as a consumer of deleterious drugs.—The Portland Oregonian.

The distilleries, breweries and liquor sellers have already gathered from the people many times the value of the plants and the money invested, and if the liquor traffic is permitted to live, will collect many more times from these same people the value of their original investment.—The Portland (Me.) Chickamauga.

The word Chickamauga is of Indian origin. It is said to be a Cherokee name signifying "the river of death." The stream received its name from the accidental drowning of the people of a village by a sudden rise attributed to a cloudburst.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat.

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result eventually in serious illness unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fullness of the stomach or feel dull and stupid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble and constipation have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.
