GRESHAM, MULTNOMAH COUNTY, OREGON TUESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1914

$1.50 PER YEAR

BANDS GET PREMIUMS FOR MUSIC

There will be music in plenty at the Multnomah County Fair this year as the board of directors at yesterday's meeting authorized the payment of $600 in prizes for a band contest, and at least two bands will compete, possibly more.

The prizes offered are to be in sums of $300, $200, and $100. None but amateur bands may enter the contest. The Pleasant Home and Sandy bands are eager to participate and will each have sixteen musicians in uniform, that number being required. At least one other band has signified its desire to enter and there may be others. No entry fee will be charged and the bands are all to be under the direction of the fair board during the entire five days of the fair.

The new machinery hall, the floor of which is being laid, will be fully completed. An additional contract was made with E. T. Jones & Co. yesterday for a permanent roof for the sum of $432 extra.

The removal of the dancing pavilion was authorized. It will be brought out on the Farrow and located along the entrance facing the north. It will have a more ornate front and will be painted in keeping with the other buildings. Its new location is expected to make the Farrow attractions more valuable, besides which it will have an earning capacity considerably greater than ever before.

Work on the three new buildings for which contracts have been let, is going on steadily. The frame for the barns is up and the foundations are ready for the rest room and machinery hall. The rest room is to be arranged in three compartments and will be entered from the old machinery floor which is to be boarded up and partitioned off for the art department and two grange exhibits. A septic tank will be built to receive the drainage.

The 300 bundles of grain now stored in the pavilion are to be used on the outside front of that structure. Some artistic designs will be evolved by a professional decorator.

An effort is being made to have Sandy grange make an exhibit. The whole territory east of Gresham is becoming thoroughly interested in consequence of the coming contest between the two bands of Sandy and Pleasant Home, and the people of those districts will come in crowds to help boost for their favorites.

The grain now growing on the fair grounds is now nearly a foot high. It is to be mowed down and will be allowed to lie on the ground to shelter the young grass which will soon form a soft carpet over the entire surface.

Assurances have been had that the county will send the oil sprinkler out to oil the roads through the grounds so there will be no disagreeable dust during the fair.

Another meeting of the board of directors will be held in a week or so, at which time other matters will be taken up that were left over from yesterday's meeting.

A schooner arrived at Marshfield loaded with skins, tusks and oil of sea lions, a new industry on the Oregon coast.

Congress gave $150,000 for the fish hatching stations on Oregon waters.

The Coast Bridge Co. of Portland got the bridge at Yamhill for one dollar less than the Portland Bridge Co., its closest competitor, $4,499.

The Fremont hotel recently destroyed by fire at Salem will be rebuilt of brick, to cost $20,000.

Representatives of Swift & Co. have been hammering the Oregon cheese industry with importations from Canada and Wisconsin.

The S. P. Co. bridge payrolls on Willamette Pacific will be $25,000 per month.

Clatsop county has 700 men employed on the Columbia Highway.

The Oregon Public Utility commission shows a disposition to allow capital invested in these properties to make a fair return and thus encourage further investments.

FIELDHOUSE -ANDERSON NUPTIALS

A pretty wedding was solemnized in Portland Saturday evening, August 1, at eight o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, when their daughter, Hope Culy Anderson, was united in marriage to Mr. Guy Leslie Fieldhouse. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. D. Bollinger, pastor of Highland Congregational church.

The house was prettily decorated, the color scheme being gold and green. The bridal party stood under a bower of golden rods and ferns.

The bride was dressed in white and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The groom wore the conventional black. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. A. Rahn of Albany.

After the ceremony luncheon was served. The following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fieldhouse and daughter Grace, D. J. Culy Mr. and Mrs. Percy Glese, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fieldhouse and Miss Florence Fieldhouse, of Gresham, Miss Olga Anderson Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miller, of Portland, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rahn of Albany.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts, among them being numerous pieces of silver, cut-glass and china.

Mr. and Mrs. Fieldhouse are highly esteemed Gresham young people. They have lived here from childhood and taken an active part in social and business affairs of the community. Mrs. Fieldhouse is a graduate of the Gresham high school and has taught several years in the primary department of the school. Mr. Fieldhouse has been for a number of years employed in the mercantile business. They will make their home in their new house on Powell street where they will receive the congratulations of a host of friends.

INTERESTING GAME WON BY GRESHAM

Sunday's ball game between the Gresham Athletics and the Garden Home nine was an interesting one and a victory for the Athletics by a score of three to four. The Gresham boys put up a good game, so did the visitors, except that the fielding support was just a trifle below the average. Better playing in the field would probably have cut down the Gresham score and given the victory to the agriculturists.

At the beginning of the eighth inning the score stood four to two. After two of the visitors had cashed in they got two men around as far as second and third and the situation was intensely interesting. But the last man up went out on strikes and the game was over. A two-bagger just then would have put the Garden Home bunch in the lead with Gresham an inning to spare for a tie or a victory. A good crowd saw the game and yelled itself hoarse when the last man went out, giving the game to Gresham by one run.

The Best Medicine in the World.
"My little girl had dysentery very bad. I thought she would die. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured her, and I can truthfully say that I think it is the best medicine in the world," writes Mrs. William Orvis, Clare, Mich. For sale by Gresham Drug Co., and all Dealers.

THE MOUNTAINS ARE A MECCA AND SHRINE FOR INSPIRATIONS

Going to Mt. Hood at this time of the year is an exhilarating sport even if you only go to the foot of it. To reach the top of the peak brings the inspiration that only the summit of a wonderful snow-capped mountain can bring.

It used to be said, in the pioneer days of fifty or more years ago, that the summit of Mt. Hood could never be reached; and the story goes that a reward was offered the man that would plant the American flag there and return. Later, after the mountain had been conquered, it was asserted that the glory of scaling the great peak was reserved for the few exceptional humans whom nature had endowed with strength, daring and unlimited time.

In the days before the automobile the journey there from Portland and back took more than a week. The old Barlow road, with its tortuous windings and the steep grades, is remembered by many. That was when the Sandy was crossed at Revenue's and before the southern route was thought of. Now the splendid roads and the automobile make the trip of only two days' duration and thousands have climbed the mountain, finding it a pleasure and one of the rare experiences of a lifetime.

Gresham is the gateway to Mt. Hood from this side. Each day a fleet of autos is seen wending their way toward the mountains. Two hours to Welches, from Gresham, and one is but twenty miles from the snow line. Rhodendron, then Government Camp, and the last stage through a forest, up a gentle incline, and the last camping place is reached from where the early start is made at daylight for the distant summit.

O. C. Yokum, the former guide, who has climbed Mt. Hood nearly a thousand times, is the nestor of the mountain-climbing guides on the Pacific coast. Years ago, when passing by the mountain as a boy in the pioneer immigrant train, he had seen a vision of the future in store, but in the days that came he was a slave of toil in the metropolis. For years he was known as one of the best photographers of Portland, but the day came when failing health demanded a change and the vision came again. It was the vision of his destiny.

He remembered the little opening by the side of the road which was known as Government Camp from the earliest travel across the Cascades. He located the spot as his homestead, built a comfortable house of logs and there he has lived with his family for thirty years. He came to be a worshiper of Mt. Hood.

Church Social at Rockwood.

A lawn social will be held on the church grounds next Saturday evening, August 8. Ice cream will be served and a good program will be given.

Much correspondence is held over.

Hood. It was his fetish, his inspiration, and up its glassy sides he found the road to fame.

He made his first ascent on July 16, 1883, not as the first one to climb the mountain but one of the first few, and now he has more ascents to his credit than any other person living.

His most able successor and rival for honors as a mountain guide is Elijah Coalman. He lived in Gresham for awhile and was once president of the Multnomah County Fair association. He has been an intrepid and successful guide, and like Mr. Yokum, has gained considerable renown. Neither of them has had an accident in all the years they have been climbing Mt. Hood. In fact, there has been but one fatality, and that was more than forty years ago.

Mr. Coalman is hardy and full of endurance. He has climbed Mt. Hood for fun and all alone. It is related that he wanted to go to Cloud Cap Inn, on the other side of the mountain one day, to see another guide, and instead of going around by the way of Portland and Hood River, he walked over the top of the mountain, saw his man, and walked back again, all in one day.

There is one other Mt. Hood enthusiast, one who lives in Portland, and has wealth at his command. He has been enthusiastic about other things besides, having owned the first automobile and the first airship in Oregon. He sold the airship but is yet the owner of several autos. He has made it possible for the people of Portland to make the round trip to the summit of Mt. Hood in 48 hours, and his name is E. Henry Wemme.

His enthusiasm is proved by his works. He is reported to have said that he could get a quarter of a million dollars to build an automobile road from Portland to Government Camp and that he had Portland property to guarantee the bonds to raise the money.

And so it is that the pioneer guide of thirty years ago, the new one of today, and the enthusiastic promoter of good roads—Yokum, Coalman and Wemme—have made the Mt. Hood which the tourist and the venturesome spirits of today know.

Time will do more, for the day is coming when an electric road will be in operation during the open season from Portland to Government Camp and a new set of guides will be qualified to lead the climbers to the summit, but the glory they will achieve will never dim the luster of the three who have blazed the way to the pinnacle of Oregon's greatest scenic attraction—Mt. Hood.

DON'T SEND AWAY FOR MERCHANDISE

The undersigned business concerns of Gresham, realizing that there is much trading done outside of the home community under the mistaken idea that it is an advantage to the consumer, and desiring to correct this tendency, have secured the services of an expert and observant student of economic problems, Mr. David Powell, to write a series of articles for the Outlook on the advantages of home trading.

These articles will appear under this heading during several weeks in Tuesday's Outlook.

We know we can serve the many buyers within our patronizing territory as well or better than merchants elsewhere and invite your investigation of this statement. We need to understand each other better and ask you to follow the facts presented in these articles as a help in this direction.

A Trade Mark is a copyrighted mark or label used by a manufacturer to distinguish his goods from those of other makers. It is to signify that he has used every effort to make his product superior to similar products on the market. That he believes he has done so, is evidenced by the guarantee he gives that all articles so labeled are warranted to give satisfaction. All manufacturers of Trade Mark goods authorize the dealers selling them to invariably refund the full purchase price of any article that proves unsatisfactory to the buyer. This feature is of real dollars and cents value to the consumer, because this refund can always be easily and quickly secured by the dissatisfied buyer while he is in the frame of mind to demand it at no expense whatever and very little trouble. Only a very few Trade Mark goods

REMODEL RESOURCE EXHIBITS

The Gresham Commercial Club has received the following letter from E. C. Giltner:

Portland, Oregon, July 23, 1914—Gentlemen:—The Portland Chamber of Commerce has made arrangements for the remodeling of its exhibits of Oregon's resources and free information bureau located on the main floor of the Commercial Club building in this city.

This exhibit contains specimens of the products grown in all parts of the state, and we wish to make the following proposition to you:

That you immediately, and during the course of the next few weeks, gather the best products that your community grows and ship to J. H. Clark, Lyle, Washington, with a card stating that the specimen is to be placed on exhibition with us, and giving the name of the grower, where grown, name of the product, etc.

There will be no expense attached to the processing or to the products being placed on exhibit with us. We will pay for the processing, for the expressage from Lyle to Portland, for the jars, and will place everything on exhibit free of charge, provided you furnish the products.

As there will be thousands of visitors passing through Portland next year on their way to the Panama Exposition in San Francisco, and as Portland is really the show room for the entire state, you certainly can realize the value of such an exhibit to the state, especially where it costs the individual community absolutely nothing.

Furthermore, if you have any literature regarding your section we would be pleased to place same in our exhibit room and distribute it free of charge over our counters. As we now have between one and two hundred strangers a day visit the exhibit, and as this will be largely increased next year, it is important that you avail yourself of this opportunity. Send literature to 69, 5th street, Portland, Oregon.

INTERESTING SESSION OF FAIRVIEW GRANGE

Fairview Grange held an interesting all-day session on Saturday which was largely attended. Several visitors were present, among them being C. M. Dickenson of Oswego, state deputy, and his wife, H. A. Lewis of Russellville grange, E. L. Thorpe and wife of Rockwood grange. An excellent program was rendered under the direction of Mrs. J. C. Windle, who acted as lecturer in the absence of Mrs. J. W. Townsend.

Fairview Grange has an excellent membership and, though it is the smallest grange in the county, it does things. The blue ribbon and diplomas won at the fair last year for the best grange exhibit, are neatly framed and attract much attention.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN PASSES ON

By L. H. WELLS.
PORTLAND, August 2—Special—Otis Additon, "Father of Lents," and veteran of the Civil war, died yesterday afternoon at his home in Lents after a lingering illness of four years. For four days he had been in a comatose condition.

He was born 70 years ago in Androscoggin county, Maine, and moved with his parents to Abington Mass., where he entered a shoe factory.

In 1863 he enlisted in the signal corps service and served until 1865, and was, as far as known, the last surviving member of the signal corps on the Pacific coast. He had many thrilling experiences in that capacity. He conducted a dry goods business at Abington, Mass., and came to Portland in 1878, entering the employ of Olds, Wortman & King. Removing to Corvallis, he became identified with the early growth of that place, being the founder of the Corvallis water works. He spent a short time in California and then returned to Portland where he conducted a commission house and roller mill until 1894, when he removed to Lents.

In his real estate operations at Lents he laid out a score or more additions and became known as the "father of Lents." He assisted in getting the railway built to Lents. When times were hard he assisted innumerable families at Lents in tiding over and many of these owe their homes to his timely advice and assistance. Through his 36 years of active life in Oregon he sustained a reputation for integrity and fair dealing.

Mr. Additon is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucia Faxon Additon, to whom he was married in 1867 in New England. Their only son, Alton Additon, a mining engineer, died in California. Mrs. Additon is a national lecturer and organizer of the Womans Christian Temperance Union, and her work had the sympathy and assistance of Mr. Additon.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been made but it will probably be held on Thursday in the Evangelical church.

Mr. Additon made his life felt in Lents community more than the public knows about. When hard times came many of the families of that section were caught without money to pay their installments and Mr. Additon came to their relief in many cases, and many of the families of that district have their homes today through the encouragement received from him. He was a man of sound judgment and high moral character.

Special Training for Women.

Women today are specially trained for their life work. The specialization that is demanded in all fields of endeavor makes no exception in the work of women. That they should be expert home-makers is quite as necessary as that men should be expert farmers or engineers. Facilities for providing this training are afforded at the Oregon Agricultural College by new buildings, new and modern in every respect and thoroughly adapted to their intended use. The scientific instruction is broad and thorough, for the efficient woman must know why as well as how. The home economics students are likewise liberally instructed in language, literature, economics and sociology, in preparation for their great community responsibilities.

Gresham Fruitgrowers' Association Wants Bartlett Pears.

We are in position to handle Bartlett pears in any quantity. Will pay a fair price to people that are not members of the association. Members of the association will receive all there is in it less expense of handling. For instruction in picking, grading and delivery, see J. H. Sterling, Gresham, Ore. Phone 551. If
