Official paper of the Town of Gresham, Oregon. Official paper of the Town of Fairview, Oregon.

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the Postoffice at Gresham, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

GIVEN SLIGHT CONSIDERATION.

A seemingly embarrassing situation confronts the Gresham cannery project, judging from the tone of a letter received by the Outlook from a correspondent who complains of too much inspection by officious state inspectors.

The writer says: The writer was in one of Oregon's largest canneries a few days ago.

This particular plant is new and a model institution in every way, the owner during the past year having spent some $50,000 in the construction.

All work was paid for on the piece system with a bonus added for all those who could do more than a certain average. Under this system the earnest and reliable girl workers made from $15.00 to $18.00 per week on a nine-hour day, straight through the season.

Our plan is to pay a bonus for efficiency for we find that the girl who does the biggest day's work and draws the most money, also does the best work while the lazy ones who kick and complain are no good at any price.

He mentioned this to show how a minimum wage would be unfair in the line of business as it would cut the wages of the good worker in order to raise the wages of the incompetent one.

In speaking about general conditions he said: "During the summer we have had not less than seventeen state inspectors of one kind and another in here trying to find something about our model plant at which they could kick and they seemed rather disappointed when they could find no particular objections."

Judging from the way we are regulated, inspected and watched at every turn, one would think that we were a set of criminals trying to rob the community instead of honest business men spending thousands upon thousands of dollars for the farmers' produce and employing hundreds of people at good wages.

Did you ever hear of one of these new-fangled commissions that try to regulate every workingman and employer in the state do anything toward helping start an industry.

What Oregon needs is a commission to encourage industries and less of the political faker who is really at the bottom of our present unsettled industrial condition and unemployed workmen.

SOME OREGON STATISTICS.

There are 305,164 persons in Oregon that work for a living and 88,114 of them are employed upon the farm, according to a report which has just been issued by the United States census bureau.

There are 1403 dairy farmers in the state and they employ 589 laborers and eleven foremen. There are also 2,244 persons in the state whose principal source of income is from stock raising.

What would be the effect of the universal 8-hour law upon farm laborers? Would farmers, dairymen, stock men and fruit growers pay the same wages for an eight-hour day that they now pay?

The federal census indicates that the cost of production on the farm would be increased by an eight-hour day.

No Resident of Oregon Need Remain Untrained.

Sixty-eight correspondence courses, free except for the nominal fee that covers postage but intended mainly for residents of Oregon, are offered by the state university this year to the people who cannot leave their regular work to attend a higher educational institution.

These 68 courses are in the following subjects: Architecture, bird study, botany, debating, economics, education, electricity, English, geology, German, history, home biology, journalism, literature, mathematics, philosophy, physics, psychology, sociology.

Among the new courses are several of especial interest to Oregon teachers: History of modern elementary education, secondary education; problems in education; advanced courses in teachers' English composition. Dr. H. D. Sheldon of the department of education, and Dr. George Rebec, professor of philosophy, will this year aid in giving correspondence instruction.

The correspondence department is intended to put higher instruction within reach of all state residents. As much as one-third of the work of a degree may in exceptional cases be taken in the correspondence department. One student, a senior this year, will have made 27 of the 120 required hours by correspondence; another has completed 25 hours. Bulletins containing a full list of courses will be sent on application.

Palmblad-Unis Marriage.

An important social event of last week was the marriage, on Wednesday afternoon September 16, of David Palmblad of Portland, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Palmblad of Powell Valley, and Miss Anna Unis daughter of Chas. Unis, at the home of the latter in Powell Valley. Rev. J. E. Carlson, a Lutheran minister of Portland officiated.

The bridesmaids were Misses Ellen Unis and Esther Bergstrom. The former is a sister of the bride. Paul Palmblad and John Unis, brother of the groom and bride respectively, attended the groom. Albert Palmblad acted as usher. Miss Emelie Anderson played the wedding march and also sang "Oh Promise Me." The bride was dressed in white crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of carnations.

Following the ceremony the guests, more than a hundred in number, were seated at two long tables and a bountiful supper was served. The young couple were the recipients of a large number of gifts both beautiful and useful.

Mr. Palmblad has been for a number of years employed in Staples' jewelry store in Portland. The bride is a stenographer and has spent the past few years in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmblad have gone to housekeeping at their home, 356 East 43d street.

No Liquor Advertisements.

In April the Chicago Record-Herald announced that it would no longer accept advertisements for the sale of intoxicating liquors. This was a laudable action so worthy of commendation and emulation that the publisher of the Record-Herald was fairly snowed under by messages and missives from his admirers. And we rise simply to remark that it is not necessary for the Modern Woodman to announce like reformation. The Modern Woodman never has accepted liquor advertisements of any kind. Modesty does not prevent us from explaining that the by-laws of our society are against the liquor business in all its forms.—The Modern Woodman, May 1914.

The adoption of the proposed 8-hour law at the November election would be disastrous to the state, work a hardship on the farmers of Oregon and ought to be defeated, was declared by Mrs. Mary S. Howard, state secretary of the state grange. Mrs. Howard commended the plan of the granges to discuss measures on the ballot, and urged special consideration of the eight-hour law.

W. D. Skinner, traffic manager of the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Oregon Electric systems is in receipt of an application from eastern parties who wish to locate a brick yard, in a growing community that can offer some inducements in the way of business; also, parties who are desirous of establishing a milk condensary. The latter have the capital and do not seek assistance in the way of promotion funds. All they desire is that the increase of dairying promise a good business.

They are fighting Hawley over in the other congressional district just as hard as they are fighting Laferty here. It looks as if both of them will be winners again.

There is no danger that the proposed eight-hour measure will become a law, but swat it.

The voting contest is a trade builder and so helps the home merchant first. You help yourself by helping him. Keep the money at home and boost for the home trade.

A DAY'S MISHAPS.

Boring, Ore., Sept. 24.—Gresham Outlook:—Allow me a few words in your valuable paper in explanation of today's accidents. About half way between Samuel Bacon's and Chas. L. Hunter's, I started my horse a little faster, but the lame strap broke, and he set to kicking—broke both shafts and cleared himself, then ran toward home some three miles till Elmer Bankus stopped him. I gathered up my mail and started on foot. Close to Jas. Speirs I met W. A. Proctor in his big auto. He told me to get in and go back to his home, then he would take me around. The way that auto sped it kept me busy getting my mail ready. We made extra time and reached Boring at 1:55 p. m. Mr. Morand took us out to Bankus and we got my horse, but on the way back, one-fourth mile of Boring, we met an auto and my horse jerked suddenly and overturned the buggy. Some slight kicking and another shaft was broken. Then we walked and led our horses into town.

E. E. Van Fleet used the telephone and secured Mrs. I. N. L. Shriner to bring my buggy to the office. I want to thank each of my friends who aided me today. But those who aided me today are not the only friends I have. I believe there are very few routes in all of Oregon that have a better class of people living on it than live on route 1, Boring, Oregon.

No one was hurt today, for which I am devoutly thankful. DAVID WOLFE.

Women in Big Row.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 6.—A big row has broken out in the female contingent of the saloon camp in Oregon. When Louis Epstein came here from Denver he organized the Hop Growers' association, then he employed some women to work the women voters. These women were chiefly Abigail Scott Duniway, Mrs. Dr. Carey Talbot and Mrs. Newton C. Gauntt. The women did not like the hop growers' fake, so the Taxpayers' and Wage Earners' association was fixed up for their benefit with Mrs. Duniway at the head and Mrs. Talbot as secretary.

According to the women, Mrs. Duniway was to get $1,800 for the stunt, and Mrs. Talbot $100 a month Mrs. Duniway's husband protested loudly against making the family name a tail to the saloon kites and induced her to cut out part of her speaking program in behalf of the saloons. The duties of the women were chiefly to attend dinners paid for by the brewery interests and get their names in the papers as speaking for the women of Oregon. The women claim that the foxy Epstein induced Mrs. Talbot to give him her two powers of attorney presumably to any rate during a recent absence of Mrs. Talbot. Epstein is accused of sending out broadcast letters all over Oregon to rumssellers, soliciting funds for the campaign. The letters were signed by a rubber stamp fac simile of Mrs. Talbot's signature. At this trick of Epstein's Mrs. Talbot got mad and resigned, demanding the return of her powers of attorney. Epstein returned one and kept one. He then set up the claim, so the women declare, that Mrs. Talbot sent out the letters herself and broke out in rebellion in support of Mrs. Talbot, but it turns out that she lives in Villa Clara apartments, which are owned by Fred Fritz, the rumsseller, and is $600 behind on her rent and Fritz seems to be using that to compel Mrs. Gauntt to keep still. Mrs. Talbot now threatens to expose the whole liquor outfit if she is not taken care of according to her contract with the liquor interests.—New Republic, Sept. 11, 1914.

According to the Saturday Evening Post, Mr. George Perkins, of the New York Life Insurance company, gave a dinner to the directors of the great company. When a menu card was handed him for his sanction, he crossed out all wines. To the protest of the proprietor that such a thing would be preposterous and could not be done, Mr. Perkins replied: "We discriminate against the use of these in our policyholders, it is but fair we should abide by our own rule." There's a temperance sermon.

THE REAL THING.

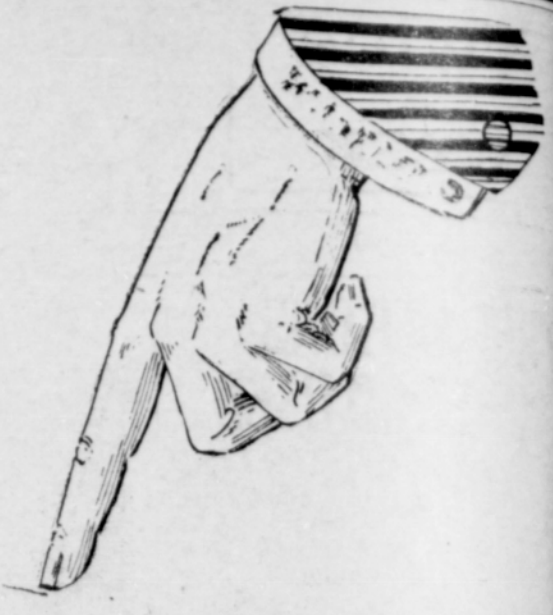

The cub reporter saw a hearse start away from a house at the head of a funeral procession. "Who's the dead?" he inquired of the corner storekeeper, who was standing near his door, gazing at the conveyances. "John Schmidt." "John Schmidt!" exclaimed the cub. "You don't mean to say John Smith is dead?" "Vell, py golly," said the grocer, "vot you dink dey doing mit him—practicing?"

Acute Indigestion.

"I was annoyed for over a year by attacks of acute indigestion, followed by constipation," writes Mrs. M. J. Gallagher, Geneva, N. Y. "I tried everything that was recommended to me for this complaint but nothing did me much good until about four months ago I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and procured a bottle of them from our druggist. I soon realized that I had gotten the right thing for they helped me at once. Since taking two bottles of them I can eat heartily without any bad effects." Sold by all Dealers.
