HOW TO BUILD UP.

Portland's jitney ordinance, which will come up for final consideration tomorrow, will probably put a crimp in the enterprise to the extent that about one-half of the autos now in use will probably go out of business in the city. The ordinance is silent as to the machines which are operating into the country, like those between Gresham and Portland, and they will probably not be interfered with unless they take passengers for points within the city limits of Portland.

It has been predicted that a lot of automobiles which are now in operation will be for sale cheap after tomorrow, as it is not likely that all of them now in use will be assigned routes. The license of five dollars a month will probably deter some from operating, and then there will not be enough paying routes for so much competition.

As a stimulator of travel to points outside of Portland the jitneys are a success. The traffic between here and the city has doubled within the past two months, which confirms the contention made in these columns several times that frequent service and lower fares will serve to build up a community quicker than anything else except a gold rush. An increase in population means more traffic, which is a point the railroads are unable to realize. Perhaps the jitneys will be the means of opening their eyes, figuratively speaking, to the fact that the more people there are to travel the greater will be their profits.

Milwaukie has a five-cent fare to Portland, and there is no need for a jitney service between that place and Portland. It wouldn't pay, and the railroad company has that field to itself. The same may be said of Lents and Montavilla. When one notices how Milwaukie, Lents and Montavilla have grown while Gresham has been standing almost still, it will be seen that the principal reason is rapid and cheap transportation.

ORGANIZED PLEASURES.

"Organized pleasures," as one of the adjuncts of school life, is becoming such a costly burden that there is a growing sentiment looking toward their curtailment. The girl students of Vassar college are the first to realize how burdensome the custom has become and have made an investigation which gave as a result that they were spending about $17,000 a year just for class suppers, flowers, rings, pins, dances and entertainment of "teams" from other colleges.

Henceforth the girls of Vassar have determined to cut out all these frills and save their money. This is a most excellent plan which will help the students immensely more than they now realize.

It would be interesting to know what the fads of our own high school are costing the students and their parents this present school year. That it would run up well into the hundreds is evident and for all the educational good received the money might just as well be thrown into Johnson creek. The expenditure of the money is not the most harmful feature, either. The deterrent to study is the most important.

The Portland Evening Telegram was issued yesterday from its new offices in the Pittock building on Washington street. It appeared in an enlarged form of two sections and with eight columns to the page. The Outlook is glad to note its evident prosperity and improvement.

People will return thanks that no new boards, commissions, taxes, offices or salary raises were put through the legislature.

There are still a few officials left who do nothing but labor to raise taxes and burden industry.

HOW TO RAISE AN ARMY.

S. S. Monken, president of the National Security League, says that the way to end warfare is to have the army teach the people the hideousness of it. His paradoxical system is explained in these words:

"We believe in using the army and national guards as educational institutions to train citizens, not only to discharge their duties to the nation in time of war, but to make them more proficient in civilian pursuits."

He doesn't tell us just how we are to be taught, but we suppose the members of the army and the state militia are to be sent out among us as instructors to show us how we should conduct our business affairs. Perhaps there will be a sunrise gun to call out the hired help and another to tell the farmer when to feed his pigs and chickens. The merchant will unlock his store to the roll of the drum and the bugle call will start the jitneys off on their regular runs.

Everything will be done under strict discipline when the O. N. G. is turned loose as our alarm clocks, except the cooking of our meals at home. That particular diversion of the feminine half will never be changed unless the women join the army. All the men will break their necks tumbling over each other to enlist, just for the sake of being able to boss someone else. But the women—never. They are the bosses now and when the army lads come around giving directions they will be "shooed" away with a flirt of the apron or a swing of the mop.

If Brother Monken is able to boss the women he will find plenty of men who will answer to his appeal, and then the United States will have the greatest army in the world.

Seventy-five per cent of the western railroad companies would be bankrupt today had it not been for increased economies and betterments, says A. W. Tronholm, general manager of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad, told the board of arbitration in the western railroad wage case. "Nowadays a fireman wants some one around to wipe off the windows for him so he can see out of the cab," observed Mr. Tronholm.

It was supposed that the last Indian fight had taken place in the United States, but an uprising in Utah may bring about another before the tribe is subdued. A small band is on the warpath and a battle may ensue before it is overpowered. If a fight takes place it will go down in history as positively the last in the final subjugation of the redskins.

The industrial commission should have been consolidated and simplified and the new rate of assessment of industries adopted, or that great measure for the interest of the working man is a dead measure and will be killed by the people or it will bankrupt the state.—Salem Statesman.

MAKING CANNERIES OF

long documents, and that it would be physically impossible for the members to investigate each measure, hence that work is done by committees, and the fate of most of the measures depended on the committee.

"It has been charged that there was a machine in the Senate," said Senator Moser, "and none in the House, but I want to say right here, there was no machine in the Senate. It is true that that body was organized as it must be to do business, and without organization it would have required six months to have transacted the business that was handled. There was no machine in evidence, and I believe that every member was there with an honest purpose to work for the best interest of the entire state.

"Among the important measures passed was the prohibition bill, which went through nearly as it had been prepared by the committee of 100. It carried in the Senate almost unanimously, except Senator Kellaher voted against it. Again, the act providing for a referendum election in November supplements the prohibition measure and insures the going into effect January 1, next of the prohibition law. Several highly important measures affecting the public schools were passed. Next the church, in my judgment, the public schools stand. They may be more important as they touch more people. The bill introduced by Senator Perkins provides for a county high school fund, and in my judgment is a highly important measure. It provides for a small high school tax, so that students in one county in which there is no high school may be sent to the high school in an adjoining county, and his expenses paid, thus placing high school facilities within the reach of all in the state. Another school measure abolishes the annual school meeting in this county, and provides that the board of education shall prepare a budget and levy the tax. This budget will be open to the inspection and criticism of the public, and is a piece of constructive legislation. Under the new law voters at school elections must be registered. It was proposed that all residents should vote at school elections, but that was eliminated from the bill, and the qualification of voters remain as before. However, there may be an effort to submit the matter to the voters admitting the votes of all at a school election at a special election, and you may be called on to meet that question in this county. Another measure is that in future there shall be no discrimination on account of sex in paying teachers, which was an act of justice to the women. While it may be well for men to be at the head of our school, women are the better teachers and should be paid accordingly. There should be no discrimination against her.

Practically all the members of the legislature were elected on pledges to consolidate the departments and boards, yet only two consolidations were effected, although many measures for consolidation were passed by the Senate, but killed in the House. The offices of the State Highway engineer and the State Engineer were consolidated. The three commissioners in charge of the compensation measures were concentrated in one man as a measure of economy and good business. There has been some criticism of the emergency attached to the compensation amended bill, but it is known to every one that the compensation measure as it stands is bankrupt and the emergency was needed to save it."

Senator Moser discussed many other measures that were passed and others that did not pass. He referred to the bill which he said is called the "Moser bill," giving the power of removal and declared that it was one of the constructive measures of the session. He declared that every successful business was based on the principal that the man at the head should have the power to dismiss a subordinate, and that the man who appoints should have the power to remove. Senator Moser said that this power might be abused, but that it was the duty of the people to see that it was not abused. Senator Moser was thanked by the club for his address.

Surprises Many in Gresham.

The QUICK action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-ka, the remedy which became famous by curing appendicitis, is surprising Gresham people. Many have found that this simple remedy drains so much foul matter from the system that A SINGLE DOSE relieves constipation, sour stomach and gas on the stomach almost IMMEDIATELY. Adler-ka is the most thorough bowel cleanser ever sold. Gresham Drug Company.
