Do You Sun Them?

The most important question of all these summer days is not concerned with war or roses or vacations. The most important question of all is, "Do you sun them?" The woman in the green and purple kimono and a dingy boudoir cap says that "when a thing is set, it's set and that's all there is to it." She can't see any use in making preserves anyway when you can always buy them at the grocery and have them charged. The woman in the gingham dress and unshamed coiffure declares that a thing isn't half eaten unless it is enjoyed, and that homemade strawberry preserves are a necessary attribute of happiness whether they are sunned or just plain cooked. Her neighbor in the white skirt and middy insists that they must be sunned, and she has sunned all of hers, although she had to take a window out of the garage to do it, remarking as she did so that her husband had not broken a wind shield for ever so long. If you have lived through preserving time in a pleasant neighborhood of good and generous housekeepers, you may have been brought into the discussion yourself. You may have objected to the boxes and tubs and pieces of glass that have blocked the back walk, but perhaps if you lifted the glass and casually put in a forefinger and pulled out a crimson dripping berry, you suspended judgment. No doubt you smiled when you saw weary, but resolute, women hurrying across the back yards with tastes of "theirs," but you probably realized that it was a serious matter when you found a varied collection of little glass dishes on the supper table. Perhaps your wife said, holding one of the dishes up to the light, "These are Mrs. So and So's. I think they seem a little dark. Try them dear. And these are Mrs. Somebodyelse's. She suns hers." You may have been a little troubled when she reached for another dish and continued, "These are cousin Jennie's. She puts in pineapple." You may have almost rebelled when she asked you to try some of "Mother's, with rhubarb and cinnamon." Nevertheless, when she took up the last dish, examined it tenderly, looked through it, dripped the juice from the spoon, smelled it and even took a bit of a taste, at last offering it to you, saying, "And these are mine. They are just plain cooked," it is to be hoped that you were ready with your decision, your serious and thoughtful decision, in favor of the "plain cooked" or whatever kind she may have made.

PLEASANT HOME

The Methodist Ladies' Aid will meet next Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. John Brannahl. The hostess will serve refreshments. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The Slave Driver of Civilization.

William Willard Howard, treasurer of the New York Society for the Enforcement of the Criminal Law, said:

"Take alcohol out of New York, and the disorderly houses will disappear of their own accord, through lack of demand and absence of supply. Take alcohol out of New York and no good girl will be trapped and sold into a life of shame. Take alcohol out of New York and no sane man will enter a disorderly house. Take alcohol out of New York and the underworld itself will shrivel up and blow away."

PLEASANT HOME BAPTIST Church—Preaching every Sunday at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school at 10 o'clock. Midweek prayer meeting, Wednesday, 8 p. m. Preaching every Sunday at 3 p. m. at Cottrell. Rev. E. A. Leonard, Pastor.

The Martin County Sentinel of Fairmont, Minnesota, comments upon the fact that the Minneapolis Tribune, a great paper, publishes an article stigmatizing the saloon as "a breeder of disorder, the friend of anarchy, the inciter of mob violence, of riot, of lawlessness and restraint." The Sentinel comments that it is the press that is driving the saloon off the earth.

Autos and Alcohol.

The denial of a state of intoxication by drivers of auto cars when brought into the police court, or an admission by the driver to having drunk only a glass or perhaps two glasses of beer, an amount of alcohol that would not ordinarily intoxicate, is a matter of daily occurrence. It is now advanced by medical authorities that the exhilaration produced by this mode of rapid transit added to even the smallest exhilaration of the alcohol transforms a cautious driver into an unsafe and dangerous one. Automobile driving to be safe requires a safe car and a driver with a head into which not a drop of the enemy which steals away one's brains has been poured.

THE Coal Outlook.

There seems to be a feeling in the trade that business this fall is going to be good, and that prices will be much higher than usual.

When the matter is given thought there is much reason to believe that prices will, on account of certain conditions, be of necessity higher. Those who have investigated the situation find that there is going to be a shortage of labor at the mines. Many of the miners have gone into other lines of labor, or have gone back to Europe, and it is said that even at the present time, if it were necessary, some states could not run mines over two days a week.

In the anthracite field there is much discussion about the chances for a strike next spring, and many believe that one will be called.

With a strike on in the anthracite fields, and a severe shortage of labor in the bituminous fields, a serious condition will confront the operators, and it may be that a great coal shortage will come about.

It seems as if Portland could have found something else than the jitney to make war on.

No Sunday Closing Law.

Judge Webster Holmes, of Tillamook, says there is no such thing as a Sunday closing law in Oregon, and that the recent decision of the supreme court in regard to its being illegal to keep cigar stands open on the Sabbath isn't worth the paper upon which it is written.

"The Sunday closing law," he says, "was handed down from territorial days, under the provision of the state constitution, article 18, section 7, which provides 'all laws in force in the Territory of Oregon when this constitution takes effect and consistent therewith, shall continue in force until altered or repealed.' The Sunday closing law was included in the code of criminal procedure passed October 19, 1864. Two days later the same session repealed it by passing Senate bill 71, entitled 'An act to repeal all statutes of a general nature, with certain exceptions.'

"Section 1 thereof provides as follows:

"That all statutes of a general nature passed or in force before the commencement of the session commencing September the eighth, A. D., 1862, except those enumerated and mentioned in the next section, be and the same are hereby repealed." Section 2, of said Senate bill 71, does not enumerate the Sunday closing law, nor does it refer to it in any manner. The Sunday closing law was therefore and thereby hereby repealed."

"There has been much ado about nothing for a good many years by the mistaken belief that we had a 'Sunday closing law' in Oregon.

The judge referred to a case in Marion county where the law was attacked. Judge Bennett signed the writ of review from the Justice Court on July 25, 1904, and the case was tried before Judge Gallo-way, who reversed the case on the grounds set out that there was no Sunday closing law.
