Why Constipation Injures.

The bowels are the natural sewerage system of the body. When they become obstructed by constipation a part of the poisonous matter which they should carry off is absorbed into the system, making you feel dull and stupid, and interfering with the digestion and assimilation of food. This condition is quickly relieved by Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by Gresham Drug Co.—Adv.

Bull Run Man Injured.

George Ingram, employed at Bull Run, fell over an embankment on Saturday morning and injured his back severely, although no bones were broken. He was sent to a Portland hospital by Dr. Hughes.

The kelp beds of British Columbia, are said to be capable of furnishing annually 235,000 tons of potash, which, figured at $50 a ton, would amount to $11,750,000. The iodine obtained, at the rate of $3,875 a ton, would amount to $3,680,000. The total calculated of these two by-products of kelp (at pre-war prices) would thus amount to $15,000,000 per annum.

Spring.

Spring is looked upon by many as the most delightful season of the year, but this cannot be said of the rheumatic. The cold and damp weather brings on rheumatic pains which are anything but pleasant. They can be relieved, however, by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. For sale by Gresham Drug Co.—Adv.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH

Chapter 13.
By C. N. BROWN.

Paul, in writing to the Hebrews on the Sabbath question, discusses it from the foundation principles. He takes first the Mosaic Sabbath and shows how its meaning ran back to the creation, and the rest of God that followed it, and then turning to Christ's work says, "For he that is entered into his rest hath himself also rested from his works as God did from his. Heb. 4:10. A close reading of the whole manuscript, especially the third chapter, will disclose the fact the Paul is comparing Christ with Moses, and in doing so he drifted into the Sabbath question and began comparing the old with the new. Some principles are noticed here which are common to both, namely that there was a work done at creation and a work done at Redemption, and that after each work there was rest. God the Creator worked and rested. God the Redeemer worked and rested, and the rest of the latter was like the rest of the former. The work done at the creation was truly a great work, beyond the comprehension of man, but the work of creation was a tame affair compared to that of redemption. God could speak worlds into existence and command let there be light and there was light, but when it came to the redemption of man it could not be done so easily. He had to lay aside his glory, take on him the form of man and be humiliated, despised, and rejected by his people, and single handed and alone meet and conquer sin and satan and finally, forsaken by his disciples, jeered by the mob and forsaken of God, he died on Calvary for the redemption of the race.

It was a battle between right and wrong, sin and holiness, light and darkness. A struggle for the throne of the universe, for the very existence of God. What are the six days of creation to be compared to all that he endured? Jesus finished his work at the resurrection and entered into his rest on the first day of the week as God had finished his on the seventh day and entered into his at the beginning. The law of nature places the sacredness of rest in proportion to the task accomplished. If redemption is greater than creation then in the same proportion is the rest that follows more sacred.

If the creator's rest was of sufficient sacredness to be memorialized by a Sabbath day that would bind a nation for fifteen hundred years, then the rest of the redeemer is of sufficient sacredness to be memorialized by a Sabbath to bind christianity to him for all time to come. Religion is a chain to bind its adherents to its author, and a Sabbath is the strongest link in the chain. Under the old Sabbath institution each returning day called the thoughts and devotions back to the Creator, under the new dispensation each returning Sabbath calls back to the bursting tomb and the triumphant redeemer.

What other day of the week could be celebrated as a christian Sabbath? It must be a day that would bind christians to their Lord in the most forceful way. Friday was the day on which occurred the awful tragedy of the crucifixion and the horrors of Calvary were sickening to think of. Forgetfulness would be sweet to them. Saturday was the dark and doleful day that he lay in the tomb, and a little band of broken hearted disciples, dispersed to weep and meditate over dead hopes and blighted ambitions. Nothing in this day, whose memory was desirable to perpetuate. What of the first day of the week? At the dawn an angel visited the grave, a hundred Roman soldiers collapsed, the governor's seal was broken, the bands of death were loosed, Satan's head was bruised, man's redemption was completed, the veil of the temple was rent in twain revealing the Holy of Holies to the gaze of a curious world, the dead are raised to life, Christ appears to the disciples and they have a new birth of hope and inspiration. Could more be done to distinguish the day from all others? On its consequences hang the success of heaven, the defeat of hell and the salvation of the world. These are events before which the creation dwindles into insignificance. At the dawn of this day the sun of righteousness arose with healing in his wings, and the light of life burst forth from Joseph's new tomb which is destined to dispel all the darkness of the world.

What could be more appropriate than a perpetual Sabbath to connect the faith of the believer with this the greatest of all events, and keep its scenes always green in his memory? Each returning Sabbath should not only refresh these things in the mind but our faith should take hold of the living Christ in such a way that these events may be re-enacted in our hearts.

ROCKWOOD

Miss Margaret Schantlin, primary teacher in the Lynch school, severely injured her left elbow while playing basketball at the schoolhouse on Friday. The bones were dislocated and the ligaments torn loose.

Miss Vyola Matthews, teacher of the primary grades of the Rockwood school, presented a fine program with the assistance of her pupils on Friday evening. The entertainment was a decided success and did credit to the pupils and the teacher. About twelve dollars were made, which will be used to obtain play apparatus, looking to the standardization of the school.

The Women's benefit ple social was well attended and a fine social success. The final song was nearly broken up in good natured fun, but the culprit was not "Bill Bailey," but "David."

The Unwelcome Guest.

As the train moved out of the station the ball players were in various humors. There was the bush graduate, anxious to make good, and wondering whether he would do so. There was the old player who had narrowly missed being sold into the minors. There was the cocksure young backstop who had joined the team last year and made such a hit that he was no longer bothered by a rookie's newness or by the fear of the old player that he would not be fast enough. Among all the players there was one unobtrusive guest who had got on with them unseen. When the players stepped off the train in Texas he got off with them, but he had kept himself in the background and no one paid any attention to him.

The next morning the stranger went out to the ball park with the team. No one asked him who he was. No one noticed him, in fact. But he smiled an inscrutable smile at the antics of some of the players. There was a fielder who was beginning his fifth year in big league ball. He should have known better. But he was coveting over the field like the veriest bush leaguer. One of the pitchers was starting out in easy fashion. He was a warm weather pitcher, though, and the day was raw, and he should have waited until the sun came out, even if it was the day following. The guest tapped him on the arm. The pitcher was engrossed in his work and appeared not to notice, and the stranger passed on. As he walked past the manager he thought that worthy recognized him and ordered none of the players to get on speaking terms with him.

Frisking like a bunch of spring lambs, the players returned to their hotel in the evening. There was nothing in the little town and the manager had insisted on regular hours, so that they retired early. The old pitcher was the first one up next morning. He limped downstairs and greeted the players as they came down.

"Well, I see Charley came down on the train with you," said the clerk. "Yep," replied the old pitcher, "the intention was to leave him off the roster this trip, but I guess he slipped by at the last minute. He has not signed a contract, and I think we will give him his unconditional release after we start north. It's too bad to have to carry a lot of worthless timber on the training trip, but I guess it can't be helped."

The young bush leaguer came jauntily downstairs. He walked with an easy swing, that bespoke condition in every movement. He heard the last part of the statement of the old pitcher. "Not talking about me?" he queried. "No," said the old pitcher, as he rubbed his right leg, stiffly. "I was just talking about another rookie, Charley Horse, who came down with us. None of the boys like him, but he takes the training trip with us each spring, anyhow."

"Haven't seen him," said the bush leaguer, as he resumed his jaunty walk out of the front door.

Safe Medicine for Children.
"Is it safe?" is the first question to be considered when buying cough medicine for children. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has long been a favorite with mothers of young children as it contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. It is pleasant to take, too, which is of great importance when a medicine must be given to young children. This remedy is most effectual in relieving coughs, colds and croup. Grange Annual Drama.

The Russellville grange drama club and the whole of Russellville grange are very busy preparing for the big event, the annual drama, "The Village Lawyer," next Saturday night.

With a cast of eleven characters and requiring about three hours for presentation, prospects are good for a grand affair. It is the best and most difficult play ever attempted by the drama club and with Mrs. D. A. Hood as director prospects are very bright for next Saturday night.

All the granges of the county are invited to attend and with a reward to that grange or locality having the highest number of paid admissions, a good attendance is assured.

It is reported that the department of agriculture is experimenting with wire grass as a source of supply for pulp for making paper, in place of poplar or lirioidendron. This variety of grass grows on the Pacific coast and in western Mexico, possesses the desirable property of toughness and can be reduced by the soda process. It is said that paper manufactured from the stock has proved as satisfactory, in physical tests, as a first grade machine-finished, printing paper. In appearance and in feeling, the paper produced is satisfactory. However, the experiments have indicated that more bleaching powder is required in the bleaching process than in the case of poplar stock.

Tobacco exported from the Philippines to the United States must henceforth bear an inspection label certifying that it has been inspected by a collector of internal revenue and is up to the required standard. This is pursuant to a tobacco inspection law passed by the Philippine legislature, which also provides for an advertising campaign in behalf of Philippine tobacco and the maintenance of two tobacco agents in the United States.
