"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

Official paper of the Town of Gresham, Oregon.

SAVING DAYLIGHT.

A "daylight saving" plan has been suggested, the scheme of which is nothing more nor less than setting the clocks ahead an hour and conducting business and other activities accordingly.

That is to say, if the sun rises at 5 o'clock, those of us who remain in bed until 7 virtually waste two hours of good daylight; for the conventional day's work extends until late in the afternoon, and by the time it is finished and the evening meal is eaten, little or no daylight remains for social diversion.

By taking advantage of the extra hour or more in the morning, working the same number of hours from the earlier start, and getting through proportionately earlier in the afternoon, the community avails itself of the extra amount of daylight for recreation toward the close of the day, gets to bed earlier and should, according to a certain rule of philosophy become "healthy, wealthy and wise."

Wonder how it would work if everybody would set the old clock ahead one hour next Sunday night and leave the alarm as it is? The farmer could do it easier than the rest of us, because his hired men don't work hard enough anyhow. The stock would be glad to get their feed an hour sooner, and then just think of the saving in coal oil by going to bed an hour sooner!

But would people go to bed any sooner? We are inclined to think that our nocturnal habits would prove too strong and that the most of us would put in an extra hour at joy riding or five hundred until we became a community of wrecks for lack of sleep.

The most of us would rather set the clocks back an hour and have more darkness than daylight. "The night was made for song" said the poet, and too many of us agree with him. And who would be willing to lose his or her "beauty sleep" that always comes after the daylight awakening, when one turns over for just another snooze?

The matter is being seriously considered in some places in the east and has been partially adopted in some factory towns. But it will never be popular with the greater majority.

Candidates for school superintendent, who are interested in first-class text books, are respectfully notified that within a few weeks Gresham will have ready for circulation a senior annual and the premium list of the county fair. Both will be kept as souvenirs.

If it were not a violation of political ethics we would call upon the democrats to nominate Hughes if the republicans don't. We have spoken to two of the Gresham democrats about it and will ask the opinion of the other one as soon as we can find him.

An inquisitive subscriber at Rockwood wants to know if chauffeurs don't get round shouldered by sitting so long at the wheel. We are of the opinion that they get that way by bumping themselves to pay for gasoline.

Instead of buying food, fuel and clothing with our last year's income, if we had bought bar silver about Christmas and sold it now, we might have had a limousine with twin sixes in front of it.

The war is costing Europe about $90,000,000 a day. That is very likely the reason we haven't received any subscriptions from over there to this home newspaper since the war began.

There will probably be considerable abuse of Congressman McArthur for his recent ungracious attitude toward Mr. Hutton. But don't denounce him; do something for his liver.

"A promoter is a man who can make either a dollar or a penny look like thirty cents," says Life. But he can't guess which ball team is going to win the pennant.

Judge Tuthill, of Chicago, has backed water on his Shakespeare decision. Gee! But what a lot of good advertising the bard of Avon missed by dying 300 years too soon!

They will baptize a steamer tomorrow in Portland with champagne. But when we reflect that the steamer will have its home port at Seattle we are not surprised.

We all have to admit that when the weather wants to act as nicely as it did for a week, there are mighty few things that can do better—not even the candidates.

Now that you have official information from Washington that the price of meat animals continues to rise maybe you will quit talking that way to the butcher.

The president of the South Carolina university says women teachers fall with boys. Maybe so now, but they didn't before the forest reserves were established.

We have noticed that a fat man will walk two miles to lose four ounces, and then stop at the third parlor and drink enough near beer to gain four pounds.

JOHN B. COFFEY Republican Candidate for County Clerk.

Interest, Naturalization and Declaration Money turned over to the County $13,287.73.
