Women and Platforms.

The woman's part has become, they say, the Woman's Party, duly organized and firmly established upon its own platform consisting of one plank broad enough to accommodate all women. That platform is, perhaps, the most remarkable thing about it all. Platforms are difficult and dangerous things. They are, as a rule, made up of any number of planks, and it is sometimes impossible to get them all well fitted and fastened together. There is, it must be admitted, a weak spot or two in every party's platform, and it occasionally happens that when one plank is safely in place and the party lined up on it, another plank will fly up in the most disconcerting manner and as likely as not spill off a few voters. However all that may be, the women have begun with one plank which is safe enough. It differs in expression if not in principle from the famous statement of Henry George who was, you remember, for men, and incidentally perhaps for women. The woman's platform is for women and incidentally, perhaps, for the good of all men, if they can be persuaded to look at it in that way. That seems to be the only difficulty. As safe and solid as their one plank platform may be, the women are not satisfied with it alone. They insist that it must become a part of each of the party platforms. Of course, it may be true that their platform can accomplish little by itself, but it did seem a comfortable sort of thing. It is not always easy for a man to know just which platform he is on or which one he wants to be on. Parties have been borrowing planks and stealing planks until being a party man is a difficult business, although a necessary and interesting thing. It seemed that the women were to be envied, safely anchored on their one plank platform. They have, however, no intention or desire to be either anchored or safe. They never expected to stop with a one plank platform. The wonder is that they were willing to start with it. Women as a rule want to do everything for everybody all at once and often the greatest handicap to their efficiency is their ambition. It is, therefore, a one plank platform and though it is, in their estimation, broad enough to hold all women, most men and three or four political parties.

CORRESPONDENT SAYS WE ARE FOOLISH, TOO

TROUTDALE, July 3, 1916.—Editor Outlook:—Referring to your article, "Our Foolish Fathers," in your issue of June 27, I ask Were our fathers and grandfathers and great grandfathers as foolish as we are today? I should say not. They at least knew what was good for them. They knew self-employment was a great deal better than begging a job from some private factory owner. They employed themselves weaving cloth by the old hand loom. They were not as expensive as the machines of today.

They could own their own machines and employ themselves and a great many found employment threshing grain on the old barn floor and that was taken away by the invention of the threshing machine and a machine that could thresh grain would take their job away and they could see nothing good in them, for they thought they and their family would starve, and a great many have starved to death since then. And the machines have been the cause of some deaths by starvation because of private ownership. If the private owner is unable to make his profits or dividends large enough to satisfy him he can close his factories and the worker can starve for all he cares.

I don't see as our fathers were so foolish after all. I should say they were to be excused because they were denied education and they could not understand.

But we have built schoolhouses and churches by the thousands, universities and colleges of all descriptions and we should be educated by this time and know better than uphold the private ownership of the means of producing the means of life.

I have often thought since our mothers and sisters have been given a voice in the government, whether they will be as foolish as we have been; that is, vote to uphold this system of private ownership as against public ownership of the means of producing the means of life.

Government ownership seems to be the only remedy. But government ownership of 3,000,000 acres of land and railroads is no remedy because that leaves factories, mines, store houses and markets still in private hands and the public will be no better off under such a scheme. But if all land and industries are owned by the public and controlled by the workers for the benefit of all the public that would fix it, that would be government ownership and the public would be the government.

This knotty problem can be settled in a great deal less time than fifty years, if the public will quit voting for private ownership and vote for public ownership, the thing can be done whenever they elect to do so. But they will be compelled to repudiate all parties that stand for the continuation of the private ownership of the means of producing the means of life.

There is only one party that really stands for public ownership and that is the socialist party and if the public wants public ownership they should study their program and they will soon learn how to get what they want, and the only way to get what they want is to organize with that party and vote for it.

And this knotty problem can easily be solved at the polls next November by voting for the only party that believes in public ownership.

Call it government ownership or socialism, or what you will, if the land and railroads, mines, store houses and factories, are to be used they must be used by the public and they should be owned collectively and used collectively and democratically managed for the advancement and benefit of all the public.

Are we wise enough today To vote the private store away, If we are not then I should say, The most of us will starve some day.

Biliousness and Stomach Trouble. "Two years ago I suffered from frequent attacks of stomach trouble and biliousness," writes Miss Emma Verbyke, Lima, Ohio. Seeing Chamberlain's Tablets advertised I decided to try them. I improved rapidly." For sale by Gresham Drug Co.—Adv.

A mixed court is provided for, along the lines of the international court in Egypt. The arrangement is that it is to consist of two Frenchmen, one of whom will preside; two Spaniards, two Englishmen and one German. A Spaniard is to be public prosecutor.
