FARM BOYS.

The boy on the farm has a good many friends. But, not always on the farm. Men who have been studying the problems of the farmers for years have urged, as a means of keeping farm boys on farms, better treatment of them, more regard for their ambitions, more sympathy for their longings, desires and aspirations. The Country Gentleman, in this connection, asks some pertinent questions. "Is your boy getting his chance?" It inquires, and, it continues:

Are you merely giving him food, clothes and shelter as the law requires, or—
Are you training him to help himself?

Does he have work that he likes because he earns praise and pocket money, or Does he merely work because you command him?

Do you work with him or merely talk at him?

Do you make him feel that he has the chance to earn more, do more and be more than you if he will try?

Commenting on these questions, the Indianapolis News says, these queries are not amiss. Every father of a farm boy will do well to study them and answer them honestly and fairly. They ought to be faced and disposed of. How important they are, the Country Gentleman tries to make plain by reciting two instances, both true. In one, "the father and son are as chummy as school-boys. They work to each other's interests. In the other, the father had two sons. Both ran away from home. There was no "partnership" on that farm; there was no regard for "each other's interests." Only the father's interests were considered—as he blindly thought.

Just now most farm boys are attending school and he will experience in the coming school months, many of the disheartening drawbacks of life on the farm. And not the least of these is the dullness of winter evenings. It should be remembered that the farm boy of today is in closer touch with the outside world than his father was. He knows of pleasant and harmless diversions that folks in the near-by village or town enjoy. These are not beyond his reach, as they were, to a great extent, beyond the reach of his father. And, as any boy would, he craves them. The list of questions propounded by the Country Gentleman might well have included some query relating to the farm boy's amusements.

All work and no play, even if there is a reward in sight for the work, is a bad policy whether it is applied to the boy of the country or to the boy of the town. Some thought directed along this line will profit many a farmer father.

CO-OPERATIVE BUYING.

Almost every year the granges of Oregon make a spasmodic effort to form community buying clubs. For a time these organizations loomed large in the public eye. They were written about and discussed from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and then the public apparently lost interest in them, more especially west of the Mississippi river.

But according to John R. Collier, who writes about them in the Outlook magazine, news and discussion about them ceased only because they are no longer novelties. Today they are more numerous than ever on the other side of the continent. Mr. Collier says, and are, on the whole, in a more flourishing condition.

"You will find," he says, "over 200 such organizations flourishing in New York, 100 each in Chicago and Philadelphia and thousands of others scattered among the larger cities east of the Mississippi. Community groups of housewives, factory workers and employes of banks, department stores and business offices have banded together by the thousand to develop a practical way of buying their food supplies at lower costs. It is no longer an experiment with these people; it is a weekly practice and thrifty accomplishment, for the savings of the modern buying club average 20 per cent."

to say nothing of improved freshness of quality which the direct buying plan affords."

A 20 per cent reduction in the cost of living, in these trying days of high prices, is not to be sneezed at, as the growth of these buying clubs testifies. Mr. Collier sees, moreover, a significant movement on the part of the public to be rid as far as possible of the middle man. The inference to be drawn from this is that the people are learning that direct buying means money saved and better produce.

It is not likely, however, that the buying club movement, even though there is much to recommend it, will ever become as common as some of its supporters expect, especially on the Pacific coast. While the plan may be popular in some places where wages are steady, as in the factory towns back east, the conditions here are different, which is probably the reason that the grange has made no headway in that direction.

Since all the straw hats were fed to cows more than a week ago we would respectfully tint that those who are going to lose hats to us on the November election might pay now. By so doing we will allow a discount of 20 and 10 per cent, if the quality is satisfactory.

Texas will give a democratic majority of 200,000, says a Texas paper. We do not wonder that Texas chose to plunge so deeply into a losing game, but we are pained and shocked at her audacious manner of boasting of such wickedness.

Don't think for a moment that the congressmen are any less busy because congress has adjourned. They are working even harder now, and probably with a good deal more enthusiasm in the fence construction and repair line.

We are told that 221 cold storage firms are holding 5,000,000 cases of eggs—just 143,000,000 dozen, or 16 per capita. We took the precaution to eat our per capita while they were fresh, so the statement doesn't interest us at all.

Since the stepping craze has put the violin, cornet and all music out of the musicians will have to go to work like other mortals. Any two persons can be an orchestra now with a pianola and drum.

Somebody is advertising to teach one to speak Spanish in a week. For our part, we intend to save up our six bits for jitney rides, since we have quite a number of gold bricks on hand already.

It's all right to begin to tune up the Thanksgiving turkey now, and save the pumpkins at all hazards. There will be a big lot of eating done in Oregon during the latter part of November.

A good way to solve the crowded car problem is to have a phonograph playing The Star Spangled Banner. Then everybody would stand up.

The tax problem is simple enough. All you have to do is to set aside the surplus from your vacation fund to pay your taxes next April.

Always use the soft pedal and don't put on the accelerator when reversing on a roasting ear. It might dislocate your jaw.

Carelessness is nearly always the cause of automobile accidents; but, of course, it is always the other fellow's carelessness.

The bakers seem to be making lighter loaves, but the biscuits of the brides are as heavy as usual.

Are You Looking Old?

Old age comes quick enough without inviting it. Some look old at forty. That is because they neglect the liver and bowels. Keep your bowels regular and your liver healthy and you will not only feel younger but look younger. When troubled with constipation or biliousness take Chamberlain's Tablets. They are intended especially for these ailments and are excellent. Easy to take and most agreeable in effect.—Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.
