THE PLAN THAT FAILED.

The Hay army reorganization plan is proving a failure. Its plan was unattractive to military men. The war department has notified department commanders to abandon national guard recruiting. Here, in Oregon the recruiting officers have been discharged from the service.

The democratic program of national defense was recognized in the beginning as being costly and cumbersome. The result, which was an attempt to join federal troops with those of the state, notwithstanding constitutional obstructions, was a recruiting plan on which great hopes were based. It was expected that, under this system of co-operation, preparedness on land would soon be accomplished. The results in Oregon were not flattering. A few of the guard went over, but there was failure everywhere when it came to extending the system beyond the period of enthusiasm incident to the rush to the border. In the next few years, under the Hay law, Oregon will have to supply 3,500 recruits.

If recruiting under the Hay reorganization has proved a failure, what hope is there of the scheme in the future? Our appropriations for national defense, as made at the last session of congress, ran up to the enormous total of $655,405,788. If the government's handling of the other elements of the defense program proves as worthless as the militia provision of the Hay law, the outlook is not cheerful. If there is really as much danger of war as the administration professes to believe, the nation has been placed in a dangerous position.

So desperate are those responsible for the Hay law, a Washington dispatch says, that the war department is to make what amounts to a house-to-house canvass for recruits, hoping by such means to save the situation. The Hay law should be repealed on the convening of congress, and Senator Chamberlain's bill, indorsed by the war board, passed in substitution.

THE OREGON VOTE.

The registration for the coming election shows a total of 189,937 republicans, 77,708 democrats, 1435 progressives, 7051 prohibitionists, 6991 socialists and 9551 of miscellaneous affiliation. The total registration this year is 292,670, which is 12,060 below the number listed on the registration books two years ago.

These figures indicate three things. One is that the republicans have a clear registered majority over the democrats of 112,229. The second is that the voting strength is 12,060 less than it was in 1914. The third is that there has been a decrease in population of at least 36,000, allowing three persons to one registered voter.

James Ham Lewis, senator from Illinois, who was here not long ago, went back to Chicago and told them that the far west would go democratic. His pink whiskers will turn blue when he gets the election returns from the far west on the 8th of November.

The inquisitive subscriber at Rockwood wants to know why the old men are not so gallant as when they were boys. It is because the old women are not so buoyant as when they were girls.

Some 424 years ago Columbus came over here and discovered us. He will probably regret it through eternity if our spineless administration gets another whack at things.

When you write to your friend on the border about the little shower last Friday, he'll probably believe you without the necessity of a sworn statement.

THE FARMER AND HIS TOWN.

The life of the country town hangs on the surrounding agricultural community. To a marked degree the weal or woe of the one is inseparably connected with that of the other. If the town is slow the farming community suffers; if the fields fail to produce fully, or if there is a waste of crops, the town as well as the country loses. The country town is directly interested in crops, especially in marketing. One authority has estimated that of each dollar paid by the ultimate consumer for farm produce the grower gets 53 cents, the railroad 7 cents and the middleman 40 cents. Another statistician figures that only 46 cents of the dollar falls to the man who tills the soil. Figures are here but relative. The important truth is that a large per cent of the difference between what the consumer pays and what the producer gets represents a loss that is shared in both the country and the country town. This is not all the country merchant loses. Every bushel of apples that goes to waste in a nearby orchard for want of market, as well as every other perishable product which remains unsold represents loss, not alone to the farmer but to the merchant.

Some New York housewives are rewarding faithful cooks with gold bees in brooch form, intending them to be a reminder of industry. This beats the plan of deeding the house and lot to them as an inducement to stay the second week out.

If the war keeps up a year or so longer William Waldorf Astor may be able to achieve his ambition of getting into the peacage. About $10,000,000 of American money would land him an earldom.

There is more excitement over a prize fight than a presidential election fight, because in the former the contestants occupy the same platform.

It is said that straws show which way the wind blows, but the trouble with a straw vote is that someone is blowing through it.

It is said that five-cent cigars will soon be four for a quarter. The twofers went long ago, but the corn cob and cornhusk crop was a big one this fall, so there is no need to despair.

In these prosperous democratic times champagne and beans would make a good meal—if the beans were only cheap enough.

If handshakes were votes the candidates would all be elected.
