"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

THEIR OPPORTUNITY

Three-fourths of the farmers of this vicinity have been persistent in their demands for a vegetable cannery. When the cannery was first mentioned they asked why its scope could not be enlarged so as to include vegetable canning, giving as a reason for their inquiries that there was not sufficient fruit being grown to keep the establishment running for more than a few months during the season.

Now their opportunity has come and if they are as eager to grow vegetables as they were two years ago they will have a home market for a million dollars' worth if they will produce what is demanded by Mr. Rupert for government use. By supplying the products required, with seeds furnished them at actual wholesale cost and the guarantee that farm labor will not be disturbed, they can make their farms yield them big returns this year. Not only for this year but for several years to come, for there is going to be a demand for canned vegetables long after the war is over; besides the cannery will be fully equipped to do the work and by another year it will be in shape to operate practically all the year through.

A home market is far preferable to one far away. As long as the government takes the products it is a home market, for all produce and labor payments will be paid weekly and there will be no loss nor long waits for the money. The farmers, and in fact everybody, should feel encouraged to know that the opportunity is here to get good returns for every effort to produce that which the soil and climate is best adapted for in this territory.

DAYS TO CELEBRATE

Yesterday this country, or a portion of it, celebrated Lafayette day— which, quite incidentally, was also Lusia day—yet it is more than probable that not one-tenth of the people knew or thought anything about either of them. There are two other days at least that ought to be kept in grateful remembrance by the American people. Of course there is no danger that Fourth of July will ever be forgotten. Of that we Americans may say with the Psalmist: "If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; yea, if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy."

But there are two other days that we cannot pass by. July 14 is a great national holiday of the French, the day of the fall of the Bastille, the symbol of Bourbonism and despotism. There ought to be such a celebration of that event in America equal to that of any other day in the year. By a little effort the grange field day in Gresham could be made to fit in with such a celebration here. But nationally every nationality except the German could make the day a fitting occasion to join with France in its observance.

There should be no place in such a celebration for those who are still traitorously talking of "our kaiser." We have no thought of outlining a program.

But an even greater day is June 15, the anniversary of the signing of Magna Charta in 1215. Surely in such a year as this the American nation cannot afford to let that great day go by unremembered and unremembered. Seven hundred years ago our ancestors had a conception of liberty of which the people of Germany have not today even a dream. And they embodied their ideas in statute laws. Centuries before the French had even imagined that such a thing as liberty was possible our English ancestors had, if they had not established their liberty, at least established the only principles on which it could rest. There are no such days in the German calendar. The German people have fought many battles for liberty, but, after the battle was won, they have invariably surrendered to their rulers. Never has a German king been beheaded or banished.

Let us keep Bastille day in mind, and, above all, let us not forget the great Anglo-Saxon festival—Magna Charta day. It means much, not only for English-speaking peoples, but for all peoples of all races, even the Germans, as we hope they will one day realize. The present German theory of government is an insult to the human soul.

SOLDIERS OF THE SOIL

Mr. Rupert in his address at the farmers' meeting on Friday night assured his hearers that farm labor will not be called upon to serve in the army or navy, at least this year. Mr. Rupert evidently spoke with authority, for it is known that there has been a request made of the war department for such exemption.

The west is by no means unaware of the danger that threatens the east, nor of the necessity for soldiers to go to France. It realizes the necessity for taking every precaution possible for fortifying the Atlantic coast and providing an ample army to defend it. But the west has its own problem, also, and one, too, in which the east shares, as the west shares in the fears and apprehensions felt along the eastern seaboard. From the west must come the nation's greatest food supply, and, in addition, food sufficient to feed the nation's allies. As the east has gone seriously about its immediate problem so has the west gone about its own immediate work. It is planting as it has never planted before.

The west needs men for this work no less than the east needs men for its first line of self defense. Farm labor will not be called upon this season to enter the army, but it will be expected to remain on the farms and serve as soldiers of the soil, and in this way render the greatest possible service, not only to the people of the United States, but to our allies on the other side of the water. What is needed is an S. O. S. call for farm labor.

The need is real, but it would be difficult, if not entirely impossible to oblige men to stay on the farms if they preferred to work elsewhere or if they preferred to join the ranks. It would be more to the point if the city of New York could find some means of sending young men to the fields in the west. The S. O. S.—Soldiers of the Soil—call ought to be popular. The scarcity of farm labor is one of the biggest problems facing the country today. It seems that only by organization can we solve it. Half a dozen regiments of Soldiers of the Soil, organized in New York and forwarded to the west would be a splendid beginning.

The inquisitive subscriber at Troutdale asks if it wouldn't be proper to omit sauerkraut from the bill of fare so long as the war lasts, because of its German character. Well, hardly. We are in favor of getting rid of everything German—provided it is something good to eat.

The country needs every man who knows how to build a ship or make a food crop, just as it needs every man who is available for service in the ranks. Entire nations conduct war nowadays and it is no longer a matter of sitting down and reading news from the trenches.

One reason why we were so anxious to get our congressional delegation to vote right on the selective conscriptive bill was that we didn't want ribald outsiders to say that it is a long Lane that has no turning. And Lane voted right that time.

What do you think of the man who started yesterday to dig a patriotic garden, and, when he had turned up worms enough to fill a can, softly laid down his spade and started off to the Columbia slough cat-fishing?

In this period of transition a comfortable place for the winter flannels, overcoats and rubbers should be provided for their summer retirement, and a careful honing given to the fly swatter and lawn mower.

A Kentucky woman shot at her husband and killed a valuable cow. The man could easily have been replaced by a "war husband", but it is going to be difficult to replace the cow in times like these.

It is expected that the government will mobilize the stenographers. If it does we shall tell the president of the chewing gum trust to get his distributing facilities adjusted to a new situation.

It begins to appear that eating grain instead of drinking it would go a long way toward keeping down living expenses, but there are yet a few who are not in favor of national prohibition.

The Beavers are in the cellar, but still, there's nothing like keeping the percentage down to prevent the fans from suffering from a severe attack of ingrowing over-confidence.

The military strategy needed most at this time is more feet headed for the farms and fewer mouths shooting themselves off on the street corners.

Since the revolution in Petrograd we've been trying to find out who put the U. S. in Russia.

PROFIT IN VEAL

It has been suggested that no action be taken in the proposed boycott of veal to assist in overcoming the beef shortage, without first considering every phase of the situation. Beef bred calves are seldom slaughtered for veal except when there is a slump in the beef market or when feed is scarce and high. In 1916 over 6,000 calves were shipped from the ranges to the Portland Union Stock yards, while since 1910, under improved beef conditions, there is little tendency on the part of the beef men to veal their calves. During the year just past only 227 calves were received from the country east of the mountains and these were largely from the dairy farms. The supply of veal in Portland is being derived at this time almost entirely from the dairy farms of Oregon and Washington. These calves, therefore, are of dairy breeding and unsuitable for growing into mature beef. If a veal calf weighing 20 pounds is converted into a 1000 pound steer, it is ordinarily assumed that there is an actual profit of 800 pounds of beef, but this does not necessarily follow, owing to the fact that the feed required to grow the steer may have a greater money value than the beef, and also the same feed might be worth more in the food production campaign if used in some other way.

The average dairy bred steer not only does not pay for the feed it takes to make him into mature beef but may fall to pay for the feed necessary to market him into veal especially as veal must be fattened almost entirely on whole milk. As a result we find some of our most progressive dairymen slaughtering their surplus male calves at birth since their cost accounts have shown that the milk necessary to fatten the calf was worth more than the veal produced.—E. L. Potter, Professor of Animal Husbandry, O. A. C.

A Symbol of Health. The Pythagorians of Ancient Greece ate simple food, practiced temperance and purity. As a badge they used the five pointed star which they regarded as a symbol of health. A red five pointed star appears on each package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and still fulfills its ancient mission as a symbol of health. If you are troubled with indigestion, biliousness or constipation, get a package of these tablets from your druggist. You will be surprised at the quick relief which they afford. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.
