SENATOR LANE.

Everyone in Oregon will sympathize with Senator Harry Lane, who is lying near death's door in San Francisco. The fierce bombardment he received from all over this state when he refused to stand with the president in his first request upon congress for means to end the war, has no doubt been the instrument of Senator Lane's collapse.

Notwithstanding the cruel thrusts of democrats and republicans alike, because of his defection in a time when he should have stood for the republic against imperialism, no one wishes him bodily or mental misfortune. His mistake was a political one, and others more noted made the same mistake. Whether he can be of service to Oregon again, or not, is of small consequence in comparison to his health, and there is an unanimous feeling that wishes him a longer life and a life of usefulness in other directions.

CONSCRIPTIVE REGISTRATION.

The entire nation waited for President Wilson to name the day when all men between the ages of 21 and 30 must be registered for selective conscription. A year ago such a course would have been deemed impossible. But America is in the war for all it is worth, is discarding inefficiencies of all sorts, is seeking and adopting the finest, surest, most efficient instrumentalities for making the nation the great determining factor in the winning of the war.

Selective conscription will be a blow at the giant of waste which always challenges the progress of a free people. Time, money and energy in fabulous amounts would have been required for the volunteer system, and for all this we would have got results calling for more money, time and energy which ought to be put into other things. Besides, there would have been a waste of efficiency through the drawing off of men for the army who are needed more in other places. A foe to efficiency has been struck down.

And we have struck a blow at the grant of the class spirit. Still again we have struck a blow at Prussianism in its own stronghold, for Germany now knows that an armed force from America will be with the allies this year, something that would have otherwise been almost impossible. And, best of all we have struck a blow at imperialism here in America—that dark force working in many ways to weaken, distract, clog, neutralize us. Driven into the secret places by the declaration of war, this force is, nevertheless, still operative among us, arguing for a purely defensive war, delaying any action looking to the aid of England and France, discouraging enlisting, and, until now, endeavoring to keep us from adopting the only method for creating an army in time to be of practical service.

It was a good day for us when the American congress served notice on the Prussian sympathizers in America that we, not they, would manage our part of this war.

FOOD CONSERVATION.

A Portland food handler who has lately had occasion to inquire what the people are eating says that it has seemed to him as if the people were eating almost nothing. The explanation is found in the fact that recently the people have been throwing away only about half as much food as usual. This is shown in Portland by a statement from one of the garbage collectors, who has noticed the great falling off in waste food that was formerly sent to the incinerator.

This indicates that even with an abundance of food in sight at prices which many can pay without great inconvenience, the people have not been deceived. And when people turn to the practical aspects of the war in this spirit, the statesmen and generals and admirals who are concerned with the problems of raising an armed force and getting it into action may take heart.

Of necessity they must depend to a large extent upon the people to cooperate with them in the food conservation campaign. Impending famine may in time, of course, automatically bring this about, but it seems apparent that Portland is not waiting to be driven by adversity to do what is expected of it. The same may be said of the farming districts, although the waste there and in the small towns has never been very great at any time, although it sometimes happens that rather high-priced food is given the stock and chickens which was altogether unnecessary.

Of particular interest, in view of the gloomy wheat crop report recently sent out from Washington, is the statement that whereas formerly great quantities of bread were thrown away, now the amount is becoming negligible. This shows that bread which has dried is being used for puddings and in other ways with which the efficient housewife is familiar. The practice of cutting the bread at the table as needed, so that the remainder, being in the loaf, does not dry so easily, may be coming back into fashion. It is a good scheme and merits a revival, as does any other means of reducing the wastes of wheat.

The pope has designated June as a month of prayer for a just peace. But, as we remember it, prayers and deeds go together, and the way to pray for peace effectively is to omit no effort or fail in no purpose to crush the last vestige of resistance out of the enemy. "Fight as you pray."

One million dollars will be taken by the government on chewing gum. Now, girls, scramble around under the table leaves, on the chair backs and other hiding places for the chew you forgot to take with you after plastering it there.

When you are putting away your next winter's supply of good things, don't forget a bushel or so of lye hominy. There's something inspiring about the stuff that can't be described.

A shortage of wheat will necessitate a cornbread revival; but look out for the "corner" on corn in restraint of trade, and be unusually active in the amen corner work.

The government is touching us now at $33 per capita. If you know how much of it you are paying you can easily figure out what per cent of a per capita you are.

The incubator season being over we would suggest that we act the roosters and save the hens. A fat rooster duly disjunctured with dumplings—oh, Hallelujah.

A cable dispatch reads: "Blockade has caused many Greeks to starve." If that is true the Greek back there are of a different breed than those in Portland.

If the hotels substitute girls for boys as bell hops the era of chin chuckling and phoning for ice water every fifteen minutes would commence at once.

We are tired of hearing that American genius will finally overcome the submarines. We want to see those overcomers do a little come-acrossing.

"Britain Tightens on Liquor," says a contemporary headline. We have always noticed that a few snorts will tighten anybody who swigs it.

The "setting" egg season is about over for this year among the poultry advertisers. Some of the dictionaries will please take notice.

General Sherman's son says it's worse than dad said it was. But then the old General hadn't run up against German warfare.

Don't waste flour. Make the pie custard, lemon, pumpkin or cream, so that it won't need the cover.

Starch in ice cream is a pure waste; besides we prefer the pure Jersey brand.

PROVIDES GOOD ROADS WHERE MOST NEEDED

"I am for the road bond issue because I believe it will give us of Oregon good roads and at places where we have not good roads now, and where we need them most. There is only one plan before us by which we may obtain some really good and serviceable roads and that is the present scheme of permitting the state to sell $6,000,000 in four per cent serial bonds to be redeemed both in principal and interest by the revenue derived from a state tax on automobiles. If we do not adopt this plan we of Oregon will continue as we have already continued too long, with poorly drained, wretchedly located and miserably surfaced roads, impassable in winter and impractical and expensive at all times.—Rufus C. Holman, president of State Association of County Judges and County Commissioners.

TAXES NOT INCREASED.

Among the false statements circulated by opponents of the $6,000,000 road bond bill is one to the effect that the burden of paying for the bonds will be saddled upon the taxpayers of the state. The fact is that under the quarter-mill state road tax, which is in effect and has been for the last four years, the taxpayer assessed for $1000 will pay 25 cents a year. In the 25 years the bonds are to run the total amount the taxpayer will contribute under this tax will be $6.25 and its payment will be distributed over a period of 25 years. Besides, this tax is already provided by statute and must be paid regardless of whether the road bonds are voted at the special election June 4. The revenue from the increased automobile licenses will be more than sufficient to pay both interest and principal on the road bonds. The direct taxes of the individual taxpayer, therefore, will not be increased if the road bonds are voted.

The leaves of the olive are not deciduous. Those who see olives for the first time are disappointed by the dusty color of the foliage. Those who are familiar with them find a charm in the rippling changes of their slender graygreen leaves.

The simplest and probably most ancient method of preparing grain for food was by pounding it between two stones. The Israelites in the desert appear to have possessed mortars and handmills among their domestic utensils.
