THE ART OF CANNING.

Announcement that the county fair will conduct a canning contest again this year should meet with a ready response from the girls of every community within the fair's territory. The contest is educational and there will be some compensation for the efforts put forth—perhaps not enough to pay any girl's expenses, but the benefits to be gained will be worth a great deal more than the time and money spent in the endeavor.

Many young women of this and other states have been specially trained by the public schools in the practice of preserving fruits and vegetables. They know about the "cold pack" and other methods. They know how to make the best use of sugar in preserving fruits; also how to preserve fruits without the use of sugar—an efficiency that cannot be overlooked this year, with sugar at its present cost. They know how to economize in the use of fuel; how to get the maximum results from a minimum of labor. They know not only the theory of food preserving, but they know the business from the practical standpoint as well. They have been taught not only the why and wherefore, but the how.

Important and valuable as this knowledge is under normal conditions, it is doubly important and valuable today when this country faces the necessity not only of feeding itself, but of raising and preserving a vast surplus with which to feed its allies. All young women should make the greatest possible use of her knowledge. Many will soon be graduated. If they would they could write a new sort of class history by dedicating themselves to the great work this summer for which their training has, to some extent, fitted them. They could pledge themselves to do their "bit" throughout the season in home canning duties.

There are numbers of housewives who know little of the modern methods of canning and preserving. The school authorities might devise some means whereby the school equipment and the domestic science teachers be employed in demonstration work. It has been suggested that the branch libraries could be made use of for the same purpose. Here the women of the branch library district could conveniently assemble and under the direction of an efficient domestic science teacher, learn how to preserve both fruit and vegetables in the easiest, simplest, cheapest, safest way.

IRELAND'S NEW HOPE.

For many years it has been a dream of Americans of Irish birth or descent that out from this country might go the determining influence that should bring home rule for Ireland. At last it appears as if the dream were to come true.

England needs and welcomes our help in the war for democracy today. Its great men have been here studying with our leaders the problem of the war. They have expressed surprise at the magnitude of America's war effort and the fullness of its awakening to the responsibilities and opportunities thrust upon it by Germany's insistence upon piracy. But they have also learned that a great and powerful body of American citizenship will not put itself wholeheartedly into the conflict so long as there is any question about Ireland receiving what its sane leaders consider to be justice and fair play at the hands of England.

Here they have got at first hand an idea of the fidelity to Ireland of the American who looks back to the old sod as the land of his fathers. And it has transformed or crystallized their ideas. Balfour cabled to London his convictions that in order to bring Americans unitedly into the war, the Irish question must be settled.

There was a moment of wild dreams when a few misguided men thought that help was to come for them out of Germany, the destroyer of Belgium and the treacherous betrayer of sacred trusts. It couldn't. There is help for no one there. Intrigue did its worst, fanaticism broke loose, and rebellion arose, only to be crushed out in blood.

The Irishmen who were looking wistfully across the blockade for assistance were looking in the wrong direction. Here in the west where the ideal of an Ireland ruled by Irishmen, yet an integral part of the British empire, has been cherished, lies the new hope of Ireland, and the time is at hand when America, which is to win the war, will exert just the influence most calculated to effect the wise settlement of this great dispute.

LANE'S SUCCESSOR.

The death of Senator Harry Lane, which took place in San Francisco on Wednesday night, will give Governor Withycombe an opportunity to name his successor. That the appointee will be a republican is certain, and that he will be one who will work with Senator Chamberlain in all patriotic war measures is desirable. Oregon has long needed a republican senator at Washington, but one in full sympathy with the president at this time is imperative. We believe that Governor Withycombe will find such a man and that he will be a true representative of the state and public sentiment, and one who can be elected to succeed himself when his two years of service has expired.

UNDER THIRTY-ONE.

On June 5 the men in the military class, that is, those between 21 and 30—and they are 39 until they reach their 31st birthday—will be called on to register for military service. They will simply be representatives of the nation in its military aspect. All will not be called, for there are many exemptions provided for. But all must register. That should be made abundantly clear. The law is an admirable one. It was favored by the people who felt that we were bound to resist German aggression, and desired to put the nation into the best possible condition to do this.

Replying to the inquisitive subscriber at Troutdale we will say that Gresham will not seek to get the next republican convention. What's the use? By the time Gresham had spent a lot of money and sent a big delegation, Seaside would show up with a bunch of girls dressed in bathing suits and nose us out.

And while those who have attained their twenty-first birthday and have not yet attained their thirty-first birthday are putting their names on the rolls, let them remember that there are lots of fellows, whose thirty-first birthday is mere history, that are envying them.

Among the other things that do not look especially good or reflect a shimmering quality of credit upon the United States is the backwardness of the wealthiest country of all time in absorbing a war loan.

The reports indicate that the eastern Multnomah food acreage has been so greatly increased that there will be in eastern Multnomah a greater food eatage than there would have been otherwise.

John D. Rockefeller has bought $5,000,000 worth of liberty bonds, but we suppose he will be able to buy some more as soon as he looks in the pockets of his other suit of clothes.

It begins to look as if some of the O. N. G. boys may be in France within a year after they left the Mexican border, which shows that if you want to see the world, join the guard.

The indications appear to be that the winter wheat crop has awakened to a sense of its responsibilities, and is preparing to do its duty to the best of its ability.

It is reported now that the castor bean crop may be a failure this year. The kiddies can contemplate the report without having crevasses in their tear ducts.

Another thing that you can be sure of is that June 5th will be a mighty notable and highly honored occasion in the annals of these United States.

If you are under thirty-one years of age, remember that you are only thirty and must register.

NOTICE OF FINAL ACCOUNT.

In the County Court of the State of Oregon, for Multnomah County. In the matter of the Estate of John P. Hintermann, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Frank Michels, administrator of the estate of John P. Hintermann, deceased, has filed his final account in the County Court of the State of Oregon for the County of Multnomah, and that Monday the 4th day of June, 1917, at the hour of 9:30 a. m. of said day at the Court House at Portland, said County and State, has been appointed as the time and place for the hearing of objections to said final account and the settlement thereof.

NO BASEBALL NEXT YEAR.

We must confess that the solemn announcement that there may be no big league baseball in 1918 didn't produce the sinking-of-the-heart effect that might have been expected. Nor did we discover any upward surge of protest against infringement of the fundamental right of all good Americans to shout themselves hoarse over a homer or pass an hour in front of the bulletin boards, trying to dope out the winners of the morrow.

It is a curious sensation that is produced by the outlook of empty diamonds and silent grandstands—not at all the sort of a sensation that would seem natural to one who knew the use of the bat before he knew how to handle a fork properly—a queer feeling that, after all, league baseball doesn't fit in with the nation's big business and that it might as well take a vacation for a year or two.

They passed through the same thing over in England, only in different circumstances. There they muddled along with the volunteer system for a much longer time than was good for them, and the professional football players kept right on playing—fine, robust, strapping fellows of the sort that Kitchner wanted. Football was a part of the system, and Britain didn't see why it should get out of the ruts. So the game continued to keep men out of the army and absorb the attention of its myriad followers.

But Britain managed to get its eyes open to the fact that it had better or at least more pressing sport, and in the end it turned from football to cannon balls. We are going at it differently. We are to start with selective conscription, which will be likely to make gaps in the baseball outfits, and so we are already beginning to talk about suspending the big game for awhile.

Of course, we shall miss it, but who of us would enjoy sitting in a crowd of men and watching eighteen husky boys swinging bats, tossing balls, and wearing masks, when other boys like them were wearing gas helmets and handling rifles and grenades?
