A MESSAGE TO BERLIN.

We Americans are going to send a message to Berlin—to Germany and its allies through the results of the call for the second liberty loan. The nature of that message should be unmistakable. Even in a greater degree than the first loan this second call for the nation's financial support will indicate to Germany whether we are wholeheartedly in a fight to the end. An impulsive burst of patriotic fervor might be the German explanation of the response to the first loan, but with the nation now beginning to feel the realities of war, with its burdens becoming ever more heavy, such an interpretation cannot so easily be put on a hearty response to the new call.

A great oversubscription will indicate to Germany that the people are united and will show forcibly the financial strength of America. A failure to respond will be understood by Germany to mean that the country is not in the war to the full limit of its resources, and thus give heart and courage to the armies with which our soldiers will soon be backed. Aid and comfort to the enemy will result from a failure to make the new loan a success. If the response is worthy of the nation Germany will know that future calls will be met as this has been met and can only divine that the end for her is in sight.

Patriotism should prompt a nation to subscribe to the war loans, but their terms would make them attractive to those who never felt a patriotic impulse. The new issue provides for interest at 4 per cent, and is tax exempt except for inheritance, income and excess of war profit taxes. This is more than equivalent to the return on ordinary 6 per cent bonds not so readily negotiable or desirable.

For the small investor liberty bonds are especially attractive and are tax exempt because the poor man will not be hit by excess profits, inheritance or income tax. The response will be judged not only by the amount subscribed but by the number of subscribers. The question is Germany or the United States and the answer rests with the people, all of the people.

A CHANCE FOR THE DRAFTED.

An opportunity is being made to give the selective draft men a chance to become officers in the army. The government has decided to open another training camp for officers, primarily to train men now serving as privates or non-commissioned officers in the guard army and the national army. Graduates and undergraduates of specified colleges will be accepted, but the course is mainly for men in the service. Such men will be trained at each of the regular army, national guard and national army camps.

It is the opportunity offered to men in the service that will attract the most attention. There are hundreds of privates, especially in the national army, who would be well equipped to command had they the technical training. Without the third training camp they might not be able to demonstrate their fitness. Now every ambitious and keen-eyed private has something definite to look forward to. If he sticks to his job, does his work faithfully and intelligently, he is likely to be chosen as one of the 1.7 per cent that will be selected from each unit to be trained. The road to promotion is made easier, a definite goal is set. This should have an important effect on the morale of the drafted army.

Sometime this month occurs the anniversary of the Baldwin apple—we don't know how many years ago. Today is the 482d anniversary of Christopher Columbus' Adam's apple. And sometime next year will come the anniversary of our Adam's apple. We shan't tell which one.

Do you old people remember that 3-cent stamp, now to be found only in collections? Well, it will be dropping in on you again in a few weeks.

WILLIAM H. BOND.

William H. Bond, who died in Gresham on Tuesday morning last, was as deeply interested in public affairs as in life itself. He was a staunch patriot and keenly alive to all public matters. As a pioneer he was linked to the early life of Oregon and had seen the growth of the great west—as but the few who yet remain saw it—for more than 65 years. His was of more than usual intelligence for he had a superior education and was a keen observer of events. The community has been the richer for his long life among us and will miss him now that he has gone. He was a man of strong personality, independence and kindly nature. Always showing himself friendly, he had many friends, whom he was ever ready to serve to the limit of his ability. His death will be sincerely deplored by the legion he knew as friends—mostly new ones, for, of his earlier acquaintances many have preceded him to that other shore where all friendships are the same.

GERMANY'S WAR LOAN.

Perhaps there is more than a coincidence in the launching of a German war loan at the same time as the second United States liberty loan. A challenge may have been intended by Germany. At any rate a challenge exists. This is Germany's seventh war loan. The request for money is made of a people who have been bearing the burdens of war for more than three years. Again and again have they been asked to dig down deeper until they must keenly feel the sacrifice. We have not yet begun to feel the real burden of war, have been asked only once previously to lend money to the government.

If the response in this country to the second call should be meager and that of Germany to its seventh should be generous what a cause for jubilation would the German junkers have! "The Yankees have got the money, but they won't give it for war," they could say with some semblance of reason, and, "if they won't give it now why should we fear for the future?"

This is too much moral support to give a nation that has shown itself an enemy of mankind. Americans know that America is patriotic and that any failure to respond will be due to lethargy and failure to understand the importance of subscribing, rather than to lack of unity or love of country. But Germany can not be expected to put this interpretation on an outcome so unfortunate.

Germany's challenge must be met. We are hampered in the contest because the German lender has twenty years in which to pay for his subscription, while Americans have no such privilege. German subscriptions, also, will be reckoned in the depreciated mark. But Germany, in comparing the response to her loan with that of the United States, if such a comparison serves her purpose, will not recognize these facts. We shall be judged on the surface of the response. It should be so hearty that there will be no possibility of a misunderstanding, or distortion of meaning by the German government.

Latest crop estimates, furnished by the weather bureau, give Oregon 13,000,000 bushels of wheat, 11,100,000 bushels of oats, 5,280,000 bushels of barley, 7,670,000 bushels of potatoes and 1,809,000 tons of hay. With present prices, which will not be lowered, Oregon can afford to raise the allotted limit on liberty bonds by another million or so.

From the eruptions that are making their appearance on the body politic, we take it that the itch for office is far more prevalent in Oregon than the wooly aphis in a Hood River apple orchard.

Red, white and blue are glorious colors, but it takes the long green to make them four square. Come across with the money for that liberty bond.

With postal cards at two cents each for postage war romances will get a solar plexus blow which will make easier work for the postal clerks.

Some of the men who are going to fill the offices in Oregon are now in khaki. They will introduce themselves through the primaries in due time.

From authentic reports received up to the hour of going to press it is noticed that the slack is being taken out of slackers.

Are you making preparations for the necessity of giving thanks next month without the aid of turkey?

There is nothing exclusive about the loan subscription. You don't have to be rich to subscribe.

That new revolution down in Mexico is playing to the bleachers. The grand stand is empty.

J. C. HESSEL.

In the death of J. C. Hessel on Wednesday morning last, the town of Gresham and all of Eastern Multnomah and Clackamas counties lost a progressive business man who was mainly instrumental in building up a business that had no competition yet never became a monopoly. The farm machinery business was unthought of in this section until Mr. Hessel came here from the east a dozen years ago and seized an opportunity that revealed his farseeing business qualities. His enterprise was rewarded in the development of the agricultural and dairying industries to such an extent that his business became a paying one in a short time. And the industries he helped to create attained largely the growth that now characterize them through his optimistic foresight. His friendship was as great as his business ability, and the regrets that will follow his departure will be as sincere as the sympathies that go out to those who are left to mourn him.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Another election is rapidly approaching and every loyal citizen should see that he is properly registered.

Its up to you Mr. Voter to scan the list of prospective candidates and see who they are and what they stand for.

The day is here when hot air and promises don't pay the war bills.

Make the candidates show their qualifications for seeking a high salary at your expense.

Watch every measure having to do with local taxation and creation of new offices and expense.

Now is the time to start making the fight for tax reduction in order that we may be better prepared to assist the government in the large sums it must necessarily have at this time.

City, county and state taxes should be cut to a minimum and every useless and unnecessary office should be done away with to help offset the added tax burdens necessitated by the war.

Every commercial club and civic organization in the state should exert itself to see that the people register and that responsible citizens run for office.

Nothing will more encourage investments in a state than a helpful spirit of co-operation on the part of a city or state government, toward its industries.

The railroads propose to see that the crops of the Northwest are properly handled this year and are cooperating with the government to that end. Plans have been perfected and J. D. Farrell, president of the O.-W. R. & N. railroad is looking after this end of the work in the Northwest. Under him there is no question but that real results will be obtained.

Who remembers the time when we used to dicker for the things we bought instead of submitting quietly as we do now?

Now that the fairs are all over and the spud crop is being harvested, more attention should be given to the goose bone.

Market reports indicate that hides are getting cheaper. They ought to be, there has been so much skinning of late.

Cannery labor is scarce at Brownsville. Plant is busy, but help is hard to get.

Gresham Library Notes.

Books for the soldiers libraries are being shipped from the Portland library in large numbers. More than 11,000 have been sent and still more are being prepared for shipping. All camps and cantonments are now supplied with books.

The fund collected for the war libraries amounted to about $1,250,000. This sum will be spent to the last penny for free libraries for our soldiers and sailors. The cost of the campaign was paid for by individual subscription of those who had charge of the campaign.

Among the new books received at the Gresham library during the past week is,

"The Tractor and Its Influence upon the Agricultural Industry," by B. W. Currie. This gives the complete story of the manufacture and sale of the farm tractor.

Another recent book is "How Belgium Saved Europe" by Dr. Sarolea, Belgian consul in Edinburgh.

Teachers in the rural schools may find it convenient to telephone to the Gresham library for information on questions that come up in their classes, or they may urge their pupils to use the library by telephone.

ANOTHER SOLDIER BOY WRITES CAMP NEWS

The Outlook has been given a letter from another of our boys, who is now at Camp Greene. Curtis Hendricks left the high school here last spring to enter the service of our country. His description of the routine of camp life will be read with interest by his friends. The letter is dated October 3 and says:

Dear Mother:—We are now installed in our new camp, the largest in the United States. There are over twenty-five thousand men here from almost every state in the union.

It would take more time than I will ever get to walk through from one end to the other of the camp. We rise at 5:45 and assemble at 5:50. There is no time wasted here. At 7 we begin drill and continue until 11:30. At 12 we eat and again at 1 go out for drill, coming in at 5. We eat again at 5:30 and at 6 assemble for retreat. We have from 6:15 to 9 to do our washing, writing, etc. We are allowed out of camp with a pass until 11, the pass starting at 6:15.

Charlotte, a city of about 50,000, is situated in a rolling country of cotton plantations. It is chiefly a manufacturing city. The city is surrounded with military police. Every street corner has its provo sergeant. Any man in town or elsewhere must be in camp at 11 sharp or a summary court martial is held and the offender severely punished.

I received your welcome letter today; was glad to get it.

Our tents here are equipped with electric lights, stoves and iron beds. Each company has its own bathhouse.

I guess this will do for this time for I must write to Robert and dad. My new address will be, Co. K. 162 Infantry, Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. Your loving son,

CURTIS.

The cost of grain has increased 260 per cent over the average price for twenty years. Freight rates have advanced 3½ per cent while supplies and wages on railroads have advanced from 50 to 300 per cent.

Eastern Oregon's Copper group has been sold to San Francisco capitalist.

A new condensory is to be ready to operate in Bandon by April.

Big paper mills at Oregon City now working on 8-hour schedule announce they cannot accede to demand of union for closed shop. It now remains to be seen whether walking delegates will call strike.

The government is calling for men to cut spruce timber for aeroplane manufacture. With 10,000 men shortage in logging camps, this call will increase labor famine.

Pacific coast shipyard strikes make joyful front-page news in Berlin.
