WHY APPEAL?

Some weeks ago officials in charge of liberty loan publicity sent from Washington a request to the city editors of every important newspaper, both large and small, for publicity ideas. One of these appeals was received at the Outlook office, but ideas were scarce at the time, hence the only response from here was all the editorial publicity possible. The request especially desired that striking examples be submitted, whereby the country would be forced to read the arguments in favor of the third bond issue.

As stated, our only reply was in the form of editorials, but it is not claimed that we gave any "striking examples" that could be used. We felt that it was unfortunate that any arguments should have to be made in behalf of government bonds in wartime. We also felt, but did not suggest at the time, that the ideal way would be for the next issue to stand in a sort of a "here I am; take me" attitude, with the public doing the rest, but the situation did not work out that way. The gospel must go out into the highways and byways, convincing the people that the liberty bonds are the safest investment in the world.

The average man loves dogs. He may not own a dog, but probably he has a speaking acquaintance with several dogs in his neighborhood. The longer he knows a good dog the better he likes him. Let us assume that this man has owned a dog for several years and has come to think of him as one of the family. A day comes when the dog staggers into the yard panting for breath. The struggles of the animal are pitiful in the extreme. The owner rushes to the dog's assistance and calls for expert aid. The diagnosis is that the dog has been poisoned. Eventually the pet dies a horrible death. Flaming with righteous resentment, the owner goes out to look for the fiend who administered the poison. If some neighbor suggested, just them, that a collection be taken up to help hunt down the poisoner and see that he was adequately punished, do you suppose the dog owner would contribute. Certainly he would, and he would be especially anxious to raise such a fund if he found it would not be possible for him to take an active and personal part in the hunt.

Put yourself in the place of the man whose dog was poisoned. Think of your own boy or the son of a neighbor. They are at the front, perhaps fighting the enemy today in the greatest battle of the world. Along comes a German gas shell and perhaps your boy is taken to the hospital—poisoned and fighting for breath. It is not a pleasant thought, but it is perfectly true.

Are you willing to contribute to a fund to help hunt down the men who poison American boys with as great glee and with as little feeling as the object of your utmost hatred poisons a dog? If you are there is no necessity to argue with you about supporting the next liberty loan issue. Because the money one lends the nation is to be used largely to hunt down the Hun prisoners. If you would be spurred into instant action by the death of a dog, you ought to take an active interest in the lives and well being of the American soldiers.

DUTCH CAMOUFLAGE.

A bitter and insulting protest has been made by the Dutch Foreign minister of the Netherlands against the seizure of Holland shipping by the allied governments. His protest was to be expected for it is doubtful if any international law exists that will give one nation the right to take a neutral's property at any time. Yet there is the probability that the Netherlands government is more than willing to have the allied powers resort to a policy to which it dare not, for fear of Germany, consent. But the Dutch minister could have made his protest less insulting to President Wilson, even though it might not have pleased the kaiser so well. Perhaps he was in earnest; if so he was indiscreet, to say the least.

There is a word in the language called angary, taken from the Latin of lex angaria, which supersedes international law in this case. It is the English name for the supposed right and under it the claim refers to property when temporarily within the belligerent's control. The seizure of vessels and their use for purposes of transport were not uncommon three hundred years ago and it is regarded as possible today.

As a measure of exact justice the act is an offense, and as such requires atonement. Angary is not a right at all, but an act resorted to from necessity, for which apology and compensation must be made.

As a result of the seizure the people of Holland will get food which is impossible for them to receive. The ships will be insured for the benefit of their owners, paid for, and returned after the war is over. The Dutch minister is only trying a bit of camouflage to deceive the Germans, for it is far better than the allies take the ship as they did than to take them with Holland's consent.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

With the passage of the daylight saving bill it seems likely that clocks all over the nation will be turned forward an hour on the last day of this month. The chief objection heard against the bill is that the period fixed for daylight saving was not long enough, being only to the last Sunday in October.

Practically every country in Europe has adopted the plan of advancing the clock in the summer months. It gives more time for work when the best work can be done—in the daylight; it gives more time for recreation when this can be of the most value, and it permits an enormous saving in the consumption of artificial light, and hence of fuel. It requires going to bed an hour earlier than usual to do this but it can be done.

It has been estimated that $50,000,000 or more would be cut from the expense of American consumers. There are no grave objections to the scheme. Almost all of the opposition to it has come when it was proposed to introduce local measures with consequent possibility of confusion respecting train schedules, etc. No disturbance of this sort will be caused by a change national in scope. When the clocks are set forward the worker who has been going to work at 8 will get there apparently at the same hour, but really an hour earlier, and quit work in the same way.

Some fun has been poked at the daylight saving movement because it was "unscientific." There are so many hours of daylight each twenty-four and no known way of adding a second to them. Advocates of the plan have not pretended that it added to the hours so that the average worker could get the most use of daylight. "Unscientific" or not, it has worked wherever tried. It ought to be the means of increasing greatly the output of a million war gardens, even if it does nothing else.

The daylight-saving law will turn the hands of the clock ahead an hour next Monday, but it should be borne in mind that the real proposition is to put in a real day's work. You can't obtain by shifting the hands of the clock what you fail to achieve because your hands remain idle.

Henry Ford is now engaged in turning out the new American invention, "the submarine killer." Well, we have heard of all the possibilities of the Ford machine, but this is the first time that we have ever heard of the darn thing being able to swim.

We feel sorry for those who have made up their minds not to lend the government any more money, because we know how they ought to feel when the casualty lists begin to arrive from the big German drive now in progress.

Miss Laura Butter of Dallas was married recently. We haven't learned her weight, but at present prices of butter she must have come pretty dear; and then, her husband ought to be arrested for hoarding.

The coming liberty loan drive is only eleven days away, but remember that Germany's navy is only seven days away, across the ocean. The time is here for denial and sacrifice.

It will be pretty tough to have to get up an hour earlier next Monday morning, right after the big feast we expect to have on eggs next Sunday.

This is the year in which too many patriots are thinking to themselves: Give me an office and I don't care who gets the kaiser's scalp.

These warm rains seem to be nothing less than an invitation to the fruit crop to come out and be killed again.

A road that is paved with good intentions is always jammed with traffic.

FISHING FOR FUN.

Here it is, early in the spring—rather earlier than spring—and fish stories have begun coming in. There are tales of 20-inch trout being caught in Johnson creek. The trout is a particular sort of fish, something of an aristocrat in fact, and the man who captures one twenty inches long has a right to crow over the man who goes down to the Columbia slough for a mess of plebian catfish. Yet these big trout were ever ready to change their menu. They grabbed the bait with the result that their story is told and they have passed into history.

However, the trout is not for everyone. Some people must be content with catfish from the slough or the other varieties they can sometimes buy at the markets. The trout is not for the man who isn't ready to loaf along the banks of the creek, but it will nibble at a worm just now. After awhile it will want salmon eggs. The cork float and sinker are not needed, either, and as they are dear to the hearts of countless thousands who were boys once before the era of new fangled poles, reels and silk lines with flies and sinew leaders, some, at least are able to take their fishing without frills and without benefit of scientific training.

Sitting there on the bank, with a willow pole in hand, waiting for the signal to jerk, the old-time fisherman was at peace with the world. All he had to do was to watch the current with half closed eyes and suddenly it appeared to stop. It was the fisherman who was moving and, without effort, he was carried away to those mysterious realms where all is happiness and where pipe or plug tobacco can be had for the asking.

Numerous efforts have been made by the fishing clubs to popularize the new fangled brand of angling. But there are some who will never learn from the rules laid down, for they point to the fact that the small boy with a crooked pole, a string and some of the old baits can catch just as many fish as the fisher student with his high-priced outfit. Yet in the old days everything was fish that could be caught with a hook. Now no attention is paid to a fish unless it is game—that is by the sports.

In recent years the government has been stocking the streams with trout that will take almost any kind of bait offered them. The average man goes fishing more for the fun than the fish, but at the same time he does not feel resentful if a fish shows a willingness to become better acquainted. There are various signs of spring and many of them are false, but the first fish stories always tend to indicate that real spring is peeping over the fences and glinting along the creeks.

The inquisitive subscriber wants us to tell him the difference between a quartet and a quintet. Well, a quartet is composed of three singers and a tenor, while a quintet is made up of three singers and a tenor eleven.

Every occupation has its sorrows. On our way to the office this morning we kicked over a stone and there were six fat angle worms under it. And we had to get the blooming paper out today.

How could that jury in Judge Gaten's court render a verdict without evidence? And how could they get the evidence in a bootlegging case without sampling the contents of the bottles?

The paste used for wall paper may not be as good as of old, but we should worry, just so they don't cut down the quality of the rope to be used in hanging the traitors and spies.

Rabbits are selling in London for 42 cents each. We believe London could be made perfectly happy in a rabbit sort of way if she were located in the jackrabbit sections of eastern Oregon.

"The kaiser is the highest salaried monarch in the world," chirps a wise correspondent. He wouldn't have that distinction if he were the monarch of a newspaper office.

A great many people will spend hours talking of their garb and their age, but when it comes to combining the two and making it garbage, they change the subject.

Besides avoiding the danger of putting the enemy wise by your war talk, remember that a good deal of it sounds rather foolish to better informed people.

In addition to the land and labor there will have to be plenty of persistence and reasonable intelligence to break the garden product record.

Getting the smell of sauerkraut out of those German trenches will probably be the first job of the Americans.

The new national party will not be able to run its dry program down the throats of the socialists and I. W. W.
