FRENCH BUY BREAD ALREADY BAKED

French homes have not baked bread for hundreds of years. They have not even ovens nor baking tins in their kitchens. They rely upon the bakery. If you ask them to bake their own bread—for the bakery cannot supply quick breads made without wheat, the women of France must add another hour to their long day of toil. Will you ask them to do that? Or shall our homes carry the extra burden of doing without wheat?

Going without wheat adds directly to our forces in battle. Going without wheat loosens the slipping tension which limits our armed strength. The best we can do is too little.

Don't forget to slow up on the meat again. The reserve supply is being rapidly exhausted, and with no more food animals coming into the market at this season, we may soon be up against the meatless day once more. Mr. Hoover warns, unless we check up on our steaks and roasts. Cut down your meat consumption at least one third, and save the pork and the beef particularly. These can be shipped the most conveniently. Lamb, mutton, chicken and fish are the meats for good Americans.

Even if there's only a little wheat in it, don't eat that extra slice of war bread. Every ounce counts, and Uncle Sam is in the market to buy back every pint of wheat flour you can't use. How's the stock in your pantry? Enough to divide with the boys at the front? If so, get in touch with your county food administrator, who will tell you how to make the "divvy". Your money back, if you want it, and thanks from Uncle Sam.

As the American boy works his way through the barbed-wire and starts toward the German trenches, his worst foe is behind him. He is not afraid of the enemy in front. He can whip the Hun, just as the British and French can whip him; but he can't whip the German brewer at home, who is using coal while war industries suffer, and destroying food while his mother scrapes the crumbs from the table. But we can whip that German brewer for him, and we're going to do it.

Y. M. C. A. Men Killed.

Three Canadian Y. M. C. A. war work secretaries working in dug-outs close to the front line trenches were killed recently by shell fire.

Serve Double Purpose.

American Y. M. C. A. trucks and automobiles were placed at the disposal of the allied armies and used in transporting wounded men during the recent drive on the western front.

Twelve Workers Killed.

Twelve Y. M. C. A. war work secretaries have been killed while serving allied troops close to the front line in France. Two American women, canteen workers have also been killed.

Shell Kills Worker.

A German four-inch shell penetrated a Y. M. C. A. dug-out on the Flanders front and killed the secretary, Jack Lunsden.

GRESHAM LOCALS

Mrs. W. E. Parsons spent the week end at Kalama, Washington visiting with friends.

Mrs. C. O. Branson, who has been confined to her bed for more than a week, is much improved and will soon be out.

Thomas Ginder returned Wednesday from Bend, Oregon, where he had spent the past six weeks visiting with relatives.

A special meeting of Gresham grange will be held at the hall on tomorrow evening, June 1. All grangers are requested to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shipley went to Oswego yesterday, where they called on old friends and neighbors and visited with relatives.

John Winters surprised his friends by coming home from Klamath Falls, where he has been working for some time. He will probably remain here to work for the summer.

Bert Hoss, who has been at home on a furlough, has been recalled to Camp Lewis. He left this morning. It is expected that his company will leave for France in a short time.

Mrs. Albert Ekstrom received a letter one day this week from her brother, Chas. McCarter, who recently arrived in France. He is in a motor mechanics' regiment. He recently took a two-weeks' trip across country, driving a Packard truck. He reports that he is well and likes his work.

The celebration which was announced to be held tomorrow in honor of the 57th wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Wood, has been given up, on account of the illness of Mrs. Wood. She is reported to be improving, but is unable to stand the excitement of a public gathering such as was planned. The friends of the aged couple will content themselves by giving them a postcard shower. Their address is Gresham R. A.

Melvin Andrews of Pleasant Home and Mrs. Elsie Rafrod of Boring were married at Vancouver, Washington, one day this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gibbs received a letter today from their son Dewey, who is with the 162d Infantry in France. The letter was written on May 8. Dewey is well and happy and says he has grown an inch and a half since he enlisted and now weighs 150 pounds.

The Red Cross dinner and ice cream stands at the fair grounds today will net the workers about a hundred dollars.

DECORATIVE WORK CHANGES TO ART

The following is taken from the Ipswich, S. D., Tribune and has reference to a man who has relatives here:

Two weeks ago the Tribune mentioned the fact that Mr. Elford of Roscoe, was doing a mighty swell job of decorating in the office of J. W. Parmley.

When mention was made of this improvement the writer little dreamed that this piece of painting would develop into the finest of its kind in the whole west, and it is worthy of mention that for uniqueness and originality, nothing in any country excels it.

Beginning in the northeast corner of the larger room, the decorator shows Plymouth Rock, the eastern terminus of the great Yellowstone Trail. The Atlantic ocean, in all the colors of its placid calm, lies as far as the eye can reach to the east, while winding westward over the mountains, the Trail continues on in its course across a continent.

The states through which passes the Trail are made to show their most beautiful and picturesque exteriors. Lakes, rivers, fields of corn, boundless prairies, rocks, mountains and passes each for themselves are painted in hues consistent with prevailing conditions, while automobiles are seen coming and going in opposite directions, apparently intent upon their missions of furnishing the occupants not only pleasurable rides, but of conducting them through worlds of wonders and beauty.

Critics may well travel miles to look upon the rooms which are occupied by J. W. Parmley, the "Father of the Yellowstone Trail and its first president, to whom must be given the credit for furnishing the brain, brawn and activity which made possible an ocean to ocean highway across a land made happy, prosperous and beautiful through the genius of such men as J. W. Parmley.

The tourists of 1918 will linger long at Ipswich as they feast their eyes on the familiar landscape along the Yellowstone Trail and quietly commune with themselves concerning the man whose originality suggested the idea and the artist who so beautifully placed in colors, as a room decoration, all the principal features along the highway.

Build Hut Every Day.

Since August 4, 1914, not a day has intervened but a Y. M. C. A. hut has been erected in France for the allied soldiers.

Hohenlinden

Probably the most appropriate poem that could be printed today in connection with the war in France is "Hohenlinden" written by Thomas Campbell. With a complete change of names it would pass for something new to those who had never read it. "Hohenlinden" is an old favorite of the school readers of 50 years ago, and was one of the many poems that fired the souls of young declaimers. Were it a new poem of today it would easily rank as one of the best war productions of the period.

On Linden, when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
And dark as winter was the flow
Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

But Linden saw another sight,
When the drum beat, at dead of night,
Commanding fires of death to light
The darkness of her scenery.

By torch and trumpet fast arrayed,
Each horseman drew his battle blade,
And furious every charger neighed,
To join the dreadful revelry.

Then shook the hills with thunder riven,
Then rushed the steed to battle driven,
And louder than the bolts of heaven
Far flashed the red artillery.

But redder yet that light shall glow
On Linden's hills of bloodstained snow,
And bloodier yet the torrent flow
Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

'Tis morn, but scarce you level sun
Can pierce the war-clouds, rolling sun,
Where furious Frank and fiery Hun
Shout in their sulphurous canopy.

The combat deepens. On, ye brave,
Who rush to glory or the grave!
Wave, Munch! all thy banners wave,
And charge with all thy chivalry.

Few, few shall part where many meet!
The snow shall be their winding sheet,
And every turf beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

—Thomas Campbell.
