SUPPLY OF TEACHERS

A report from the Oregon state Normal school says that 135 graduates will receive diplomas or certificates to teach. This number is small compared with the demand for teachers everywhere and there is going to be a shortage notwithstanding the fact that all who are to receive certificates are not seniors, and the undergraduates will be given a two-year period of teaching before having to return for another year for a finishing course.

The history of the Oregon normal is clouded somewhat by the fact that four normal schools were voted out of existence in Oregon by the people because of the propensities of the members of the legislature to use them for "log rolling" or trading purposes. This had become so open and offensive that the normal schools at Ashland, Drain, Monmouth and Weston were voted out of existence and there was no such a thing as a normal school in Oregon for two years.

Eight years ago the state grange took the matter up and had the normal school at Monmouth restored. There have been several attempts to have another authorized, notably at Pendleton two years ago, but the people will not sanction another, fearing the same old tactics in the legislature. But there is really a need for a normal in Eastern Oregon and we believe an initiative petition this year would bring one unless the different towns up there kill each other through jealousy. Each wants the honor and is not willing to see another place favored.

The present Oregon law militates against an adequate supply of teachers. Formerly a high school graduate was allowed to teach a year before going to the normal. But now, no matter how proficient a graduate may be, it is required that at least one year must be spent at the normal first. This entails an expense of about $500 which but few high school graduates can afford. They should still be allowed to teach a year so as to earn the money for a normal course.

The difficulty of maintaining good public schools at a time when greater financial inducements in other employments are held out to teachers is a subject that has been much discussed everywhere. It has been made evident that to stop the "slowing down", which is already evident, and to prevent disruption is to increase salaries to a point more nearly equal to the pay in other lines.

To win the war some of our activities and institutions may well be suspended or "slowed down", but this can not be said of the public schools. The demand for trained minds is insistent, and after the war the need of such minds in the reconstruction periods will be continuous.

OUR BOYS AT THE FRONT

Recent press dispatches tell us a little of the presence of the American soldiers on the fighting front, and always there is praise for their discipline, courage and general fighting qualities. While they have so far taken no large share in the fighting, though they are now in the thick of things, and have been subjected to no such tests as those which the British and French have undergone, those of them that have been engaged have shown the greatest courage, and also much effectiveness in trench fighting.

The capture of Cantigny in forty-five minutes and the holding of it against at least three German assaults were no mean achievements. Fourteen Germans entered an American trench recently for the purpose of taking a few prisoners in order to determine whether the line was held by Americans. They found out but none of them returned. Wherever the Germans and Americans have come to close quarters the Americans have everywhere shown a great superiority.

This, of course, is what we expected. But it was not expected that they would so soon develop such skill. That they have done this is proved by the comments of experts of other armies. One operation has been spoken of as having been carried out with mathematical precision, the artillery and infantry co-operating with perfect exactness. No doubt there will be mistakes and blunders, some of which may prove costly. For these our people are quite prepared. But we may take a justifiable pride in the showing that has already been made, and surely may speak of it without laying ourselves open to a charge of boasting.

It is clear that though our men have the greatest respect for the prowess and courage of the enemy, they do not look on the Germans as supermen, and certainly are not scared by the old superstition of their invincibility. The American soldier is, as always, attacking with dash and daring, and his defense is of the stonewall variety. There are, it is believed, 299,000 of our men in the fighting zone, including those in General Foch's mobile reserve, and 100,000 elsewhere in the trenches. There are probably 300,000 or more going through their finishing course of training. These latter will soon be available for active service. So we shall make a considerable portion of the nation's power felt at no distant day. But it will only be a beginning.

Germany is up against a reserve that is practically inexhaustible, and that is even now formidable. We do not imagine that the Kaiser or his general staff are under any illusions as to the part that this nation is to play in the war, the great purpose of which is to break them and crush their power.

CELEBRATIONS

There is a movement on foot for a celebration at Gresham on the fourth day of July. But like most other "movements" it is on a slow train, and if anything is going to be done it will be held up until the last moment and then everybody will be in a rush.

Of course, if it is decided to hold a celebration, it will be held if the decision is not reached until the evening of the third. Last year some of the most important details were left until almost too late. The securing of an orator was one of those details. Judge McGinn was not asked to come here until 5 o'clock the evening before the fourth. Some other details were just as far behind.

The experience in getting an orator last year reminds one of Riley's poem about the Rossville lecture course. The people there got up a lecture course, but it took a great deal of preliminary work. For they met and talked at Williams', and 'greet to meet ag'in. And held another corkus when the next reports wuz in. Met ag'in at Samuelsen's and met ag'in at Moore's. And Johna put the shutters up and jest barr'd the doors— And yit, I'll jest be dagg-don'd if I didn't take a week 'Fore we'd settled whar to write to get a man to speak.

That is one of the troubles with many of the committees that are appointed at a mass meeting or from any other body. They move so slowly and so ponderously. They meet, agree to meet again and hold "another corkus when the next reports are in." So if we are going to celebrate let's do it and let's begin now and do things that we are expected to.

We hate to boast in an unseemly way about Oregon and proclaim it on the highways that she is not like other states are, but we must permit pride to find its voice and declare that it is a matter of eternal satisfaction that only three delegates to the state grange voted to perpetuate the Non-Partisan League, while 76 voted to kill it, scalp it and throw it out to the hogs.

Kansas City democratic factions have "rabbit" and "goat" factions, and they have come to an understanding over the division of offices. They thereby have set a good example, for however much democrats may disagree or even hate each other, they never disagree so bitterly as to endanger their offices.

A Texan advertised: "I will sell you two good mules for the price of two good mules." Some people might think he was silly, but not the newspaper men. He was offering a square deal which is good advertising, besides, how many people get more than one dozen eggs for the price of one dozen eggs?

We can think of no more adequate punishment for all the Prussian royal house except the Kaiser than fourteen grains of calomel and two pints of vinegar. As to Bill, himself, we are going to let the Oregon boys have the fun of hanging him.

That new star belongs to Oregon, but we expect someone back east will claim it before we can think of a suitable name for it. Since Blaine Coles saw it first how would Colestar do?

American army bands are to be bigger, perhaps on the theory that when the Germans came to face the music they should have more of it to face.

If these hot days get any hotter we will start a movement toward having the bung extracted from the sky with the request for an Oregon mist.

Well, anyhow, there's one thing we can say of these rare days in June. It has managed so far that we haven't had to burn much fuel.

We haven't heard anything yet about the Kaiser decorating his partner with the iron cross.

WORK FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Many of the public schools in Oregon will soon finish their work for the year. Thousands of young folk are thus relieved of duties that have occupied them for five days in the week. There is work for these young people to do, whether they be boys and girls of the grades or those who have finished high school. Many of them will seek employment on the farms.

There are numerous high school boys who live in the country and have had previous experience in farm work. Getting down to business with them will be a simple matter, but there are many others who have never worked on farms and who are attracted this year by the scarcity of farm labor. If these boys go to farmers and ask for work, they should bear in mind that work is what they are seeking. They have graduated from high school and they are out in the world. Some of them may have had their eyes on positions and situations instead of jobs. But a job on a farm is a situation and position all rolled into one.

Farm work is a science and a difficult science at that. He who is willing to work, regardless of the weather and regardless of his inclinations, will find plenty to do on the farm this year. Inexperience will not be held against a boy if the right spirit is shown. Those who expect farming to be a sort of continuous vacation, listening to the birds and drinking from the old spring, with pay thrown in, will have their illusions dispelled; but if they are patriotic enough to earn a few blisters they will get along with their farmer friends well enough.

Regardless of whether farming or some other occupation is chosen this summer, every schoolboy and girl should do some useful work. They may not be caught by the work-or-fight regulations, but they are morally obliged to do one or the other. If they are too young to fight they can work and work at the thing they can do best.

With the fourth of July drawing near, with its flood of memories, we simply can't help feeling a little bit like we used to when the spread-eagle orator twisted the lions' tail. We can't help it if we feel that way toward Great Britain, but if we happen to say anything harsh we would like for England to know that we hope between now and the Fourth, General Haig's army will bury a million Prussians P. S. If it would make the English feel better we will increase it to 2,999,000 with the Kaiser thrown in.

An Associated Press cable from Paris says: "The German flood in Champagne will soon be dammed." We object to such news in a prohibition state, and more so to the faulty orthography of that last word.

The president's rivet driving may start something worth while if he benefits by the experience. There are several places where a good riveter could tighten up things to advantage.

If we are going to celebrate the Fourth why not keep the promise made to Pleasant Home last year? And that reminds us: Where is the band music coming from?

The French got one of those long-range German guns by a mathematical calculation, followed by artillery fire. The father of mathematics deserves a monument.

There is to be enough sugar on hand to meet all requirements, but let's not forget that a whole lot of things that sugar is used for are not requirements.

Portland shows a gain in population of about 30,000 in one year, according to recent figures. It will soon be stopping over toward Gresham.

Accommodates Soldiers.

During February the night motor transport department in London carried 18,649 enlisted men.

Cholera Morbus. This is a very painful and dangerous disease. In almost every neighborhood someone has died from it before medicine could be obtained or a physician summoned. The right way is to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house so as to be prepared for it. Mrs. Charles Eneyart, Huntington, Ind., writes: "During the summer of 1911 two of my children were taken sick with cholera morbus. I used Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy and it gave them immediate relief."—Adv.

A Splendid Record Achieved.

H. W. Snashall, president of the Farmers Mutual Fire Relief Association, reports the association has broken all former records in 1917. Its annual statement shows 383 new members gained, 17 fire losses paid, aggregating $4911; $1,036,677 of insurance written, one assessment levied, and $700 invested in liberty bonds during the year. The association is entering its 14th year, and has over 4000 members carrying $4,250,000 insurance. It has made an annual saving of over 50 per cent to its members. At the annual meeting in January Andrew Brugger of Gresham was re-elected director for the sixth year. Farmers desiring to join may obtain information from H. W. Snashall, Gresham, R. A. or Herman Loeding, secretary, 409 Stock Exchange Bldg., Portland.—Adv.

MEN WHO ADVERTISE NEVER SATISFIED

The advertising merchant is the best one for the public to patronize because of the temper and characteristics revealed by the fact that he does advertise. This shows that he is not satisfied with things as they always were. The same spirit of enterprise that urges him to seek new trade by advertising, leads him to seek better bargains, higher values and more satisfactory service.—Oregon City Enterprise.
