HANG THE COST

What matters it though our national war expenses, including loans to the allies, will run above $1,500,000,000 this month and set a new high record for war expenses of any belligerent nation? Have we not set out to win this war? Shall we stop at dollars and cents when our boys are placing their lives in the balance with the eternal principles to which we are fighting to maintain our adherence? Our enormous national resources, the resources which we have declared were available to the last copper in the defense of our righteous cause, have not yet been scratched.

Compared with our allies, we have made no sacrifice, as a nation and have suffered no real hardship, worthy of the name. Individuals among us have suffered the loss of their sons, brothers, husbands or sweethearts—and this very fact but lays the greater obligation upon us as a people to proceed with a resolute determination that these men shall not have died in vain.

Money? It is the least among the treasures we are laying at our country's altar. Money? Of what value would it be to us, if we were to fail in our colossal enterprise and fall under the merciless and avaricious determination of Germany? May we not better expend every last cent of our money in fighting the tyranic aggressor, than deliver it over to Huns as a tribute at the close of the conflict?

We are now launching ships faster than the Kaiser's U-boats can sink them. Is it not worth all it costs? We are sending thousands and hundreds of thousands of fighting men to reinforce those whom we have sent to the support of our allies. The more rapidly we send our men, the sooner will victory be won and the war closed.

Is not this an object worthy of all money expenditure that it may necessitate? Shall we not practice self-denial to the last degree, if necessary, to the end that the inquitous cause of all this cruelty and slaughter may be utterly crushed and annihilated?

Hang the financial cost! What is it, by comparison with national dishonor? Nothing! Whatever the cost per month of the war may be, Germany is destined to learn to her final discomfiture that the American people are not a nation of quitters. We have set out to win this war, and win it we must and will.

THE SONG OF THE BINDER

Some kinds of music are more seductive and appealing than others. There are people who remain unmoved when they hear something severely classical played, but they respond instantly to ragtime. There are others who love the old songs best. Then we have the class that unconsciously keeps step to the martial time. A new note will soon be heard in the fields of Oregon, and it is the song of the binder.

To many people this is the sweetest music they ever have an opportunity to hear. They prefer it to grand opera, musical comedy, anthems or jazz bands. They enjoy it because it is an interpretative composition that they can understand. The binder sings the song of the wheat crop; the song of toil, of labor rewarded—of food for our fighting men and ourselves.

Wheat cutting has already begun in the middle west and will soon be general all over the United States. Before a great while the threshing season will be started. But just now, or soon, the binders song is the opening number, the prelude, on the harvest festival program.

The binder's song ought to reach more people than it does. It should exert a wider, more insistent appeal than ever during the season just starting. The farmers need help on the farm. They cannot harvest wheat alone. They have done their best and are still doing it, but the need for assistance is more vital for the reason that the wheat will not wait.

Encouraging news comes from all over the wheat belt to the effect that town and city residents will lay aside their business for the time being and help on the farms. The work may be novel to them, and it will be hard for all of them. Many of these enthusiastic farm workers may fall by the wayside—especially if the wayside is shady—but many others will have the grit and ability to stick to their jobs. Also, this thing of having the city people go to the country to do whatever they can to aid in harvest time will be valuable in removing the imaginary line that often separates the country people from their city brothers.

The principal objection to the wheat substitutes is this: The Good Lord in his infinite wisdom omitted from them those qualities which are essential to the making of good pie crust. Even when hunting-cased pies are left out of the reckoning and the jail door kinds and custards are offered, the bottom crust reminds one of an overdone pancake.

One reason why so many of the callow youth of today are spindle-shanked, narrow-chested and dance-crazy is that they were not permitted on earth in a period when it was the height of fashion to wear top boots, galluses, paper collars and use two pints of sweet oil on his hair every week.

Raising the passenger fares and adding on 8 percent, to say nothing of the little extra half cent a mile for Pullman, has made home look so beautiful that we are tempted to take our vacation on foot after unveiling the "God Bless Our Home" motto.

There are some men in the present congress who will never forgive the Kaiser after the fall elections. But none of the Oregon congressmen need feel that way, as we are going to re-elect all of them.

It is said that the Germans hate to pronounce the word "American." Those who have been foolishly placing themselves in front of the Yanks are soon fixed so that they can't pronounce it.

Food conservation is necessary, so don't grumble. And our idea is that the ultimate consumer is not grumbling at the short ration so much as he is at the long robbery of the profiteers.

Loafers who refuse to go out of the cities and help harvest the crops are not entitled to a loaf any more than they are entitled to loaf, and do not deserve even half a loaf.

After all, there is something funny about Germany's protest against one lynching. Probably the censor refused to let all the news from Georgia get across.

The best way to improve the verse of nine-tenths of the war poets is to put the poets in the trenches where they can get the inspiration first-hand.

Those who insist on staying out of war on account of business may find themselves staying out of business on account of war.

When the airplanes get to flying over Berlin they will be called whippoorwills, for their mission will be to whip poor Will.

We are willing to listen to proposals for peace, but we are going to keep the trigger finger well limbered up while listening.

We are beginning to believe that the war will end in a draw—that one which leads down from the French front to Berlin.

Evidently the Kaiser believes he is self-sufficient, as he seems to have ceased to invoke the assistance of his divine partner.

Reading the baseball dope these days with the box scores left out is about as exciting as drinking rainwater.

Dr. Esther Lovejoy calls American women "high heeled loafers." Pretty soon her sisters will call her Dr. Killjoy.

Don't wait to be urged to join the W. S. S. army. What if our men in the trenches waited to be urged?

The Portland milk situation looks ominously like a price increase for the consumer.

Supposing we had not waited until war came to break those shipbuilding records?

Thrift and patriotism are synonymous.

FIRE PATROL READY IN FOREST RESERVE

Forester Herman Wallace of Estacada is now ready for the season's fire patrol in the nearby forest reserve. Mr. Wallac's crew will consist of eleven men and four women, most of whom are local people, being Tom Carter, Harry and Lee Stokes, Perry Murphy, Valdemar Hill and John Howland, with Mrs. A. K. Morton and sister, Florence Kendall in charge of the Fish Creek Mount Look-out station and Mrs. W. A. Wash and daughter, Eva in charge of similar duties at the Mt. Lowe station.—Estacada News.

A DISTINCTIVE BADGE

We now think of our Grand Army veterans as "old soldiers." The years will pass quickly, and before long the veterans of the present war will be in the old soldiers class. Some of them are even now being discharged from the service and are coming home. Those who are sound in mind and body will resume their old work, to a large extent. Those who have been mained may have to be taught new forms of usefulness.

The suggestion has been made that some mark of distinction be given to those who were wounded. As long as a soldier is in the army he is permitted to wear special strips on his sleeve to show that he has been wounded. When he comes home and resumes civilian dress he will have nothing to indicate the sacrifice he made, unless it be an empty sleeve or an artificial leg, and there are numerous cripples in every community whose hurts come to them in peaceful pursuits.

Congress might authorize a special button or medal, to be worn by all men who saw service in the war with Germany. A bar suspended from the medal, or even a medal of different design, could be given to such soldiers as were wounded. Medals are now provided for men who distinguish themselves for gallantry under fire, but these awards will be comparatively few, considering the great number of men we shall eventually have under arms.

The little bronze button of the Grand Army of the Republic is perhaps as highly prized a decoration as a civil war veteran can have. Something similar might be provided for the veterans of the present war. Such a work would serve as identification and at the same time would be a badge of honor. Every man who has gone into this war, whether as a volunteer or as a member of the national army, is worthy to wear such a badge when he receives his honorable discharge.

MILITARY CAMP WILL MARK SUMMER SCHOOL

Indications point to at least a normal enrollment in the summer session of the University of Oregon this year. Features of the session will be the summer military camp, during the first four weeks; the state educational conference the last three days of the opening week; the state Presbyterian synod in July, and the Red Cross courses to be given for the first time in the summer school.

For the first three weeks of the term Dr. Henry Huntington Powers, of Newton, Mass., noted authority on art and history, will give two daily lectures, one on the general subject of "America and the War" and the other on the history of art.

The Red Cross courses will include work in first aid, to be given by a Eugene physician; instruction in junior Red Cross activities, by Dr. Max Garrett, of the English department of the University of Washington, and training in home service work, in which line a lecture will be delivered by F. P. Foisie of Seattle, Northwest director of that branch of Red Cross activity.

The state educational conference will stress the general problem how the schools may respond more quickly and effectively to the new demands made on them by the war situation. Superintendents and high school principals will be present from all parts of the state, to the number, probably, of three hundred.

Another interesting feature will be the lectures, June 26, 27 and 28, by Prof. William B. Otis, of the University of the City of New York, on war subjects. Professor Otis is coming under the auspices of the National Security League, in place of Dr. Ralph Barton Perry, professor of philosophy at Harvard. He is a descendant of James Otis, of Revolutionary War fame.

Three food courses will be given by Prof. Lilian Tingle, under the direction of the National Food Administration. Both lectures and laboratory work are included. Other work of the University will be presented as usual in almost all departments.

AN APPEAL FOR SUFFERING ARMENIA

Pure religion is to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions. More than two millions of people are starving in Armenia. Its for us to say whether they will die. Five dollars a month will save a life; that is only sixteen cents a day, and food is higher there than here. Think for a moment! If it was your boy or girl, or your mother, what would you do?

As a nation we are to raise thirty million dollars. Dear friends of Gresham, we must do our part. An opportunity will be given soon. Let us accept it gladly. Remember this: "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." There will be returns one day. For he who cannot lie hath said: "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethern, ye have done it unto me."

S. G. Roper.

PRIZE WINNING GIRL TAKES SUMMER COURSE

Miss Margaret Jonas, of Fairview, was accompanied to Corvallis on Tuesday by her father where she was enrolled for the summer canning course.

Miss Jonas is taking this course as the prize winner of the land products show, held in Portland late last fall, all her expenses being paid as a premium for being the champion in the canning contest held at the exposition.

She was a member of the team from Fairview which competed at the Multnomah county fair last September, and was a winner there, her reward being a trip to the Salem fair where she came off second best in the state fair contest.

About 20 girls are now at Corvallis taking the summer course in canning and preserving fruits and vegetables.
