The Fear of Father Benoit

"We have sometimes," said Father Benoit, to his American listener, "very severe winters. There are snowfalls that cover the earth for weeks. 'Tis then the famished wolf comes down from the mountains into the valleys. "We hear him in the night in our village, his fierce, keen howl and then the squealing of a pig or the pitiful bleating of a calf. But we are secure in our homes. "That was before the coming of that ferocious animal the boche. You Americans and the English call him the Hun. And we now think the howl of the wolf is as sweet music compared to the voice of the savage from beyond the Rhine. "The plagues of Egypt could not have been as bad as our plague of Prussians. In 1870-71 they were merely robbers. For three years in this later war they have ravished this land, transgressors of every law of God and man. "Greatly puzzled and disturbed have I been as I thought of the moral effect of this war upon our people—our young people—will they retain their tender, sympathetic natures, their sweet innocence, their horror of cruelty? After you Americans have driven these demons from our land—I mean assisted us to do so—will our people be as before their coming or, as man is an imitative animal, will they become hardened, cruel and vicious? "I shudder to think what may come to us. The aftermath of this plague may be worse on our people than all that has preceded it. France, dear France! May we remain as we are—brave, tender, kindly and true, the crown of our glorious deeds undimmed, aglow with the praise of all Christendom. "Hear the visitor could not forbear smiling. "Ah, pardon me," said Father Benoit, "I quite forgot myself. Forgive my heat, my lack of temperance. We French have not the sangfroid, the cool blood, of you Americans and of the English. I was about to tell you of something that happened in the village a few days after the invader left us and before our American friends appeared. It was a simple happening but it made me think. "I do not know whether you have the dachshund in your country; about as high as half a dog and as long as two and a half dogs. "The visitor nodded. "Ah, you have. Then I scarce have the need to describe him—the centipede-like length of body, only four legs where the centipede has a hundred; the long, drooping flabby ears; the vacant eyes. We do not cultivate such canine monstrosities in France. We leave that to the boche. "Perhaps you do not know that we have in our language the word 'dache,' which might serve as the first syllable in this dog name. How nearly it rhymes with 'boche.' In French it is a cant term and means 'old Nick' or 'the devil.' How poorly it would fit this stupidest of all dogs. "It may be lucky for us French that our dog days extend only from July 3 to August 11—that's forty days. If this period is made in boche land and to fit the length of the dachshund it should be at least twice as long. "It was perhaps two days after the boche marauders had left our village that this nondescript in dog flesh appeared. He had evidently become lost from his troop. He moved through our streets, sniffing here and there. He was trying to find a trace of his companions. Fortunately for us who live in the village, the gracious wind had blown most of the boche odor away. "The dachshund moved slowly. He was perhaps on the verge of starva-

Summer Complaint. During the hot weather of the summer months some member of almost every family is likely to be troubled with an unnatural looseness of the bowels, and it is of the greatest importance that this be treated promptly, which can only be done when the medicine is kept at hand. Mrs. F. P. Scott, Scottsville, N. Y., states: "I first used Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy as much as five years ago. At that time I had a severe attack of summer complaint and was suffering intense pain. One dose relieved me. Other members of my family have since used it with like results."—Ad.

Against Birth Decrease. The Frankfurter Zeitung of February 11, says under a Berlin date line: "The Political Committee on Population of the House of Deputies formed for the purpose of considering Dr. Porsch's bill on measures to be taken against the decrease in the birth rate, has met. The Ministry of the Interior has submitted a memorandum on the subject. The Government announced through the committee that the Reichstag would consider measures to combat sexual diseases, and also that the comparative decrease in the number of births in war time is much larger than the number of those fallen. Even after the war the birth rate will not attain its former figures. "The following have been urged as necessary measures: Pay reforms housing organizations, providing for inexpensive house furnishings for young married couples, premiums for children. A subcommittee has been formed to consider the question of providing furniture. "The Matzner Anzeiger tells of a plan the city of Bonn has adopted for encouraging marriages by bounties payable in food supplies: "If one of the newly married couples has resided in Bonn for at least six months, the Bonn Food Bureau gives them a single supplementary supply of 30 pounds of potatoes, two pounds of wheat flour, two pounds of grease, five pounds of sugar, two pounds of malt coffee, two pounds of butter or some other fat and 10 eggs.

Blaming the President. A periodical representing the coal trade in the United States has blamed the president and the fuel administrator, and incidentally the newspapers and some publicists, for strikes, the coal shortage and all the other difficulties that have developed in the fuel situation. If the price had not been fixed at mines; if the government had observed a strictly hands-off policy, what would be the price of coal to the consumer today? We venture the opinion that it would be many dollars a ton higher than it is. Who would have pocketed the excess profits? The operators the major portion; the middleman a comfortable slice and the retailer what he could get without starting a riot. That is the situation in this country at present time. The big fellows are out to get all that they can get. Stomach and Liver Troubles. No end of misery and actual suffering is caused by disorders of the stomach and liver, and may be avoided by the use of Chamberlain's Tablets. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter—Ad.
