DESTROYING NATIONAL SUFFRAGE.

Just as it began to look as if the suffrage amendment were winning its way through the senate by sheer weight of worth, a little group of women agitators has succeeded in making the passage of the amendment doubtful. They couldn't permit the solid argument for suffrage to force its way into the convictions of men, apparently, but were impelled to stage one of the absurd demonstrations which have no other effect than that of solidifying opposition. They are making hard what was becoming easier.

It is really to be regretted. Granted that the amendment was meeting with vigorous and obdurate opposition, still, this was the very worst way to attempt to overcome the obstacles lying in the path. Almost the whole tendency of expressed public sentiment at present is in the direction of the larger franchise.

The very genius of the war we are fighting is that of the suffrage movement, because it is a spirit of large liberty. The splendid war service of the women is convincing countless minds. The rapid, and soon to be greatly extended development of the employment of women in occupations usually considered those of men only, is inevitably demonstrating the essential justice of the claim of women for equal rights with man in the consent from which government derives all its just powers.

The whole educational process through which we are passing makes for liberal thinking in regard to women liberal enough to rely upon the irresistible pressure of events, merely taking advantage of these events for purposes of argument. By so doing they are not setting up their special claim as something independent of the great business of the nation, but are gradually getting a firm grip on what they want by merging their interests in those of the nation. In the end they will win, and just in this way.

The unhappy feature of this latest outbreak of the irrepressibles at Washington is that it detaches suffrage from everything pertaining to war, which is the only thing about which the nation is thinking, and sets it up, in most unfavorable light, by the way, as an issue to be crammed into public attention, war or no war. It was a selfish, childish, stupidly un tactful act—just the sort of an act to provide ammunition for all the antis everywhere, in congress or out of it.

On the other hand, we cannot worry much about it. By this time the country has come to a pretty good understanding of the sanity and big-ness of the genuine suffrage movement, and no longer judges the whole by any one of its accidental, extremist parts. There are few who today will say: "This is suffrage." It isn't suffrage, and every clear-headed man and woman in the country knows it. And suffrage is going to win in the long run in spite of its rattle-brained friends.

OUR AMERICAN ARMY.

Many fine, generous things are being said about the American soldiers in France by their French and British comrades, by the military critics of those countries, and their statesmen as well. We accept them thankfully, and we hope with becoming modesty. We are glad to be of use—glad that we were in time to be of use. And among all these complimentary things one stands out conspicuously, and has done so from the first. Always, the teachableness of the Americans has been commented upon. It is the same with both officers and men, West Pointers and reservists; regulars, guardsmen and nationals—they have been willing and eager to learn. And they have learned.

Passing through all the behind-the-lines degrees, they have gone into the trenches with French comrade-instructors. There they acquired all the tricks of trench fighting and went back to teach others. In time, they took over little sectors of the stationary line and fought in it, and again they taught newcomers. Then a complete division was formed and went into the line as such. It was an American division that fought at Cantigny. Meanwhile all semblance of large-scale American organization seemed to vanish when General Pershing put all his force at the disposal of General Foch to be used anywhere and in any association.

This, it will be remembered, was looked upon as an act of renunciation. Americans began to appear in many places. Wherever there was fighting, there they were. Probably the numbers were small in some instances, but all together we had a good many soldiers in the fighting. They were brigaded with both the French and the English. The marines were fighting with the French down in Chateau Thierry way; others were with the Australians of Hamel. Our men were "scattered all over the lot."

At last came Foch's counter offensive, and the Americans began to appear in force. They were under French generals, but still they were in large units, and were fighting as independently as is conceivable in present circumstances.

It didn't seem possible that this could come at once, because at this distance it is hard to visualize the organization of a complete American army in France, especially in the midst of what is really a single great battle. But the thing has been done. Our first American army is organized. It has its own part in the field to hold and to work out from.

Yes, our men have been teachable. It must be so. They have learned swiftly and well, and have applied their knowledge in the actual tests of experience. And they have qualified. They have received the "right hand of fellowship," and have been admitted to the full privilege and responsibility of independent organization. Already many of our soldiers are seasoned fighters. Some of them have seen more downright fighting than thousands of civil war veterans experienced in four years. This in no small measure is because of their adaptability and willingness to learn.

They have been teaching the old world something, too, it may be said, but that is another story. They have learned, have been graduated and are in the big world doing a full measure of service.

The inquisitive subscriber wants to know if "housewives are ladies of leisure." Of course they are. If a woman has nothing to do but look after a husband and seven children, cook, scrub, clean house, do the sewing, wash the dishes and keep the yard clean, you would call her a lady of leisure, wouldn't you?

McAdoo says that the best brains of the country are being employed in railroad management. Since they have quit giving passes to the newspaper men we are inclined to dispute the question and would claim the distinction for the editors if they would quit giving the railroads so much free publicity.

The other country editors of Oregon hate Jackson of the Journal so badly that they would not be willing to attend his funeral. However, upon reflection, we are inclined to take that back and believe that they would all be willing to forget it all and even serve as pallbearers.

A lady living in Arkansas says she has white biscuits every morning and fried chicken every other day. It isn't that way in Oregon, but really a person living in Arkansas is entitled to have something us more favored mortals must get along without.

Portland will be in the running with large delegations of world war veterans when the G. A. R. veterans get through telling all about the wonderful climate and hospitality they found in Oregon.

Principal Goodwin's circular failed to say that the high school would can Hun tongue next school year, but the absence of German in the prescribed studies indicated as much.

Giving the war as an excuse for poor mail service, poor car service and poor phone service carries some people's memories back to the days before the war.

The army wants twenty more generals in France. There ought to be another chance for General Wood and one for Colonel Roosevelt. But nit for them.

It looks fine to see that eclipse on the map moving toward Berlin. Smoked glasses won't be needed when the eclipse becomes total.

The next generation will not be able to recall the cure institutes. There won't be any after the "nation wide" goes into effect.

The most interesting world series is being played in western France.

A retreat is a victory all right—but for the other side.

SHAVES AND HAIR CUTS.

Ominous signs for the men who have to get their hair cut and their faces scraped are beginning to be seen over the eastern horizon. In fact they are to be seen—or rather heard—in the tones of the barbers who complain that the prices are not high enough.

To speak plainly, there is much talk of another rise in price of the various services the barber performs, more especially in the east, judging from the tone of certain news reports. In some of the eastern cities the new rates have already become effective. The barbers of Ft. Wayne, Ind., recently advanced prices to 50 cents for a hair cut and 20 cents for a shave.

It is said that the barbers of New York made a similar rate for hair-cutting this week and are charging 25 cents for a shave in the hotel shops, and 40 and 20 cents respectively, in other shops. The reason for the distinction is not evident, unless it is that a guest of New York hotel always expects to pay more than it is worth for anything he gets and the hotel barbers would hate to disappoint him.

Boston barbers, likewise, recently sent up the value of their services to unprecedented heights, and at a meeting of the Barber Supply Dealers' association in Chicago the other day, the members, who, perhaps, use the supplies they sell, suggested that $1 for a haircut and 50 cents for a shave would be about right.

Mankind has always entertained a friendly feeling for the barber, who, like the old-style bartender, had the faculty of combining sociability with business, but friendship which will go to any ordinary lengths is not likely to stand for $1 haircuts or 50-cent shaves, and even a 50-cent haircut and a 20-cent shave may result in strained relations and more patronage of the safety razor dealers.

The welder of the brush and razor cannot afford to put himself into the position of profiteering at the expense of man's need for smooth shaves and facial massage. He has too often been the victim of profiteering himself not to frown on such tactics. In fact, of all classes of reputable citizens, the barber is most eloquent and persuasive on the subject of high prices and gouging. He will not wish to have the oratory he so effectively used turned against him. Besides, his work is an art, not a business, as he is an artist and not a business man. If he feels that he is ill paid he should remember that art is never badly rewarded, that artists are never profiteers. Also, he should have a heart for poor, suffering humanity.

Probably the only reason for the sinking of a lightship by a submarine was to insure the lightless night observance.

The only hard workers who are not getting their salaries raised are President Wilson and the newspaper men.

PLEASANT VALLEY

A farewell party was given in the Pleasant Valley grange hall Tuesday evening in honor of the two young men who recently left this vicinity for military duty. They are Cleveland Bliss and Robert Gustavsen. The latter resides at Rock Creek. An interesting program was rendered which consisted of instrumental music, speaking by Lieut. Leland Moore, T. P. Berry and T. P. Coulter. The audience joined in singing our national anthems. Ice cream and cake were served and all joined in wishing the departing boys "God speed and a safe return."

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tingley, of Klamath Falls were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Bliss. Mr. Tingley owns a large alfalfa ranch and was here attending the Elks' convention.

Lieut. Leland B. Moore is home from Camp Lewis on ten days' furlough. Lieutenant Moore was graduated from the Oregon Agricultural College in June and has recently received his commission.

A few friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Bliss on Wednesday evening in honor of the departure of their son Cleveland who left early Thursday morning for Camp Lewis. A social evening was spent and dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Bliss, Mrs. John Bliss and daughters, Frances and Helen, Arthur Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Cleveland, Lieut. Leland Moore, Laura Moore and Rosin.

PLEASANT HOME

Mrs. Grant Sloop and daughters Amy and Esther and son Robert are visiting relatives at Astoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Beuley and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Minnick, of Portland, and Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Williams visited on Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Wood.

William Calvin is enjoying a visit from his father, W. G. Calvin of Idaho.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bettes are moving to a big wheat farm at Nezperce, Idaho.

George Staffenson has been called to the colors and will go to camp Saturday.

I. G. Denny has sold his store to Mr. Proctor. Mr. Denny and family are expecting to go to Oklahoma for the winter.

Mrs. E. Milsted and son John, of Oregon City are visiting her sister, Mrs. John Ickler, and father, A. C. Whilon.

A farewell party was given on Elton Sloop last Friday evening in honor of his going to join the colors. He left for Camp Lewis Sunday. The Sunshine club, to which he belonged, presented him with a comfort kit. He was secretary of the M. E. Sunday school for several years.

Mrs. H. Whilon returned from a visit with her daughter.

Joe Staffenson visited home folks Sunday. He is stationed at Camp Lewis.

SCENIC

A few friends of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Pitts were invited to spend the evening at their home, and meet their guest, Joseph Nokes of Puyallup, a G. A. R. man and a violinist of considerable note, having won his violin in a musical contest at the Yukon Pacific exposition at Seattle in 1909. Miss Hazel Goger was piano accompanist. Those present were given a rare treat that will be long remembered by all. Those present besides Mr. and Mrs. Pitts and family were Mr. Nokes, Mrs. Wm. Thom and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Oilphant of Gresham, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Goger and daughter Hazel, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Duncan, Mrs. D. D. Jack and granddaughter Alice, Genevieve and Richard McElroy.

Summer Complaint.

During the hot weather of the summer months some member of almost every family is likely to be troubled with an unnatural looseness of the bowels, and it is of the greatest importance that this be treated promptly, which can only be done when the medicine is kept at hand. Mrs. F. F. Scott, Scottsville, N. Y., states, "I first used Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy as much as five years ago. At that time I had a severe attack of summer complaint and was suffering intense pain. One dose relieved me. Other members of my family have since used it with like results."—Ad.
