Official paper of the Town of Gresham
Official paper of the Town of Fairview.

NEWSPAPER INFORMATION.

From the number of publicity bulletins and other forms of "copy" that is received at the Outlook office from all over the country—with a request to publish—one must conclude that every paper in the United States is getting a like amount. We publish some of it, probably one-twentieth of what is received and we see a lot of it in other papers. It is all "good stuff" and the most of it is in the line of patriotic publicity. But it is impossible to print it all, and we only use what we deem is best suited to this part of our state.

There is a story of a prospective juror, who was being examined by an attorney, who said he knew nothing about the case at bar aside from what he had read in the newspaper. When asked if the newspapers had caused him to form or express an opinion of the merits of the cause, he replied that he never believed anything he read in the papers. Some other men examined from the same panel gave similar answers.

Perhaps there are people who read the newspapers and do not believe what they have read unless they happen to know that the circumstances are as reported, but these doubters are in the minority. People believe what they read or they would not act on the advice thus given them. If they only knew how hard every reputable newspaper tries to print the truth, without bias or prejudice, they would have even more respect for the papers.

Recently the service of newspapers to the public has been evident. The request of the fuel administration that motors should not be used for pleasure driving east of the Mississippi river, on Sundays was made exclusively through the press. The people of the east read the request and most of them acceded to it. The details of the new draft registration were given almost wholly in the newspapers. A few bulletins were posted, but it was from the newspapers that the men of the draft ages obtained their information, showing that the papers are universally read and are regarded as trustworthy by the government.

The newspapers of the country have come to be recognized as federal bulletin boards. The government issues a daily newspaper known as the Official Bulletin, but only a few people see it. They count on the newspapers telling them the news, the orders and the requests. They must believe the things they read or they would not act as they do in giving credence to what they find in the papers.

DECLINING SUGAR SUPPLY.

Present indications point to a further material decrease in the world's production of sugar during the coming year.

It is in those countries which normally produce a large surplus of sugar and which depend upon shipments overseas to find markets for the bulk of their output that the greatest decline in production is likely to occur, due to lack of ship tonnage.

In the continental United States, which should be relied upon under these conditions to increase its production, the high prices commanded by other crops have cut into the sugar acreage and threatened to deplete it still further.

Our beet sugar factories have sufficient capacity to handle a much larger output without any new construction. The companies operating these factories are willing to extend their production on the smallest margin that will cover the cost of operation, but neither factories nor farmers can be expected to increase the scope of their activities when confronted by certain and heavy loss.

The only way of doing this is to permit the establishment of a price for sugar that will make it possible for the sugar companies to pay growers a rate remunerative for the use of their labor and land under the circumstances created by the war. The policy of restrictions should give way to one of stimulation if we are to avoid a continuous shortage of sugar. More sugar can be had for next year, but it will require prompt and broad-visioned action by the Sugar Equalization Board to make possible an increased domestic supply.

QUAKERS IN THE WAR.

Aside from the nearly half score of war relief societies which the public has been sustaining in their war work, there is the Quakers. A bulletin has been issued by the American Friends Service committee showing the activities of the American Friends' war relief service during its year's work. Some of this work was being done by the Friends in England before America entered the war. Afterwards the Friends in this country organized and the bulletin they have issued shows that they have been active in many fields.

The Friends—or Quakers as they are commonly called—have religious convictions against war and blood shed. This notion was founded largely by colonists who came here for the purpose of enjoying religious freedom. Consequently there is no great outcry against the attitude of the Friends or against any religious objector if religion is not used as a cloak to hide slackers. Many Friends have put their religious views aside for the time being and are fighting under the American flag. Others are loyal to the American cause and are anxious to be of service as noncombatants.

Not having been able to fight, the Friends have done a good work in reconstruction abroad and in helping the homeless, sick and wounded. They seek greater possibilities for their work in the future and are calling upon their members for more workers in the war zone and for more liberal contributions to support these workers.

ALL IN SAME BOAT.

Increased utility rates are an every day occurrence the country over. The public realizes that increases are necessary and little complaint is heard.

Water, gas, electric, telephone and street cars are all in the same boat and utility commissions are granting legitimate increases as rapidly as shows they are necessary.

The Wisconsin utility commission went so far as to ensure a utility company in that state for delay in asking increases to maintain its efficiency at a proper standard.

The utility companies have put their cards on the table and the public is convinced that increases asked are just, hence antagonism is rapidly disappearing.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE.

Operating Director Rosseter of U. S. Merchant Marine is of the opinion that the new merchant marine which we are creating will not only increase foreign markets for our products, but will become principal carrier of even our perishable crops to Atlantic seaboard.

There could be no better authority than Mr. Rosseter, who is as far removed as a man well can be from habitually promising what he is not prepared to make good.

Just as long as Grand Old Oregon remains a part of the earth it will have something worth fighting for. It is the Oregon sort of democracy that humanity wants the world made safe for—Over the top first in everything, including republican majorities for every officer to be elected.

Thousands of people in Germany are half starved, so a report says. If that is true, then they know what the salaried class of the United States contends with when the profiteers commence to gouge them.

Some of those heroes between 31 and 45 who have been telling how willingly they would go if within their grasp, will now get busy with pleas for deferred classification.

There is yet another chance to register. All voters who have not lined up for the coming election will be political slackers if they fail to get on the polling roll.

Woman suffrage seems to be coming in spite of the actions of that bunch of female agitators who insist on being nutty in front of the White House.

Debs gets ten years. The sentence may not keep a lot of other fellows from talking, but it should make them more careful about what they say.

It was from Metz that Lafayette came to help the Americans, and we shall one day hear that our victorious banner is floating there.

It doesn't take any prophetic faculties to believe that the rate revision against the P. R. L. & P. Co. will end in a rate boost.

LET IT ALONE.

The single taxers are making a big drive this fall to make California the "first single tax state."

This would give them the entering wedge to carry their campaign to other states. It would be an economic calamity at this time to turn a state upside-down with an experimental tax system that would create chaos in property values.

Single tax may sound nice in theory, but like lots of other theories it will not work out in practice, for while you can tax a property owner to death unless he improves certain property, you cannot by law, furnish the population in our sparsely settled west, to occupy improvements which the single tax system would force the property owner to make.

Why put a premium on owning property in highly improved, congested districts, by exempting it from taxation, while you tax the life out of a man who is unfortunate enough to own vacant land where improvements are not yet warranted.

THINK IT OVER.

Social Health Insurance is a nice sounding phrase. That's what the agitators rely upon to put it over.

It doesn't sound half as nice to call it compulsory medical attention which you would pay for whether sick or not.

Neither does it sound so nice to say that the same system is one of Germany's pet hobbies by which she holds her laboring class in a continual state of dependence, thereby forcing her will upon them.

Before you swallow all these new socialist fads think them over; do you want to remain a free American citizen or do you want to become simply a cog in a political wheel.

Mr. Lloyd George has a salary of $25,000 a year as first lord of the treasury, but is unpaid for his services as prime minister.

From the success of the St. Mihiel attack it wouldn't be surprising if detailed reports tell of the presence of Oregonians.

If Metz is what the Yankees want they'll never be satisfied until they get it.

Felt That He Needed "Pep."

Frank Groninger, attorney has a pink-cheeked, tow-headed youngster, whose name to every one who knows him, is synonymous with effervescence, overflowing spirits. He is a thinker, too, this small Jack.

It was he, who some years ago (he has now attained the mature age of eight years), after gravely meditating on the phenomenon that ensued when things were planted in the ground—i. e., that duplicates of the thing planted accommodatingly took root and grew up out of the ground—was discovered in the yard by his mother, carefully patting and slapping down a pile of wet mud with his small spade.

"What are you doing Jack; planting something?" Jack's evident reluctance to disclose the nature of his agricultural activities aroused his mother's suspicion. Grasping one of the miniature garden tools at Jack's feet she dug vigorously into the wet mud. A glint caught her eye, and in horrified silence she scraped the mud from her jeweled gold watch.

But, if Jack didn't succeed in growing nice little timepieces, that a small boy could hear tick undisturbedly, he has kept right on being active. Hence, his mother's surprise the other day at a reply of his.

Jack's father, before leaving for his office, gave Jack a dime. Afterward Jack's mother seeing the coin in his hand, admonished him to put the dime away and save it.

"O mother," Jack exclaimed insinuatingly, "I simply got to spend a nickel of it to give me some 'pep.'"

New Kind of Honeymoon.

A domestic long in the service of a well-known Alabama family recently gave "notice" of two weeks, explaining that she desired to get married. The mistress managed to secure a successor, but was dismayed to discover that the new servant could not report for duty until a week subsequent to the time fixed for the wedding of her predecessor. So the present incumbent was asked whether she would not agree to postpone the happy event a week. This the domestic declined to do. However, she said that she didn't in the least mind getting married and continuing the household duties till her successor could put in an appearance. The husband-elect offering no objections, this arrangement was agreed upon and an hour or so after the marriage ceremony the domestic was performing her duties just as before.

"I presume your husband has returned to his work, as you have done," the mistress chanced casually to remark.

"No'm," responded the girl, in a matter-of-fact tone; "Joe, he done gone on his honeymoon."

The Truth About Milk.

Under the above title there appeared an interesting and authoritative article by Dudley Harmon in the March issue of the Ladies' Home Journal. We congratulate the author and the editors on giving their readers some real information concerning milk and, as they express it, "while it is high, yet is still cheap."

Dairy and farm publications have published much on this subject and it has been valuable in educating the producer, but it is the consumer who must be reached. If we want to reach that consumer, if we want to protect the dairy industry and save the calves, let us devote our money and our time to advertising in the publication that reaches the consumer and educate the editors of these publications so they will speak understandingly of the subject.

If you haven't read Mr. Harmon's article, get it, read it, and show it to your neighbors and your friends in the city. Here are a few sentences chosen at random.

"The cause of food conservation for ourselves and our allies will be helped if we all use more and more milk and milk products."

"Do you know that milk is not merely one kind of food, but a combination of all the food essentials required by the body—particularly of the growing child?"

"A greater demand at home for milk and milk products will stimulate increase in cattle herds, and we may thus contribute a part toward the restoration of the depleted meat and dairy stocks."

"There has been, and is, something wrong indeed, but the question of just what is the matter cannot be answered by accusing the dairy farmer and the milk distributor of robbing the public."

"For the welfare of the nation's children continuation of normal amounts of milk in their diet is imperative; for adults it is most desirable. The higher prices are, generally speaking, truly justified, and our national interests in the war require a liberal encouragement, in every way, of the cattle and dairy industries."

Waiter Couldn't See the Joke.

Dipping the other day into Mrs. Stuart Menzies' biography of Lord William Berosford, there is the following good story:

"It was at the Raleigh club" (writes Mrs. Menzies) "that Lord William and one of his brothers, Lord Marcus I believe, for some reason, or perhaps for no reason, put the hall porter into the refrigerator.

"The heat of the man's body, or his language, caused the ice to melt so one of them drew from the tap some water into a tumbler and sent it with his compliments to a friend in the smoking room, describing it as Garcon Glace (literally 'iced waiter')."

"The porter was left in a little too long, and there was some trouble afterward. This became known as the Garcon Glace incident.

"Everybody thought it funny except the waiter, and he had to be pacified."
