THE SECOND TABLE.

There has been some criticism heard because President Wilson and Mr. Hoover have said that Germany must be fed now that they are whipped. Probably it was not intended that they were to be given precedence, but that they were not to be allowed to starve. That is the reasonable construction to be placed upon the statement.

While Germany is to be fed as soon as her people will permit it, it should be definitely understood that her place will be at the second table. There are other peoples who must be cared for, particularly those who have been associated with us in the war. The British, French, Belgians, Italians, Roumanians, and Serbians have suffered, and solely in our cause, while the Germans have suffered from their criminal ambition. There are other German victims who must be relieved, as the Russians and Armenians.

It is now known that all the atrocities of the Turks were committed under German inspiration and leadership, often under German orders. The first table belongs to the innocent victims of German brutality, and must be scrupulously reserved for them. With the inspiration of the war removed, they may be menaced by the curse of Bolshevism. It is not impossible that the German socialists, who betrayed and corrupted Russia, may attempt the same tactics against their enemies.

It will, too, be wise to make the Germans understand that they have no preferred claim—indeed no claim at all. The experience may prove to be a good medicine for their arrogance and pride. Having reduced the whole of Europe to destitution and starvation, they are in no position to ask anything as a matter of right. But the American people, and all other people, must think of Europe as a whole, and must do what they can to save it. That is a plain duty, and it is also policy—indeed, the only policy possible that is left us.

But we do not propose to add to the suffering of our friends, of the helpless victims of outrage and wrong, by our efforts to relieve the sufferings of the Germans. That would be cruelly unjust. There is no idealism in causing the innocent to suffer because of help extended to the guilty. Our friends, and the innocent, should have the benefit of priority, and we believe that is the idea of President Wilson and Herbert Hoover.

ANOTHER BLUNDER.

It is reported in the press dispatches that President Wilson will go to Europe and take a part in the peace conference. Great Britain protests against such action and there is a feeling in America that the president would be making another egregious blunder in going to the peace conference. His action would savor too much of self-importance and would be a slight upon all other great Americans as men whom he is afraid to trust out of his sight.

The American nation now faces the responsibilities it rightly assumed when it became a belligerent. Having faithfully discharged its duties on the battlefield, it now becomes necessary to think of the peace table, of those who shall represent us there and of what they shall say. The treaty of peace between this country and Germany, when it is signed, will be submitted to the senate for confirmation or rejection. If the treaty is changed in any way by the senate it must be returned to the other party for readoption. This treaty should represent the feelings, the hopes, the aims of all the American people and be interpretive of the things for which American blood was shed.

In view of the seriousness of the questions involved and because it is prepared for all the people, there is a sincere desire that the president shall consult with the leaders in congress and will appoint the requisite number of peace commissioners instead of attempting to usurp any part of the peace work in Europe. But it seems that he is not willing to trust such a body out of his sight. Is he afraid of appointing democrats or is he unwilling to appoint republicans, that he must go along with those whom he will name? In speaking of this matter ex-President Taft says:

"It would help matters if the President were to consult with the senate and the foreign affairs committee of the house in respect to the form which the treaty should take before he directs its signing. * * * May we not hope that President Wilson now that the American people have spoken in favor of a republican house and a republican senate, will accept the intimation and invite a real conference with the congressional committee on our foreign relations?"

We have believed that the President will realize the extent of his responsibilities and that he will seek aid and counsel, not from his particular close group of friends, but from the real representatives of the American people. President Wilson seems to hold a different view and will probably ignore congress in his appointments and then go on the peace trip with his appointees as a pleasure party.

Assuming that he will do this it need not be surprising if the senate should find a lot of flaws in the treaty and send it back. Now that the senate will probably be organized by the republicans it begins to look as if the president is intending to slight it. In that case the senate might slap back.

THE FLIVVER'S RETURN.

It is reported that the Ford plants will get busy pretty soon turning out flivvers. They will be sending out thousands of them and people will have to renew their agility in dodging tin flivvobiles. After the war and a hard winter the folks are not so spry as they used to be. They have put on another year if not very much fat, but they're out of practice, and when a flivver galumphs along and rolls a person out of shape he will lose some of the dignity that comes from being a patriot. The average man does not do a graceful jump when the horn honks. The most of them will give a jump right up in the air and then settle down for a look all around, and the chills will race up and down the spine and there will be visions of golden harps.

One's hair will lift up his hat as the little flivv comes straight ahead and rolls over him, and after it has gone on its way rejoicing the victim never looks the same again. Of course a Fordmobile never kills and the fellow gets up, brushes the dust off, mops his eyes and blows his nose then looks around to see if anybody saw him when he got the bump and chortle at his fall.

Every time a man is run over by a Ford there are at least a dozen or more who stand about with happy smiles waiting to hear the roar he lets out. But the man of sense will grin and say "Ha-ha! That was a Ford on me"—meaning a joke—and a nary a cussword will curdle the air. He will amble down the road at a contented pace just to show the gang that his grin is on straight.

The war industries board demands that all Christmas gifts for out of town relatives and friends be shipped before December 5. November shoppers are always happiest Christmas givers; and shop girls and express messengers are made happiest by them. This year there is a chance the government will not allow railroads or parcel post to move shipments—manifestly presents—between December 15 and January 1. Such a course would be entirely in harmony with the request of the war industries board and would protect working people from the Christmas rush which has always been the bug-a-boo of the holiday season.

Congress has adjourned to reopen the short session in two weeks. And you will have to admit that it is a mighty drop from the sublime tragedy of war to the incessant and commonplace wrangling and jangling of a windjamming congress.

"We have made history this year," says a friend of ours. He is right, and now let Oregon get busy and make history on wheat, salmon, potatoes and fruit. We'll stand on the coaching line, besides acting as referee and umpire.

"If people must kiss," says a Boston doctor, "let them kiss hands or cheeks and beware of the lips." We'd just as soon be a rooster pecking at a bug in our neighbor's garden as to be pecking at talcum on a girl's cheeks.

We suppose the Portland Journal will look under the bed every night to see that some hateful contemporary is not hiding there with a delinquent tax list.

We hear the women speak so highly of Georgette crepe that we often think we would like to get acquainted with her.

Speaking of exclusive circles: Twenty-dollar gold pieces.

THE DISTINCTION.

In reading the newspapers one will very frequently see the phrase "The allies and the United States." It seems to be a curious and ridiculous custom, as though we were not one of them—that we are not appreciated abroad. The assumption is that there is a deliberate purpose to exclude us from the circle of the alliance. Why we should not be liked and appreciated is hard to see.

The reason that this country is not spoken of as an ally is that it is not. Months ago President Wilson requested that the distinction be made, and he has made it with the utmost care in everything he has said concerning us, in connection with the other nations. Alliances are the product of treaties. Great Britain and France are allies because they are joined together in the entente. Of this Russia was once a member. We entered the war with out a single agreement of a treaty nature with nations that were allies long before we went in. That is why we speak of "the allies and the United States." We are associated with the allies—and that is the phrase that is generally used.

There is no harm likely to come from the loose practice, for after all this nation is bound to the others in an alliance that is more sacred than one formally written—an alliance of hearts. We are all seeking the same ends, all inspired by the same purpose. We have all suffered together, and fought side by side. In this sense America is an ally, but in no other. In official statements it is necessary to be accurate in all statements. This practice by our foreign friends has a strikingly pro-German tinge, as though it were designed to create ill-feeling between us and our brothers-in-arms.

Myrtee A. Aldrich, who writes cheerful verses that are reprinted in papers throughout the country, is a telephone operator at West Burke, Vt., and is totally blind.

Say, when you get your morning and evening dailies, doesn't it seem rather dull without the big headlines telling how we slammed 'em?

Some people's actions certainly would lead the influenza germs to believe that they were expected to play a return engagement.

It does not seem to have occurred to anybody that returned soldiers may have their own ideas about what they wish to do.

One of the pressing peace problems of the returning soldiers will be keeping the crease in their civilian trousers again.

They are now asking the United States to save Germany from the worst—formerly a staple food in that country.

While one cord of hard wood produces but 60 pounds ashes, one ton of coal produces from 200 to 300 pounds ashes.

We imagine if you were to ask Count Hohenzollern about it he would agree with General Sherman.

For every pound of water contained in wood fuel, 1,220 British thermal units of heat goes up the chimney.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer predicts that Germany will next surprise us by going dry. Drei lager?

Autocracy was able to fool all the German people all the time and none of the allies any of the time.

John Barelycorn still has a considerable number of friends but they are afraid to be seen with him.

For some families use of the full four-pound sugar allowance would be extravagant.

Somehow we don't hear any references to it as the "Fatherland" since November 11.

KNOWN AS MOTHER TO WAR ORPHANS.

Lady Loughborough, formerly Sheila Chisholm of Australia, is just starting on the herculean task of care and educating Belgian and French children made orphans by the war. She is organizing a society and through this has become known as the "war orphans' mother."

Greatly Benefited by Chamberlain's Tablets.

"I am thankful for the good I have received by using Chamberlain's Tablets. About two years ago when I began taking them I was suffering a great deal from distress after eating, and from headache and a tired, languid feeling due to indigestion and a torpid liver. Chamberlain's Tablets corrected these disorders in a short time, and since taking two bottles of them my health has been good," writes Mrs. M. P. Harwood, Auburn, New York.—Adv.
