A VICTORY DRIVE.

The reaction of the American people to the German peace proposal of two months ago produced an over-subscription of almost a billion for the Fighting Fourth Liberty loan. The effect of the approach of peace was an immense over-subscription of the United War Work fund. Many cities and towns had already more than filled their quotas before the canvass began. In our own state it is known that many communities went over the top, even as eastern Multnomah did.

When it began to look as if an armistice were imminent, there were those who were fearful that there would be a let-down of interest in this welfare work for our men caused by the mistaken notion that they would soon be home, and that there was little need for much more work in their behalf. As it turns out the very reverse of this is true. Account for it as we may, our people went unparalysed by that of any preceding gift drive.

It would be interesting to know just what lies back of this. For our part, we think it is interest and pride in our boys. They are of us—not a class representing a horizontal section of society, but called from among all of us. They are of the warp and woof of our life and we all love and are keenly interested in all of them. And these fellows, who absolutely represent American life—its homes and schools, and industry, and society, have done admirably. We are proud of them.

If we have maintained a sane view of the war, we have not been carried away by the foolish notion that they have won the war, but we do know that they have made the finest sort of a record, and that in the crisis they have made a contribution to victory of incalculable value. We are proud of them for all this, and in the moment of gathering victory there was a great impulse to do for these splendid men of ours all that we could do to make for their comfort, their happiness and their well being.

Whether these men come home soon or are detained in Europe to quench the smoldering embers of revolution, our feelings toward them are the same—we know that we have helped them through the instrumentality of the allied war work agencies. It was for the men and nothing is too good for them.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

A special election held in Portland last week was for the purpose of voting for a fund to be used in giving the public school teachers a raise in salaries. It was pointed out that the teachers were underpaid, compared with other professions, yet the proposed increase was defeated.

Portland's public school system is acquiring a sort of normal school reputation—it seems to be discredited by its own patrons. The Portland system that allows a clerk of the district a salary of $4500 a year, and several others a salary not commensurate with their duties, is apt to become the object of ire to the taxpayers and they will take their revenge upon it when the opportunity offers.

This thing of American cities paying more for janitors, street laborers, petty clerks and other kinds of unskilled labor—to say nothing of the big salaries paid to mediocre men in the school political circle—than for instruction in public schools, has about reached the point where the standards of citizenship will be lowered or the teachers will be recognized at their proper value. Portland has so conducted its public school affairs as to attract widespread attention. It's recent squabbles over married women teachers, its bringing politics into school affairs and the disgraceful turmoil over the office of city superintendent are remembered very much to its discredit. It owes a debt to the teaching profession which it can cancel to a certain extent only by better treatment of its teachers.

INFLUENZA AFTERMATH.

Medical men are of one accord in saying that the epidemic of influenza which is sweeping the nation with a total mortality of at least 100,000 will result in a great increase in the number of tuberculosis cases in practically every state.

The bronchitis and pneumonia death rate for the past two months has been abnormal; and in nearly every case these troubles have been due to the influenza. While all such cases could not be traced to influenza by the physician in charge, the great increase in their number could be accounted for in no other way.

With pneumonia and bronchitis as the immediate effects of the disease and with tuberculosis, due to the present weakening of the respiratory organs as the distant effect, it is plain that the country must prepare to care for many thousands of new cases of the latter trouble in the next few months.

The United States government is making plans to meet this need; but so far the individual states are making no such preparations. Oregon, especially, is far behind in arrangements for properly caring for tubercular patients. And it must be remembered that every facility provided by the federal government will be needed for men who have developed tuberculosis or who will develop it as a result of their army experience. The civilian population must depend upon state and local provision, or upon individual care to meet the need.

Probably any one of the larger cities of Oregon could supply tubercular patients to fill every bed in the hospitals and sanatoriums provided for that purpose within this state. The larger cities have many cases of tuberculosis; but those which are known to the medical profession of those cities are overcrowding all hospital room for such cases.

And it must be remembered that the cheapest way to handle these cases is to provide every facility for their cure in the earlier stages of the disease. Both humane and selfish impulses point to the establishment of ample facilities to care for this menace. And this is one problem that every city in Oregon and every county, and the state, itself, must face immediately.

Some of the great people urge upon the world the duty of marrying young, but we just read an account of a bride of a month getting a divorce from a man of seventy.

It is said that the former wheat substitutes are going to be fed to the cattle. Wonder if the S. P. C. A. will have anything to say about it?

Did you have a good supply of bicarbonate of soda and pepsin on hand last night, and how did your waistband feel?

ANOTHER ARMISTICE.

President Wilson signed the wartime prohibition bill last week, and in doing so he really placed his signature on the armistice terms made between the people of this country and the liquor interests. It was not a prohibition law that he signed, but the final terms will be unconditional surrender.

The new act becomes effective on the first day of July, next year. The distilling of whiskey was stopped some time ago as a war measure. Under the legislation just signed by President Wilson the brewing of beer will stop on the first of next May.

There is another provision in effect, through the medium of a presidential proclamation, whereby no beer may be made after December 1st. If this proclamation should be rescinded, for any reason, beer makers would continue to ply their trade until May.

After June 30, 1919, no intoxicating liquors of any kind may be sold in this country, to be drunk as a beverage, until such time as the president declares demobilization completed. Importation of liquor is also prohibited, but there is nothing in legislation to prevent the manufacture of liquors in the country for export. Wine, as well as whiskey and beer, is included under the official law.

There is no question about the prohibition legislation being a great food saver, and little argument about the general good effects of the action. Few communities that have tried effective prohibition are willing to return to the "wet" column. Probably the nation will take the same view.

The loss in revenue will be an item to consider, but it is well to remember that just so much money is in circulation. Money not spent for intoxicants will be saved or spent for something worth while. Stopping the making of booze is not destroying money because the money formerly expended in this way will be available for other things. Business has been improved in towns that have gone "dry," and there is reason to believe that prohibition will benefit the nation's business. It is a poor doctrine that makes one think that the country's finances are dependent upon the tribute paid by intoxicating liquors.

Commencing next Monday each person may squander 44 cents a month on sugar. If we would remain on the three-pound basis for a month the price would drop so that we could get at least one pound more for the same money.

Albert of Belgium will live in history as an incomparable patriot, a gallant soldier, a lover of liberty and ever a champion of the cause of the weak. Flowers for the living.

With the four-pound sugar allowance, the pies that mother used to make are slowly creeping back—both the open face and hunting case varieties.

All returns on the war are in except two precincts. We haven't heard from Os. West or Walter Pierce.

If we could have the ice cream conventions in the winter and the coal conventions in the summer the people wouldn't get so scared about them.

Waistband displacements, ranging from 39 to 46 inches were the envy of all the tight laced anemics of the nation yesterday.

Now that the substitutes for wheat have been discarded we suggest that Mr. Hoover furnish a substitute for prices.

Never before did the people appreciate what a wonderful place that land of "milk and honey" must have been.

We hope our thrift ways will continue until all the soldiers get home, so that they may be proud of us.

Many a nose has fired the sneeze heard round the world.
