Western Soldiers Praised.

Lieutenant-Colonel Clark Lynn, assistant chief of staff in charge of overseas operations of the 91st Division—G-3 in the language of the army—arrived at the Presidio in San Francisco, Tuesday after a year's service in France.

Glad to be home—his wife and family live at the Presidio—Colonel Lynn's first thought was for the lads who failed to realize their great desire to go overseas. He warmly praised the service of those who remained behind to forge the sinews of war that the work of the men at the front might be made possible.

Colonel Lynn told the newspaper men that there was no section of the world equal to the west and that no fighters compared with his men of the Wild West division.

In part Colonel Lynn said:

"My sympathy goes out to the great number of our trained fighting men who did not have a chance to reach France. But for the magnificent support given our troops abroad, the successes at St. Mihiel, the Argonne and around Ypres would never have been possible. The 91st Division took part in all of these offensives, proving themselves particularly adaptable in open warfare, for therein lies the American soldiers' cleverness.

"I had the privilege of seeing the Wild West Division go into training at Camp Lewis, almost two years ago and I had the greater privilege of being with them in battle. Our country has produced no better fighting material than the sons of the western states. They will make better citizens than when they departed. Uppermost in their minds since the signing of the armistice has been the thoughts of home.

"Major General, Wm. H. Johnston, commanding general of the 91st division is, at present, on leave of absence. He will shortly take over command of the cantonment at American Lake. However, I expect he will pass through San Francisco soon and will tell you about his campaigns.

"I understand that the overseas work of the Y. M. C. A. is being discussed a good deal on this side. The work of the organization as I saw it in the field was good on the whole. Criticism of it has arisen I believe, because of the tremendous administrative tasks of canteen management, which military necessity forced on the personnel recruited for other purposes.

"As an example of the overwhelmingly large, good side of the Y. M. C. A. ledger, we had a man named Stecher with the division who continually went up and brought back wounded men in his "flivver" under heavy fire. There was also a chap on the training area who died from influenza because he refused to quit work and recuperate despite of severe cold.

"The 'Y' came all the way home with us. Clifford McCarl, athletic director at the Presidio met the troops in New York. A Y. M. C. A. man, I am told, goes out of the ports on every troop train. In effecting liaison with the Red Cross and in arranging many comforts for the men these secretaries have a great value."

Do You Enjoy Life?

A man in good physical condition is almost certain to enjoy life, while the bilious and dyspeptic are despondent, do not enjoy their meals and feel miserable a good share of the time. This ill feeling is nearly always unnecessary. A few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets to tone up the stomach, improve the digestion and regulate the bowels is all that is needed. Try it.—Adv.

FAIRVIEW

Nicely Penned.

At the last meeting of Fairview grange, the Rev. I. B. Self was "quite taken aback," when, just before the close of the session, he was summoned before the master, given a good talking to and listened to a poem, written by one of the grangers expressing the great esteem in which he was held. He was then presented with a very fine Waterman fountain pen as a slight token of the grange's appreciation of his interest in and labors for the grange and their regret at his expected departure from their midst. The reverend gentleman responded as best he could for his surprise, expressing his most earnest thanks for and appreciation of the much prized gift.

DAMAGE CASE NON SUITED F. D. AXTELL EXONERAT

The case for damage in an automobile accident against F. D. Axtell was non-suited on grounds of contributory negligence on the part of the prosecutor.

The accident happened last November, when the prosecutor, Lloyd Love, was run down on the streets of Portland by F. D. Axtell in his car. Mr. Love was pushing an empty baby buggy up the street, and was not observed in the dark until too late to avoid being hit.

Mr. Axtell took the man home, called a doctor, and left his name and address. Love's injuries did not prove to be serious. Soon after the accident Mr. Love filed suit.

Philippine Independence.

The most earnest and systematic campaign for Philippine independence that has ever been made in the United States is now under full headway.

This work is being directed by "The Philippine Mission", officially empowered by the Philippine legislature to proceed to America and work for independence, and to "promote better understanding, greater confidence, and closer economic relations between the United States and the Philippines." Members of the Mission declare that the 10,000,000 inhabitants of the islands are practically a unit for independence.

The mission is composed of forty of the more progressive and best known men of the islands, all Filipinos. It is headed by Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Philippine senate, and well known in Washington, having been for eight years the Resident Commissioner from the Philippines to Congress.

The party also includes Philippine senators, members of the House of Representatives, secretaries of departments, members of both political parties in the Philippines, as well as representatives of agriculture, industry, commerce, capital, labor, education and the press.

In presenting resolutions of the Philippine legislature to Secretary of War Baker, Mr. Quezon described the feeling of the Filipino people on the subject of independence, saying:

"The Philippine Legislature at the behest of the Filipino people sent this Mission to the United States bearing the message of good will, gratitude and respect from all the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands.

"The Philippine Mission, Mr. Secretary, is here charged with a high and solemn obligation. It is enjoined with a noble and sacred trust. It is instructed to present the great cause so essential and necessary to the happiness and existence of the entire Philippine people. I refer to our national birthright to be free and independent. We, therefore, formally submit hereby the vital and urgent question of Philippine Independence to you, and through you, to the Government of the United States in the confident hope that it shall merit a just, righteous, and final settlement.

"Independence is the great national ideal of the Philippine people. The members of the Philippine Mission here, representing all elements of Philippine life, are, one and all, ready to testify to the absolute truth of this assertion. We believe that this is the proper time to present the question, looking to a favorable and decisive action, because of the declared and uniform policy of America to withdraw her sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and to recognize our independence as soon as a stable government can be established. That there is now a stable government in the Philippines managed and supported by the people themselves, and that it can and will be maintained under an independent Philippine government, the testimony of your official representatives, Governor-General Harrison and Acting Governor-General Yeater, will bear out. The fulfillment of this solemn promise you owe to yourselves, to us, and to humanity at large.

"We also find inspiration and justification for our decision to appeal at this time to the government and people of the United States for the granting of our independence in the declaration of principles for the preservation of which America in the recent World War held life and property cheap. America fought 'for the liberty, the self government, and the undictated development of all peoples', and cheerfully assumed her full share in the war 'for the liberation of peoples everywhere'. The American people were willing to dedicate their lives and their fortunes, everything that they were and everything that they had, for the things you have always carried nearest to your hearts—'for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own government, for the rights and liberations of small nations.' Mr. Secretary, may I be permitted to recall at this juncture that in fighting for so high and noble ideals the Filipino people have stood by you during the critical years of the gigantic struggle and, to a man, were ready, nay anxious to shed their blood, side by side with your own soldiers.

"Through the joint labor of Americans and Filipinos, the history of your occupation of the Island is replete with achievements great, and results splendid. You have truly treated us as no nation has ever before treated another under its sway. And yet you —and none better than you— will understand why, even under such conditions, our people still crave independence, that they, too, may be sovereign masters of their own destinies.

"Sir, when our national independence shall be granted us, the world will know that the people of America are indeed 'bearers of the good will, the protection, and the richest blessing of a liberating rather than a conquering nation', and that it was our liberty, not your power, our welfare, not your gain, you sought to enhance in the Philippines."
