"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the Postoffice at Gresham, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

STATE ACCIDENT COMMISSION.

Whether the affairs of the State Industrial Accident Commission are administered from the standpoint of the interests of the workmen or that of the corporations makes considerable difference in its decisions and award of benefits.

Undoubtedly the commission should be careful and conservative and investigate and guard against fraud, but the public has a right to expect the industrial accident commission to look out for the needs and interests of the injured workman and favor the workman whenever reasonably and legally possible.

It is therefore an occasion for congratulation that Governor Olcott has asked for the resignation of two of the members of the commission and has appointed two men whom he believes will administer the workmen's compensation law more in the spirit and purpose originally intended and more acceptably to the public at large.

Under the new alignment and as provided for in the act, Mr. Marshall will represent the interests of employers, Mr. Ferguson the interests of employers and Mr. Kirk those of citizens of the state at large.

"I have watched the situation in the accident commission closely since I have been in the executive office and was rather familiar with it prior to that time," said Governor Olcott in making the announcement of the changes in the personnel of the commission. "I am thoroughly convinced that the make-up of the board was not conducive to the best operation of the workmen's compensation law. The functions of the act are among the most important that any of the state boards or commissions are called upon to administer."

A SQUARE DEAL FOR THE WEST.

The West is interested in building up great merchant marine on the Pacific Ocean. Proper rail rates to western seaports and a shipping to carry our commerce and crops means millions annually to every western state.

As England is seeking to gobble the shipping of the world, so the Atlantic coast is grabbing the wood and steel ships built on the Pacific coast.

The Pacific coast has shown the world that it can build ships faster and better than they can be built on the Atlantic. But when ships built at Pacific coast harbors are sold they are advertised in New York weeks before they are offered on this coast.

Puget Sound, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles are not given a fair chance to build up as great ports of entry and distributing centers.

Pacific coast ship operating companies have now organized for mutual protection and advancement of Pacific shipping interests on which our Western commercial life depends.

In reading the views expressed by the heads of the largest banks and financial institutions of the country, one is impressed with the general optimism and confidence to which these men give voice.

They have been studying the situation and can see a bright future for all lines of legitimate business. They are backing their judgment with their money and in the West particularly, the banks are sparing no effort to encourage and help develop many permanent lines of industry, such as sheep and cattle growing, fruit and constructive banking policy, both local and national, is a life-saver for industry, large and small, at this time.

"To my surprise I have learned that farmers do stick together in community shipping of livestock," writes E. M. Eby, a cooperative shipper of Deschutes county, in the Farm Bureau News. "I thought that when one was ready to ship the others would not have their stock in shape, and by the time they had the first would be tired of waiting and would sell to the local butcher. All have learned that any disadvantage of selling too soon or late will be more than offset by the advantages of sending to a big market at minimum cost."

"Distinguished college" is the designation given O. A. C. for the third time by the war department. Only nine other institutions of the country received this title. Credit is due for this showing, it is said, to the spirit created under the leadership of such men as Brigadier-General U. G. McAlexander, Brigadier-General V. A. Caldwell, Colonel Alfred C. Sharpe, Major T. P. Maginnis, and Colonel Joseph K. Partello, now professor of military science and tactics.

Price of water hydrants has more than doubled in five years. Is that a penalty for making this a dry nation?

WELCOME HOME SERVICE AT METHODIST CHURCH

The Methodist Episcopal church was well filled last Sunday evening with those interested in the welcome home service for her soldiers and sailors. A goodly number of the honored boys were present but many are away and some have not returned from the service.

Splendid music marked the occasion and Rev. J. Montealm Brown's address was thoughtful and earnest and full of suggestive thoughts. Excerpts from his address follow:

Soldiers of the Union and Friends:—The circumstances under which we meet this evening are very gratifying. You have all been permitted to return from the conflict. On our service flag there are no gold stars, and, so far as I know, no one from this community sacrificed his life upon the battlefield. A few received slight wounds, but few if any were seriously wounded while in action. We feel that it is very fitting that we express our thankfulness to God because you have been returned in safety to us. When we think of the thousands of homes throughout the land into which sorrow has come because son, husband or brother has fallen surely as a community we should count ourselves most fortunate in having lost none.

When you were away you were not forgotten; we often thought about you. We missed you on the street, in our assemblies, in our social gatherings and in our services. We were lonely without you. As a church and as Christian people we were concerned about you, and felt solicitous for your welfare. We often wondered how you were getting along and if all were going well with you. We also remembered you in our prayers.

Again your part in the great struggle was well played; you acquitted yourselves nobly and for your valiant service you have received merited commendation. I assume that you would think it superfluous in me to indulge in eulogies at this time, so I shall not attempt it.

You returned as conquerors, triumphant in a most worthy cause. The things you brought back were not relics of defeat but trophies of victory. Success in that which is unworthy is no honor, but success in that which is high and noble is most commendable. Think of what our condition would be if you and those allied with you had failed. In that case life would not be worth living.

Now that the struggle is over you have returned to resume your place in civil life. Conscious of having done your duty I am sure you will not regard yourselves as privileged characters to be petted and pampered by our government and released from all obligations except such as you may choose to assume, but having discharged your duty to the nation in a time of sore need are now ready to take your place in the state and the community in which you live.

Let me say right here that a very important duty devolves upon you, and that is your responsibility to God and to his kingdom. War is not conducive to godliness. Its very character seems anti-Christian. To fight with one's fellow beings seems in direct conflict with religion. But participation in war reveals some of life's most serious aspects. When men are face to face with death eternity and the soul's interests stamp themselves deeply upon the mind and the consciousness of being right with God affords great relief. If religion is a good thing on the battlefield it is a good thing at home or anywhere else. We want to help you. You belong in our services and they will do you good. Godliness will help you in every way. It will make you better citizens, better members of society, better workmen, better business men, better home-makers.

At this time let me speak of one or two things that specially concern us as we face the immediate future. The sentiment of the world, it would seem, is now overwhelmingly against war. The nations are sick of strife and bloodshed and sorrow and suffering and devastation. War is outlawed, and we are to have a "League of Nations" by which and through which national disputes are to be settled and world differences adjusted. This is a step in the right direction and the success of the scheme all should work for.

Then there is the great problem of reconstruction which demands immediate attention. Europe is war-torn and hungry. Her industries must be rebuilt, her destroyed towns and other properties must be restored as soon as possible. Our civil industries have suffered and need attention. A great task confronts us. Then we have the labor problem. The laboring classes are in a state of great unrest because of industrial conditions to which they seriously object. There never was a time when cool judgment and patience were more needed than now. We must support the government, uphold the law and strengthen our national leaders in their stand against lawlessness and anarchy.

This is a great age. We have great prospects if we will face the situation squarely. There are great incentives to undertake the task. Democracy has triumphed, and the rights of the individual are fully realized. It is for every one to do his part bravely, get under the burden and success is assured.

Oregon Wheat Acreage for 1919.

The condition of winter wheat for the state as a whole is placed at 96 per cent. This condition figure indicates a probable yield of 24.0 bushels per acre, or a total winter wheat crop of 18,768,000 bushels.

Chicken thieves are missing a golden opportunity because they are not organized. If they were they could hire some famous lawyer to render an opinion to the effect that chickens weighing 2 3/4 pounds, or less, are actually not chickens and therefore stealing them would not be a crime.—American Issue.
