MEAT PACKERS VIEWS ON HIGH COST OF MEATS

There are two sides, at least, to every controversy. A few issues back, the Outlook printed an expression on the high cost of meats and the government investigation of the packing concerns. In reply to this, a communication from Associate Director W. W. Wood of the Bureau of Public Relations for the American Meat packers is printed below:

Chicago, Aug. 29th, 1919. Editor Gresham Outlook.

In the Outlook of August 8, we have read with interest an editorial headed "Government After the Meat Packers." This article says the high prices of meats is one of the chief subjects of complaint by consumers, and this is why the attorney general is going after the meat packers first. Undoubtedly prices are high. Government supervision is proposed as a sweeping remedy. How can the government lower meat prices for consumers and at the same time maintain live stock prices for producers, as demanded by both of these interests?

The packers have no control over live stock prices. Live stock prices fluctuate under supply and demand conditions of open, competitive markets, and in harmony with meat and by-product prices. The packer cannot continue to pay more for live stock than the net proceeds on the product warrant.

Fruits on all products, including by-products, average only a fraction of a cent per pound sold. This is proved by figures which have been subject to audit by the Federal Trade Commission.

Since cattle prices cannot be lowered and as the packer's profits and expenses are unusually small, nothing the government can do to the packer will lower meat prices. If the profit should be eliminated entirely, the cost of a pound of meat could remain practically the same. If the government should arbitrarily put down prices, regardless of costs, the producer could not stay in business. For the Department of Agriculture has stated that cattle-men are even now threatened with loss.

Any interference with the efficiency of the meat packers on the other hand, would aggravate the problems of the entire country. At a time when private ownership and control are being re-established, a drastic extension of government regulation into private business does not seem advisable. This is true because the new venture rests on foundation even less secure than the old.

The Outlook also remarks that the packers are said to have large quantities of food in storage, thus keeping up prices unnecessarily. Undoubtedly amounts of meats stored seem large to the person who is unfamiliar with technical requirements of meat packing. Few people realize that 58,000,000 pounds are required daily to supply the domestic demand for meat. Obviously, large supplies do not last long at this rate. Most of the meat products stored are in the process of cure or are frozen, and are awaiting overseas shipment. If the entire amount of fresh meat were available and in demand, it would last the country less than 25 days.

The packers extend every help to full and impartial investigation. There are no questions about the industry which they will not try to answer, and on which they will not give complete facts. We believe the absolute honesty of their attitude will appeal to the American sense of fair play.

CHICKEN FANCIERS STUDY

each 8x10 feet, 30 to 40 hens to a compartment. It looks like a lot of work, but Mr. Hendricks says an increased egg yield is the answer. His hundreds of April pullets are a wonderful sight.

At the E. L. Thorpe plant interest centered in the new building now nearing completion. His young chickens are a healthy looking lot. Johnson creek running through the place insures green feed the year through.

My idea of chicken-house perfection coincides with that of Mark Nickerson. His house, 20x80 feet, with a cement floor, roosts and nests down the middle of the room cost less than $1 per hen. It houses 500 chickens. It fronts on a green kale patch, where ramble those white hens. Those well-ordered Leghorns would not dream of flying over the four-foot fence. They were trained not to fly in their infancy. And the Nickerson Airedale would catch them if they dared to fly over. Mr. Nickerson is doubling his plant, the second house is a duplicate of the first one, and is connected with it by a well-lighted feed room. His yard of Leghorn pullets is a sight worth traveling far to see. So is the trumpet vine on the Nickerson porch.

In the afternoon the cavalcade rolled west to the C. E. Eastman farm on the Section Line road, and there we met another man who loves his hens. Professor Dryden mounted a soap box and culled and talked for an hour or two. It was great, and everybody wanted to hear more. But Mr. Hall cried him loose finally. Mr. Eastman banded his hens with red, white and blue leg-bands for good, better, and best layers. He, too, belongs to the poultry association, and carries yards and yards of egg receipts computed by adding machine.

At Allen Seidel's Sweetbrier Egg Farm the model houses were inspected and his prize roosters judged. Everybody posed for Mr. Hall's camera, with Billy Seidel's six-foot corn for a background. (Billy is a corn-club boy.) And then the party disbanded after deciding that Professor Dryden, and County Agent Hall and the Farm Bureau were "all to the mustard," as one poultrywoman remarked.

From the jaunt the Outlook reporter gathered that the Leghorn leads out here, that this is a white egg market, that Professor Dryden is a safe and sane poultry authority. There were no radical sweeping statements from him. Write to Oregon Agricultural college for his bulletin on culling.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This is not only one of the best and most efficient medicines for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, but is also pleasant to take, which is important when a medicine must be given to young children.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been in use for many years and has met with much favor wherever its good qualities have given it their unqualified endorsement. Wm. Scruby, Chillicothe, Mo., writes, "I have raised three children, have always used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and found it to be the best for coughs, colds and croup. It is pleasant to take. Both adults and children like it. My wife and I have always felt safe from croup with it in the house." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy contains no opium or other narcotic.—Adv.

When I Am Gone. When I am dead, if men can say "He helped the world upon its way. With all his faults of word and deed Mankind did have some little need Of what he gave"—then in my grave No greater honor shall I crave.

If they can say—if they but can—"He did his best, he played the man, His ways were straight; his soul was clean; His failings not unkind nor mean. He loved his fellowmen, and tried To help them"—I'll be satisfied. But when I'm gone, if even one Can weep because my life is done. And feel the world is something bare Because I am no longer there; Call me a knave, my life mispent—No matter. I shall be content.

WHY THE ELECTRIC CLEANER?

There is really no comparison between the ease and thoroughness with which an Electric Cleaner removed dirt and the difficulty of sweeping.

True, one CAN clean rugs and carpets without an electric cleaner. A broom or carpet sweeper will brush up SOME of the dirt; and if you like the exercise and have plenty of time and strength a broom and a carpet beater will do the work after a fashion.

In the same way one can wash without soap. Water alone will remove some dirt if applied with enough "elbow grease."

But people use soap because it cleans more easily and better than water alone.

For the same reason people use Electric Cleaners because they clean more easily and far better than other methods.
