CHURCH A NATIONAL BULWARK

The church is girding itself for its work in the new era, says Bishop Sumner of the Episcopal church.

In these days of revolution and unrest we need the church as a stabilizing factor, and to be such the church must be thoroughly organized.

And instead of being a series of scattered units must operate as a simple unit. And this is the main purpose of the nation-wide campaign.

This campaign is the greatest effort which the church has ever made. All over the nation, as well as the diocese, the climax will be reached Sunday, December 7, when an "Every Member" canvass will be made at every Episcopal church.

The aim of the campaign is to organize the church as thoroughly as the American Red Cross was organized, so that the church as a unit will be able to vigorously get behind any program that may be assigned to it.

It plans to combat I. W. W.-ism, and disloyalty with Americanization. It plans a gigantic additional program with hospital work and community work in the slums.

The Episcopal church in Oregon has gotten behind the American Legion. Bishop Sumner has written to every Episcopal clergyman, urging that he take immediate steps to support the American Legion in every possible way in his community, and if there be no American Legion post, to do all he can towards its organization.

The nation-wide campaign of the church, including a great Americanization program, aims to turn disloyal and ignorant citizens into loyal ones.

Bishop Sumner said: "At this critical time of unrest and possible revolution full membership in the American Legion is all important. The American Legion is one of the most practical ways of Americanization of the foreign-born. In my judgment the American Legion stands as one of the most potent forces in the country in the direction of order and loyalty."

The enjoyment of the Thanksgiving season this year was heightened in numberless homes in this country by the presence of soldier boys who one year ago were in cantonments, on the seas or in foreign lands.

An interesting feature of the feast in many homes was the story of the experiences of soldier life and how Thanksgiving was spent one year ago.

FARMERS' WEEK AT O. A. C.

The Oregon Agricultural college has broadened the scope of its farmer's week courses this year to include home economics and club project work.

Hence the invitation is to the farmer and his wife. In other words there are interesting courses for both men and women. The winter short course has always been popular but will be doubly so this winter. Why not slip away from the monotony of work and get the benefit of this week's inspiring associations and instructions?

The cold spell of the past few days was rather unusual for this part of Oregon for November. Coldest record for past eight years, the weather man says. However it wasn't very cold—only about five degrees below freezing. But it helped to make the home hearths cheerful and sharpen yet more the usual good appetites.

CRIMES UNFAILING ALLY.

It is significant that strong drink, ever the ally of crime, played its part in the holdup and murders at Claremont tavern. The crime followed a debauch and the criminals sought refuge in a home where an illicit still was being operated, it is alleged.

It is the puzzle of the ages why, in spite of the abolishment of the legalized liquor traffic, stringent prohibition laws, and the almost certain conviction of violators, so many men, and even some women, will persist in their efforts to evade the law.

Possibly it serves to support the idea that the devil may be cast down but is not beaten and will probably never give up. He may change his point of attack but is always there. One is led to conclude that were the restraint lifted or lessened all the old forms of vice, iniquity and devilry that ever caused the world would speedily return to destroy the human race.

Therefore we urge, strengthen the restraint.

Clackamas Bond Issue Wins.

Clackamas county through the carrying of the road bond issue by a big majority, has put itself in line with all the progressive sections of the state. The only opposition was from those precincts which had declared themselves opposed beforehand.

Their action will react against them. It is to be hoped that when they begin to enjoy the benefits which will accrue to the whole county, from the increased facilities of transportation, which the net work of paved roads will afford, that they will be ashamed of themselves.—Eastern Clackamas News.

Sportsmen Versus Industries.

Newspapers representing so-called sporting interests occasionally clamor to have certain rivers closed to commercial fishing and the salmon canning industry.

The Gold Beach Gazette of Curry county, Oregon, answers one of these in this practical argument:

The Medford paper knocks the salmon fishing and packing industry of the lower river and wants it done away with because he thinks the sportsmen can then catch more fish.

Any excuse to knock this big industry seems to be the motto. Many thousands of dollars are invested in packing plants and fishing gear and hundreds of men and their families depend upon the salmon fishing for a living.

The catching of the salmon on the lower river and the packing of the fish is an industry which provides a great amount of food of the highest quality. There are three canneries on the lower river.

Yet it seems that the Medford writer would have the industry destroyed, have hundreds of men thrown out of work and eliminate an important factor in the food production.

Salmon are caught commercially in many of the rivers. The industry in the northwest is as big a thing as the lumber industry.
