GOVERNMENT SHOULD PAY FOR PUBLICITY.

Citizenship brings to all of us duties as well as blessings, and it will not do any of us harm if once in awhile we take stock of ourselves and balance our activities against our apathy in matters of public concern. Only in this way can we measure up, as we should, each year a little nearer to the standard of sound Americanism.
 We are going to talk very frankly on one subject and it will be a pleasure to receive from time to time expressions from our readers on what we have to say. Their thought will guide us. Moreover, it will disarm those who may be disposed to criticize us as sounding a selfish note.
 Every person in this and every community should give some thought to the suggestion that advertising be established as a regular and legitimate part of government functioning. Those who study the question of government advertising will soon realize it to be the plain duty of every good citizen to bring his little part in bringing its importance and necessity before the recognized authorities, because it is of first importance to the people.
 Let it be understood at the outset we are not advocating government advertising with any thought of the small amount of revenue it might bring to this newspaper. The record of every country publisher who gave away hundreds and thousands of dollars worth of space during the war without thought of fee or reward should be a sufficient refutation of such a thought. This newspaper wants to see government advertising established because of the immeasurable benefit it can be to our farmers, because it can be made to save thousands of lives every year and millions of dollars for the people.
 The first thought the public should digest is this: Government is not something apart. Government is the will of the people. The funds of the government are supplied by the people to be spent in the interest of the people.
 The government should pay for a reasonable amount of publicity that is for public benefit.

What Do You Read?
 It pays to read everything in the Outlook. A very interesting story was overlooked recently by some people because the article was surrounded by advertisements. You will find much of interest in the advertisements. One of our readers says that she often finds the most interesting articles on the inside of the paper.
 Often in making up the paper a very important notice or item comes in after the paper is nearly ready for press and must be put in whatever space is available. This accounts for the position given sometimes to important notices or items. Read everything and you will find that even the advertisements have interesting things in them such as bargains, latest prices, etc.

What is smaller than an ant's mouth? What goes in it.
 Provide for the Unfortunate.
 To place the blind people of Oregon on a self-supporting basis, relieving them from dependence on charity, is the purpose of the legislative bill to be voted on by the people of Oregon at the special state election May 21st.
 The bill provides for the levying of one-sixth of one mill as a state tax to be used to erect and equip an industrial and employment institution for the benefit of the blind of this state. Oregon like all other states is faced with the problem of providing some method of giving permanent aid to the unfortunate and helpless blind. The world war resulted in the blinding of many sons of America, an unfortunate happening which has awakened the people to their duty in teaching the blind arts and trades which will make them independent of charity.
 The bill provides for the levying of one twenty-fifth of one mill in 1921 and each year thereafter to maintain the institution. The amount sought will be small but it is believed by the supporters of the measure that the compensation derived through the institution will repay the producing good citizenry and providing a practical way for the blind to become self supporting.
 The bill provides that the institution shall be operated by the State Board of Control, composed of the Governor, Secretary of State and State Treasurer.

Children's Story THE STORY THE DEWDROPS TOLD

(Written for the United States Garden Army, Department of the Interior).

Dolly Sees the Fairies' Parade.

Part II.
 Then came a procession of all the Dewdrop Fairies that Dolly knew and many more that she had never seen.
 There was the Radish, with his bright red face and his green suit. He seemed to like to go along on his hands so that his head was down and his legs up in the air most of the time.
 There was the Pea Blossom in her sweet white robes. There was the Good-Natured Fairy in her tight dress and there was the Fairy in the Pink Vest almost rolling he was so fat.
 The Very Tall Fairy was one of the prettiest, with her long pale yellow hair streaming out in the breeze. The "Lowly Worm" was there too, and the "Garden Tank." The "Garden Ace" was swiftly fluttering above, and near him was the Winged Flower—the Butterfly that had once been nothing but a caterpillar.
 "Oh—oh—oh!" cried Dolly, each "Oh" louder than the last. "I never saw anything so beautiful. Our Pageant wasn't as pretty!"
 She turned around to speak to the Fairy Queen. But the Queen was no longer beside her, and when Dolly looked into the dewdrop again, there was the Queen floating along in her lovely dress that looked as though it had been spun out of the rainbow.
 Dolly looked with all her eyes when suddenly the trees seemed to be changing into rocks and tumbledown houses. Then she knew that she was again looking at the poor home of little Marie. All the Fairies seemed to be dancing toward the little French girl, who was standing in front of her poor little house.
 "Oh," cried Marie—and Dolly could understand her although she was speaking French. "How lovely—how sweet—how beautiful!"

 She ran to the doors of the poor houses and called out all the other children.
 They came running from every side and when they saw the Fairies they were as excited as Marie had been.
 "Look—look," cried a little boy. "They are American Fairies—they carry the Stars and Stripes." He brought up his little hand in a salute, and, see, there is the flag of the United States School Garden Army!
 The Queen of the Fairies stepped forward.
 "My children," she said, "your American brothers and sisters have sent us to tell you that never again, as long as they have food, shall you be hungry. They are working for you in their U. S. G. A. gardens. Far out on the big prairies golden grain is ripening in the fields so that you may have bread. Down in the earth the brown potatoes are growing and the white onions for your stew. The United States School Garden Army is fighting against hunger, and, as they have helped to win great victories on the battlefields, they will help your country to live until you can raise your own crops again. We come to bring you this message."
 Dolly heard all the children cheer. Then she heard the Fairy murmur again very faint and sweet. Everything faded away and she found herself looking at her own garden with its neat rows of beans and peas and cabbages and tomatoes. She drew a long breath.
 "How glad I am," she said softly, "that I belong to the United States School Garden Army."
 (Other stories of this series will appear from time to time in the Outlook. Watch for them. Read them to the children.)

THINGS WORTH TRYING.

There are three kinds of things which should be of interest to every farmer. The newer practices which have proven to be profitable in his or similar sections, the older practices which have been demonstrated to be unprofitable, and the things which have merits in other sections but as yet have not been thoroughly tried under your condition. There are a number of things which will class under this heading which will well apply to various sections in this county although some of them are proven in some communities here.
 The growing of sunflowers for silage. East of the mountains they have proven to be a very economical ensilage crop.
 Sulphur as a fertilizer on clover in place of landplaster. This has proven to be one of the best fertilizers on alfalfa in the sections of the state where alfalfa is grown extensively.
 Growing alfalfa, especially one of the branching rooted varieties such as Grimm or Baltic. Do you realize that there are over 250 acres grown in this county and that three cuttings per year are secured?
 Spraying your orchard enough to make your fruit of a marketable quality instead of just trying to live within the law. It can be done and is done in a few orchards.

Trellising Cuthbert raspberries by winding down on the wire instead of cutting away such a large amount of fruiting wood. It is estimated by some that you can increase your yield from one fourth to one third by this method.
 A small patch of Canadian field peas for summer green feed or to hog down in the fall.
 Eradicate Canada thistles. It has been done and can be done on your place, but not by just talking about it.
MRS. AMELIA GIERKE LAID TO REST AT SANDY
 The funeral services of Mrs. Amelia Gierke were held from the family home at Sandy Ridge Thursday afternoon by Rev. Earl B. Cotton, pastor of the Methodist church at Pleasant Home. Mrs. Gierke, who died Tuesday evening, April 13, was born in Illinois November 15, 1870. For the past six years she has made her home at Sandy Ridge. She was a member of the Lutheran church in Illinois; she was laid to rest in the Sandy Ridge cemetery. She leaves to mourn his loss her husband, Henry Gierke, also one brother in Alaska.
 Who remembers when a new school teacher had to demonstrate his ability "flicking" all the big boys of the class.

Voters, Attention!
 Although official notice was made in the Portland papers that all suburban offices at which voters could register were notified to close their registration books on April 12th. It has been found that the Gresham office will remain open until April 19.
 Any citizen who registered after January 1, 1916, need not register unless he or she has changed location of precinct.
JOHN BROWN, Registrar.
Dogs Ruin Gardens.
 Several residents of Gresham who have put in early gardens have complained that their work has been undone by wandering dogs that have tramped and torn up their gardens.
 There are city ordinances covering the case, which provides that, beginning with April 1, dogs shall not be allowed to run at large until the garden season is past. Marshal Jake Metzger has given notice that the ordinance will be strictly enforced.
