One Cause of Tire Wear

Here is a little story, a true one, about a professor in an eastern university and his first automobile, a handsome sedan equipped with everything fancy could wish for including a set of cord tires.

The professor had a lot of fun learning to drive and got by without a penny of expense until, after 700 miles of travel, he found that the front tire on the right side of the car was going to pieces. He took the worn tire off and replaced it with a new shoe, only to find that it too broke down in exactly the same way in less than a thousand miles. Then he talked it over with his tire dealer who promptly asked him whether in driving up to a curb he was in the habit of letting the tire graze along the curb. Receiving an affirmative answer the tire man explained that such treatment would ruin any tire in a short time.

"Every time a driver allows his tire to scrape along a curb he scrapes several dollars in wear off the tire," says the United States Tire company. "The grinding causes the rubber covering to break away from the carcass and at times does harm to the carcass itself."
