The Christmas Store

EXTRA! SPECIAL!
SANTA IS COMING!

early" reminds one that Christmas is only four days away.

Fred L. Bourne has a complete line of electrical supplies and conveniences displayed on a back ground of greens. There is even an electric washing machine to tempt Santa's eye when he goes to select mother's present. The electric lighting system for Christmas trees meets with the approval of the insurance agents and also those who remember the many accidents caused by Christmas fires.

Withrow's Lunch room has blossomed out with evergreens and holly and promises some thing good for those who like good eats on Christmas.

Guy D. Jones has his shop most attractively decorated with garlands of cedar and Christmas bells. The shop is always beautifully arranged and the window displays are always among the most attractive in town. Surely Santa will find no more suitable place to load up his bag.

Davy's Drug store has a most attractive display of candies, kodaks and stationery and it would not be difficult for Santa to please at least part of the family with gifts from Davy's.

Perhaps Santa will want to give some slippers or gloves, a sweater or some other article of wearing apparel. He will not need to look far when he sees the display at E. W. Aylsworth's store for it compares favorably with the windows of the city. The new shopping bags are an especially good suggestion.

Cecil Metzger's grocery has one of the most attractive windows in town. The box of ribbon candy displayed is enough to tempt the appetite of any one, large or small, and it must be agony for a small boy to get past that window. The Christmas tree is especially pretty.

Osburn's garage is in a holiday dress and looks most charming with garlands of green and red Christmas bells. Lots of folks would like to have Santa drive a car to their house and stall it just outside the door.

Mrs. Schanno has a pretty window display which centers around a beautiful pot of poinsettias. There is no doubt but that Santa will carry away some of the attractive boxes of candy for the young ladies of the town. He may even take some of them out in the country.

Miss Lynch, the milliner, has a window filled with attractive needle work which would please the good old gentleman if he chances to look that way.

Many a small primary boy and girl has eyed the Kiddle-Kars and little red chairs which loom up so prominently at J. E. Metzger's store. Santa will surely carry some of them along just to make his pack lumpy and the kiddies glad.

The pool halls have both displayed fancy boxes of candy and appropriate decorations.

The new restaurant and soft drink parlor adjoining the Baker garage has blossomed out in holiday colors and Santa has left an order for some of the attractive boxes which are displayed there.

The Sanitary Meat Market has a most attractive display of fresh lard and cured meats. Perhaps the lard is just lard but it looks like it came from fairy land with its decorations of red and green.

Even in Brown & Cleveland's office a Christmas tree has grown up over night from the pumpkin which has been in the window for several months. Of course this is unusual but this is a season of surprises and Christmas trees and mysterious packages are the order of the day and are apt to be found in most unusual places.

Programs will be given in the schools and churches of the county and reference to the local columns and correspondence sections of the paper will acquaint one with the dates and places. The Christmas season is here and everybody is busy and happy.

The Outlook windows display plenty of red and green and a decorated tree with Christmas blotters and holiday Outlooks.

Keep in style. Try one of those "classy-fied" ads.
