PRESIDENT HARDING.
 Warren Gamaliel Harding becomes today the 29th president of the United States, with Calvin Coolidge as vice president. The president was 55 years old on the second of last November, which was election day. Mrs. Harding's name is Florence, an incident which all American people like to know.

Harding was governor of Ohio, his native state, from 1904 to 1906. In 1915 he was elected United States senator from Ohio and was re-elected, resigning his senatorship recently. He is of Scotch-Dutch ancestry. His father was a physician and is still living. As a boy Harding knew the necessity and formed the habit of hard work, obtained a fair education, attending college in Ohio. Like Lincoln he split rails in his youth. He became a printer and later proprietor of the Marion Star, now a daily newspaper, of which he is still one of the principal owners. Harding keeps fit physically by plenty of recreation, especially golfing.

Harding is a man of big affairs, a hard worker, adaptable to new situations, modest and affable. Mrs. Harding is a queenly woman and highly capable as the first lady of the land. She is actively interested in and assists her favored husband in his affairs.

A man, who has associated with Harding in his publishing business for many years says of his employer and associate, "W. G. is the straightest, fairest, squarest man in the world."

The new president seems to have been particularly happy in his selection of his secretaries. As the Oregonian says, he has surrounded himself with big men, one of whom barely missed the office of president and several of whom are well qualified to fill it.

Evidently the Gresham councilmen are being appealed to by residents to put a limit on the poultry business inside the town limits. This is a hardship on those who are dependent on poultry raising for a part at least of their living income. Poultry raising is an important industry in Gresham and vicinity. It may be regulated so as not to create a nuisance on nearby residents, but all fairness should be exercised toward those who depend upon this industry.

Gresham's bid for the 1925 Atlantic-Pacific Hydro-Electric exposition has gone in to the head of the corporation in the shape of a well written letter calling their attention to the advantages of this location and pledging the cooperation of the Business Men's association.

All Oregon counties as far as reported have come through splendidly with the State Farm Bureau membership drive. Many are over the top. Multnomah should show them next week how to do it up brown.

It is gratifying to see building activities starting in Gresham. Several new houses are in the initial stage and others will have to follow.
