DEHYDRATED SPINACH SAVES LIVES OF BABES

Spinach farmers of the Willamette Valley will this year greatly increase their planted acreage, as the result of the announcement by Dr. J. F. McClendon, of the University of Minnesota, after six years of research, that powdered spinach is highly beneficial in the feeding of infants and children, as well as adults.

As a result of the announcement of Dr. McClendon, one local dehydration plant is preparing greatly to increase its capacity in the production of powdered spinach, which is not subject to botulism, the recently discovered poison which has proved fatal in so many cases. Agents of the dehydration company are advising farmers to increase their spinach acreage. Growers in other states are expected to follow the lead of the Oregon farmers.

Seeking to solve the mysteries of the high mortality rate among infants and children, Dr. McClendon's experiments with dehydrated spinach showed such remarkable results, that he has just announced the outcome of his experiments. In the Jean Martin Brown Home, in St. Paul, Minn., the final tests showed that powdered spinach, in combination with orange juice, was an ideal food, the spinach containing iron and other elements necessary to the building of bone and tissue.

Reporting the result of his final test, Dr. McClendon writes that: "Infants in the home were largely orphans and underfed. By feeding them two teaspoonfuls of powdered spinach and one-twelfth of an ounce of orange juice, we increased their growth rate to about three or four times what it had been previously. The prize baby gained 23 ounces in one week. Even a baby marked with rickets gained in weight."

TWO SCHOONERS. BY BERNARD MULHINE. Dedicated to the Sons and Daughters of the First Schooner.

First came the "Prairie Schooner," bearing the pioneer, Slowly crawling westward, towards the promised land, Freight laden with goods that were his all, And in the wake of oxen team the family came.

He heaved his way through thicket, blazed along, 'Till weary eyes lit on the Golden West, And there amidst the wealth of Nature's gifts Helped to build a State called Oregon. Soon towns and cities grew with swift, amazing pace. The "wild's long call" gave way to settled calm, Then bearing aloft the signal of success, Made fruitful plenty from the conquered soil.

The Second Schooner. Schooner, Ahoy! Mighty Columbia, great Upon thy bosom floats the "Ship of State," Mighty craft, strong with native pine, Sailing from zone to zone, White spreading sails, glistening in the sun, Harks back, reflects the glory of pioneer fight, Showing how he had wrested from the soil That wealth of Nature heretofore untouched. The lofty spars, mindful of their birth, Stood proudly in the blast, Proving their heritage of grand supremacy. As the schooner glided swiftly out upon the sea.
