A GOOD START.

The American people are for peace with the world and for world peace, and there is widespread approval of the good start that has been made at the armament conference in Washington.

It is to be hoped that nothing will spring up out of the darkness which we call future, to interrupt the development of the movement for peace and good will. But let us not forget that there are clouds that may expand in an uncomfortable way.

Japan, finding America and England a unit for limited armament, must make a show of agreement. But Japan is as militaristic as Germany was. Her leaders are warriors by instinct and inheritance and her people—in the mass—are willing followers of those leaders.

Let's come nearer home. The treaty at Paris was agreed to without reckoning with congress which had the final say. Already people are beginning to say that the power of deciding on what our navy shall be is vested by the constitution in congress, and not in the administrators of government. It is declared that neither our armament delegates nor our state department can make any agreement with foreign countries as to the size our navy should be nor can they carry out any promise as to the scrapping of ships.

There has been one distressing example of the results of flaunting congress. It is probable that in view of what has passed, statesmen will avoid another such squabble. We hope there will be no squabble over "peace on earth."

"NOBODY HOME."

A fourteen-year-old girl in New Jersey shot herself dead after her father had given her a whipping. "Such tragedies of sensitive immaturity," says the New York Sun, "seem beyond a remedy."

It does seem so. Of course, a man who will strike a person smaller and weaker than himself is usually looked upon as a coward, and the law, not to speak about outraged spectators has been known to attempt a remedy for cowardice.

But the main idea is this: A grown up person is supposed to have brains. Matured brains, if they are any good at all, can easily exercise mastery over the undeveloped brains of a child and manage that child. Thus, a person who strikes a child publicly admits that his brains are no better than the child's and that it is necessary therefore for him to use brute strength on the young one. Sad to say the law can't give a man brains.

No, there seems to be no remedy when there's "nobody home."

THE GREAT AMERICAN MILKER

Berlin.—The American milch cows which have been distributed through Bavaria are declared to be twice as good milkers as the German cows, greatly to the astonishment of the Bavarian farmers.

The above cable was widely printed in the big city papers a few months ago and the city people no doubt have read it with surprise and patriotic satisfaction.

But there is no surprise in it, for rural town people and farmers who have noted for twenty years the gradual elimination in this country of the "scrub" cattle. The average American dairy farmer discovered long ago that he could breed for more milk, and the result has been a steady upbuilding of herd from the milk production standpoint.

Helping the dairy farmer is the intelligent breeder who knows his Mendel law of heredity well enough to know that the well-bred sons of high milk producing bovine mothers will, if properly bred themselves, be the fathers of cows that will give still more milk than their mothers or grandmothers. As this process of breeding continues, each generation of cows will be better milkers.

America is going to be the greatest dairy country in the world, if it is not so already.

Western States Lead Nation in Education.

Five western states, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, lead the nation in literacy, or, to put it another way, these five states have less illiteracy than any other states of the Union, according to the census figures for 1920. In each of these states illiteracy among the white population amounts to only three-tenths of one per cent. Three other western states tie for the honor of being in the second rank. They are Nevada, Oregon and South Dakota, each with an illiteracy of only four-tenths of one per cent. Arizona led all states in the decade 1910 to 1920 in decreasing its illiteracy. The south, as usual, ranks highest in percentage of illiteracy.

OREGONIANS MAKE RECORD

J. J. Handsaker Finds Oregon Workers In Many Armenian Towns.

Oregonians are making a record in the Near East of which the State will be proud, once the story is known," says J. J. Handsaker, State Director.

"During my summer in Armenia I did not visit a town where there was not an Oregonian at work, or some mark of an Oregonian's doings. At Derindje I found a hut made of packing boxes which I had shipped. At Trebizond, Nellie Cole of Forest Grove, was striving to stem the flood of refugees caused by the Greek and Turkish war. Margaret (Dollie) Hinman of Forest Grove, was in Constantinople, having been expelled from the interior. At Alexandropol we left Mrs. Ethel Long Newman, O. A. C. '20, in charge of the office where there are 7,000 orphan boys. At Erivan I met Nvard Gurdjian, for whom Frances Gage of Portland laid down her life three years ago. Mrs. Amy Burt of Bend told me of how she had rescued 1,000 children at one time.

"I hope to visit every part of the State to tell the story of these heroic Oregonians."

Armenians An Industrial People. Viscount Bryce of England says "The Armenian people are the most industrious, intelligent and generally progressive element in Western Asia. The destruction of half the nation by the Turks has been a terrible blow to civilization. There are still hundreds of thousands of children suffering, and to save these sufferers would be to render a real service and a permanent service to regions that have long suffered from the blight of a barbarous tyranny."

Pullets Need Dry Straw.

Poultrymen should not attempt to economize on straw litter at this time of year. With such unusual wet weather litter will absorb dampness and get soggy quickly. It is a good plan to stir the straw at night, which practice tends to keep the birds active. Clean the litter out each week if necessary as clean, dry straw will promote exercise that helps to fill the eggs basket. It doesn't take many eggs at present prices to pay for a bale of straw.

When removing pies from the oven rest the pie tin on a shallow dish until the pie is cool, instead of setting it directly on the table. Doing this insures having dry and flaky undercrusts.

In stuffing green peppers for baking, if they are oiled first, they will not turn brown in the oven.

Cigarettes in boyhood are about as useful in building up a strong body as dynamite would be in building a house.
