PLEASANT HOME

The Bible school at the Baptist church convenes at 10 o'clock. The B. Y. P. U. will meet at 7 in the evening for devotions. The service of song opens at 8, followed at 8:30 by a sermon by the pastor, the Rev. David Q. Barry, on "The Father of Our Country." Appropriate music will be sung. All are invited to come, ready to do their part on the basis of "Brother Mine."

The lumber is on the ground of the Methodist church which will be used to build an added room in which to care for the children and give them adequate religious education. The oriental method of having every class in one room and everyone making as much noise as possible will be abandoned. The church is equipping itself for service and invites all who are interested to join at the Sunday school hour at 10 o'clock. The pastor will preach next Sunday at 11 o'clock on the topic, "What does God expect of his children?" The evening service at 7:30 will be in charge of Mrs. Alta Stafford. The subject will be, "Moses, the Emancipator of Israel." A large map has been prepared by Mrs. Alta Gentry, on which the wanderings of the people will be traced. On account of much sickness the children will not take part in the evening program, as announced. Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Van Fleet will give an instrumental duet and G. H. Bickford will sing. The evening meetings are growing in numbers and interest. The help of the Powell Valley string band last Sunday evening was much appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lennartz visited today with the J. W. Grasl family at Milwaukie.

The program for the Colonial party to be given by the grade schools in the Orient grange hall next Wednesday evening is in today's Outlook.

KELSO

Between February 14 and 28, there will be conducted throughout the county a campaign to raise funds for the Clackamas County Public Health association to carry on its work. This money is absolutely required to retain the services of the county public health nurse, Miss Hilda Morris, whose work, besides the routine physical inspection of school children, includes visits into the homes and valuable advice to all in need. The aim of the association is to conserve the county's health, and every portion of the county is entitled to the services of the nurse who is trained and fitted for this work. The health nurse may be seen on Saturdays at her office in the courthouse, between the hours of 9 and 1, or communicated with at any time. The quota for this district is only $10. The membership fee is 50 cents. It is hoped that all will rally to the support of a work so vital as that of the public health and especially that of the children. Mrs. Robert Jonsrud has been appointed director of the membership campaign in this district. Jack Rhine of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has arrived for a week's visit at the home of his niece, Mrs. Edward Herz. Mr. Rhine spent several months in Los Angeles before coming here.

Mrs. R. Anderson entertained at a birthday party in honor of her daughter Harriet's 12th birthday.

Mrs. Louise Dietl of Portland, accompanied her brother, Jack Rhine for a few days' visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward Herz.

Work has commenced on the erection of Robert Jonsrud's new residence on his Bluff place. R. C. France, of Sandy, has secured the contract. The woman's club will meet at the home of Mrs. N. C. Peterson on Thursday, February 23.

DAUGHTER OF PIONEER PLANTS MEMORIAL TREE

Mrs. Lydia Taylor Ostrand, daughter of the pioneer resident on old "Staggerweed Mountain" who donated the land for the schoolhouse, known since then as Taylor school, was present at Arbor day exercises last week and planted a tree on the school grounds in memory of her father. On that occasion she read the following original lines:

Friends and neighbors of long ago,
A story I will tell
About this dear old mountain peak
Of which I love so well.

'Tis fifty years ago, or more,
Since first I landed here,
Of all the places I have seen
There's none to me so dear.

I've been all o'er this dear old state,
In the east and in the west,
But of any part of Oregon
Old Staggerweed looks best.

You ask me why I love it,
Why, that's not hard to tell.
'Twas here my dear old mother
In a log house once did dwell.

There's something takes me backward
To the days of sixty-four,
When I see my angel mother's face
Looking from the cabin door.

Though she was not long with us,
It seems, when I am here,
I can hear the voice from heaven
Of those I love so dear.

With brothers and with sisters
I've roamed these dear woods through;
Know every creek and crevice
And every big tree, too.

I love the giant cedar,
The fir, the larch, the pine,
The ash, the oak, the maple,
'Round which honeysuckles twine.

The dogwood tree is beautiful,
The hazel, too, I love,
The syringa and the balm tree
With fragrance from above.

Let's not forget the Oregon grape,
For that's our own state flower.
'Tis found all over Oregon
In every shady bowg.

Now, friends, there is much in my life
That I would like to tell,
But I've another mission
So on this I will not dwell.

This being Arbor Day
Is the reason why I came
To plant this stately poplar
In my dear father's name.

'Twas he who first donated
This little strip of land
To build a rural schoolhouse—
And may it ever stand.

I have but one petition
To ask of you today,
To let the name of Taylor School
To it forever stay.

CLACKAMAS BUREAU

Tuesday of every month at the schoolhouse.

Last Friday some of the local potato growers called out Walter Holt, county agent, to give lectures on potatoes and some of their worst diseases. In his address he emphasized the fact that at the Oregon City Farmers Week, the Clackamas county farmers had almost unanimously voted the Burbank and American Wonder potatoes as standard leaders. He asserted that it would be one of the most important steps towards a never-failing market for choice Clackamas potatoes if farmers would standardize on these two varieties, get them certified, keep on improving them by some method of hill selection, and by controlling, if not eliminating, the destructive diseases. Mr. Holt was very much enthused by the success of the Clark county, Washington, potato growers, who had 90 per cent of Burbanks out of a total of 60 carloads sold. Those men are getting the name of reliable Burbank association, and Clackamas county will soon be as much of a prosperous seed potato growing section as Clark county, if the growers standardize and improve their potatoes. The possibility of an overdoing of the growing of a high-class seed potato is very remote, Mr. Holt said. In the first place the southern markets, such as California, and Texas, cannot raise a reliable seed because of fungus diseases, beetles and the like. Then Yakima and other northern irrigation districts must buy non-irrigated seed, which they cannot raise themselves. Then again there is always a limited number of growers who diligently keep their high-class potatoes on a superior level, where they are eagerly absorbed by a never-failing demand at fancy prices. A grower near Oregon City had a quantity of select, but by no means certified seed potatoes, and just recently sold them for $2.25 to $2.50 per hundred, which is just 40 per cent above current market price. And as Mr. Holt expresses himself, "He who gets into the game now, will be three jumps ahead of the others and the reward will be accordingly."

This address Mr. Holt delivered in Ramser's potato cellar, and thereupon many of those present expressed themselves as favoring a local potato certification club, and desired to standardize on not over three or four varieties.

Potato diseases were also dwelt upon, and but few traces of rizoctonia and fusarium wilt were found in all the bins visited that afternoon. These diseases besides black leg and mosaic were briefly discussed, also the use of corrosive sublimate encouraged for the checking of rizoc, scab, etc., and the growers were again encouraged to apply for certification, because thus diseases can best be detected and checked, which may mean an increase of 20 to 50 per cent in the crop. From Ramser's the interested growers followed Mr. Holt to inspect Mr. Schwedler's Pride of Multnomah, of which the owner is quite proud, and then to Louie Hoffmeister's bin, where a surprise awaited us. There were two bins side by side. At first sight one seemed to be culls, and the other the sorted tubers. But Louie explained differently. The supposed sorted bin was grown from home grown hill selected seed, the bin containing the general field run. The other bin, which seemed to be culls was grown from purchased seed which was claimed to be select. The moral: Improve your own seed; it is cheaper, and then you know what you have.

Oran Lingle has a small bin of choice Wonders, but none for sale. He also has quite an amount of White Rose left. During the entire afternoon Mrs. Lingle's boys' potato club was present, and took in all the lectures and they, besides the 15 or so growers present, were well repaid for their time. More such meetings are planned, when it is time to rogue the fields for certification.
