About 50 Grangers and their families gathered at Columbia Grange Saturday evening, honoring James Benfield, who is to leave very soon for Canada to make that place his home for a time at least, if not permanently. Mr. Benfield had not heard of the affair which had been previously planned and was invited by his brother Lewis to go to the hall in the evening, being told a few friends were going to play cards there for awhile. Imagine his surprise when he reached the hall to hear sweet strains of music from an orchestra composed of Mr. and Mrs. Tregaskis and daughter and Francis Henkle, and the hall filled with his friends and fellow Grangers. The evening was very happily spent in visiting and dancing and singing.

Lawrence Anderson played several selections on the piano during the evening. At about 12 o'clock the crowd was called to the dining room where a banquet was spread and the seat of honor reserved at the head of the table for Mr. Benfield. A huge cake on his right bore the words in fancy letters, "Good Luck, Jim". Speeches were made by A. S. Woodward and A. R. Morgan in which they endeavored to express, on behalf of Columbia Grange, their appreciation of his work in the Grange and during the two years he was master of the organization. Mr. Benfield responded in his pleasing fluent way and after a couple of hours spent in visiting and jollity, a chorus gathered around the piano and sang "God be with you till we meet again." Thus ended an evening long to be remembered.
