GRADE SCHOOL NOTES.

By G. S. REPORTER.
A special assembly will be held Thursday, April 27 at 10 o'clock to honor U. S. Grant's 100th anniversary. The local post of G. A. R. will be present in a body and members will address the assembly. The school will give a patriotic program of songs and readings, also the girls' glee club will sing. Patrons and visitors are invited to come and join with us in this patriotic exercise. The eighth grade exemption tests have been postponed from April 27 to May 2. The eight grade pupils from several schools will be here to take the examinations on that date. Much interest is being shown in the spring pageant. This will be given during the last week of school.

The exact date will be given later. Every boy and girl of the school will have some part in the pageant, and are looking forward to it with delight.

A meeting of the Parent-Teacher association will be held Wednesday, May 3 at 7:30 p. m. Matters of much interest will be taken up and a speaker of prominence is being secured for the evening. Come out and be with us.

PLOW UNEARTHS STILL BURIED IN GROUND

While plowing a piece of ground last Saturday on the old Dan Talbot place, L. Crumb unearthed a moonshine still. A coil and condenser, that from all appearances were used about two months ago, were dug up.

The land on which the still was found is owned by Mike Kehrl. He bought 20 acres from Wendle Cleveland about six months ago including the farm buildings. He has not, however, been living there. An old chicken house had stood where the still was found but had been torn down since Mr. Kehrl purchased it. It was thought that removing the building had caused the owners of the still to lose track of it.

Mr. Crumb notified M. M. Squire of his find, who took it to Portland and turned it over to the sheriff's office.

FORMER FAIRVIEW BOY INJURED LAST SUNDAY

Harold Shaw, 17 year old son of Grant Shaw of Portland, formerly of Fairview, was seriously injured on last Sunday afternoon in an accident on the Sandy boulevard in front of the Earl Townsend home near Fairview. The accident occurred after the boy, who was riding east on a motorcycle had passed an automobile going in the same direction. He was struck by a west bound car and thrown to the pavement and the car which he had just passed ran over him. An ambulance was called and the injured boy was taken to Good Samaritan hospital in Portland, where it was found that he had suffered a compound fracture of the left leg between the knee and ankle and a severe scalp wound, with possibly other injuries.

Harold is the grandson of Mrs. H. M. Shaw and the nephew of Mrs. Leslie St. Clair of Gresham.

Growers will not need to fear the vetch aphid as much as usual if early indications hold true. The severe winter seems to have destroyed most of these troublesome pests.

Why Friction and Washboard Methods Are Out of Date

The first cleaning of clothing by a wet or washing method was done in the running water of a river. The women of primitive peoples carried their soiled garments to the edge of a stream, and either held or fastened them down with a rock, while they allowed the action of the water to wash out the dirt. Then the women gradually discovered that laying the clothing on a smooth stone, and pounding with another rock or flat stick seemed to remove the dirt more easily. The next step was to build out into the river a sloping, narrow platform, and rub the wash on this wooden surface. Soon they made grooves or ridges in these platforms, and thus was evolved the modern popular "washboard"—which today is as much of a discarded antique as tallow dips and warning pans!

All of these early and traditional methods were based on the idea of friction, either by rubbing the pieces on a board or pounding them with some form of paddle. This rub-a-dub-dub method persisted for centuries, not because it was the best way to remove soil from clothing, but because no one, until recent times, studied to find some new and more efficient washing principles.

Just as for thousands of years people cooked their food by holding it on a stick over a bed of hot coals, because more advanced methods of using an iron range or an electric grill had not been discovered, so too, women everywhere have followed the old drudgery washboard-friction habit of washing because the wonderful, labor-saving methods of machine washing were not yet perfected.
